| Darwin was born in Michigan to parents from New York in July of 1846, last of the four children of Orlando and Maria Eliza Forsyth. Henry, his only brother, was born two years earlier and enlisted on August 15, 1862, as a private in Company F of the Fifth Michigan Cavalry. Along with three other Michigan regiments, the Fifth made up the Michigan Cavalry Brigade. The Brigade was a significant part of the 5000 man force under General Kilpatrick that went in March of 1864 on a raid of Richmond, Virginia. They were able to breach the outer defenses of Richmond, but the inner defenses were too well defended by artillery. Henry was taken prisoner during this effort on March fourth. He died of disease as a prisoner of war at Andersonville, Georgia, on August 28, 1864. Margaret was born in Michigan to parents from New York in 1844 or early in 1845, and she married Darwin about 1873. Their children were born in Michigan: Stella in August of 1874, Harry in May of 1877, Fanny about 1879, and Frank in September of 1883. Forsyth & Company succeeded Charles E. Lewis in Flint, with Darwin as sole proprietor. Forsyth & Hickock advertised "First-Class Work and Satisfaction Guaranteed. Large Work a Specialty. STUDIO, over Genesee County Savings Bank,..." Some of Darwin's cabinet imprints of the mid 1880s include: "... over Genesee County Savings Bank..." He resided in Flint while he worked for Moody R. Freeman in Detroit. By 1900 Darwin was a widower sharing his home with a daughter, two sons, and a housekeeper. Ida was born in New York State to Scottish parents in 1870, and when she married Darwin in 1905 or 1906 she brought along her 17-year-old son who took the surname Forsyth. Around 1920, Darwin's studio address was sometimes listed as 527 ½ South Saginaw Street. |           | 11 33 44443 111 ff mm tt dd 111 22 |

| Frank was born in Michigan on September 4, 1883, last of the four children of Darwin H. and Margaret Forsyth. He grew up in the home of a professional photographer. His partner in 1905, James Merrill, had recently been a student at the Illinois College of Photography at Effingham, Illinois. Isabell was born in England in 1895 or early in 1896, immigrated in 1907, and married Frank when she was 17 years old. Their children (Ralph, Margaret and Dorothy) were born in Canada between 1913 and 1919. The family came to the United States in 1928. | Harry was born in Michigan on March 20, 1877, second of the four children of Darwin H. and Margaret Forsyth. He grew up in the home of a professional photographer, and probably was working in 1900 for his father. Harriet was born in Michigan to a Canadian father and a mother from New York early in 1877, and she married Harry when they both were 29 years old. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Julia early in 1907, Virginia in June of 1908, Elizabeth in 1912, and Harriet in May of 1916. Virginia died as a child. It was noted in 1918 that Harry had lost an arm. It looks as if Harry encouraged his brother Frank to come to North Tonawanda. His father came from Indiana and Eugene was born in Minnesota to a mother from Delaware on July 30, 1857, the only child of William N. and Elizabeth (Wilson) Fortune. William enrolled in Company A of the 99th Illinois Infantry at Pittsfield on July 28, 1862. He was mustered into the Union Army as a private on August 23, 1862. William was wounded in action on May 22, 1863, at Vicksburg, Mississippi, and he died of these wounds on June 1, 1863. Elizabeth applied for and received a Widow's Pension. Ida Cameron was born in Michigan to a father from New York and a Canadian mother on March 19, 1861, and she married Eugene when she was 18 years old. Their son Guy was born in Michigan in September of 1882. "E. W. FORTUNE, ART GALLERY. Fremont Center, Mich. All Work Promptly Attended To. NEGATIVES PRESERVED." was printed boldly on the back of some cabinet mounts. "From E. W. FORTUNE, Photographer, Fremont, Mich." was stamped on the back of the 8 by 10 inch mount of a 7 ½ by 9 ½ print of a homestead with seven adults and one child standing in front of the house. Eugene and Ida observed their golden wedding anniversary in 1930, and Ida lived on at Los Angeles until June 22, 1946.

His parents came from New York, and Frank was born in Michigan in July of 1844. Her parents came from Vermont, and Jennie was born in Ohio in January of 1851. They married in May of 1870 and raised one child. One of Frank's Hillsdale galleries was in the Commercial Block. Four different Hillsdale imprints describe him as a "PHOTOGRAPHER, and Dealer in all kinds and sizes of Oval and Square Frames... Pictures of all kinds framed to order and at prices that defy competition." By 1910 Frank's wife was known as Louisa, and she was working with him as a retoucher. In 1930 she was a widow living in Colorado with her married daughter.

Frederick was born on July 27, 1813, at Bridport, Vermont, one of the nine children of Moses and Betsy (Goodwin) Foster. His grandfather was a Lieutenant in the Revolutionary War and his father fought in the War of 1812. When he was seven his family moved to Crown Point, New York, and when he was older he worked in edge tool and ax factories in this area. He married Miss Lucinda Lumbard on September 23, 1839. He came to Jackson in May of 1842 with his brother Henry, and they went into business together. Lucinda died in June of 1844, leaving a son. Frederick sold his interest in the pump business to Henry in 1846 and spent two years working from Jackson as an itinerant daguerreian in an area including southwestern Michigan, northeastern Indiana, and northern Ohio. In February of 1848 he opened the first permanent daguerreotype gallery in Jackson. He advertised as a daguerreotypist in the Jackson American Citizen beginning on February 20, 1848, and continuing into 1850. Harriet M. Cook was born in Ohio in the summer of 1817, and she married Frederick in September of 1849, about the time he started studying dentistry. Their daughter Sarah was born in 1850 or early in 1851, and their son Horace was born in January of 1855. Frederick was identified as a fire and life insurance agent in 1870. Both children were living with their parents in 1880, and Harriet lived until July of 1881. Frederick was active in the volunteer fire department, and served as a supervisor, alderman, recorder and treasurer in Jackson. He joined the I.O.O.F. in 1844, and became one of the leading Odd Fellows of the state. He was ill for nearly a year prior to his death from dropsy of the heart at the home of his daughter on July 6, 1895.

His photographer father came from New York and John was born at Adrian in October of 1847, the elder son of 1
Julius A. and Anna M. Foster. He still was living with his parents in 1865. Frank W. Carpenter succeeded John as A t photographer in Adrian about 1871. Her parents came from Vermont, Marion was born in Canada in March of 1852, t 1
she married John in 1887 or 1888, and they never had children. Some of John's Detroit employees were: artist Charles 1 d
F. Conklin in 1881; retoucher Miss Isabella Cameron in 1882 and 1885; photographer Miss Flora E. Smith in 1883; d
photographer Erymer E. DeForest in 1890; artist Frank C. Bracy in 1890 and 1891; photographer Harry E. Tallman in d 1894 and 1895; and John E. Johnson, photographer in 1896 and clerk from 1901 through 1903. Between 1893 and d 1906 the studio address was often listed as 101, 103 and 105 Michigan Avenue. By 1893 John was employing from d 2 three to five assistants and specializing in photographic enlargements in platinum by solar and electric light for artists, 2 art students and photographers. He had obtained an exclusive license for the use of the platinum process in Detroit 2 from the patentees, Messrs. Willis & Clements of Philadelphia. He supplied the platinum prints at prices competitive 2 with the silver prints of others, claiming that they would not fade, that they were remarkable for the purity of their 2 whites and the richness of their blacks, and that they were suitable for any kind of work, particularly crayon and 2 coloring. Frank P. Ford was the proprietor of the Foster Photo Enlarging Company at 103 Michigan Avenue in 1907. 2 d

Julius was born in New York State in 1824. Anna M. White was born in Michigan in July of 1827, and she married Julius about 1846. Their son John is the subject of the preceding entry. Their son Charles was born in November of 1859 and died as a child. Julius advertised that his photographic business was established in 1847. In 1859 his gallery was over L. G. Berry & Company's Bank on the south west corner of Main and Maumee Streets, where he took pictures in cloudy as well as in clear weather. He probably was employing artist Charles Cornell in 1860. In 1862 he claimed to have amassed a small fortune which enabled him to sell Double Glass Ambrotypes in Cases FOR TWENTY CENTS, and the best style riveted hinge Union Cases FOR 75 CENTS. Some back marks place Julius' gallery over W. H. Stone & Company's Bank, where he was succeeded by E. B. Gaylord about 1865. Julius returned to photography in 1876 by succeeding Carpenter & Hall in the Underwood Block, where all photographs were retouched and burnished in the neatest style and all kinds of small pictures were enlarged to any size desired. About 1880 he moved across the street to rooms over A. B. Park's dry goods store in Carey's Block on the south east corner of Maumee and Main Streets, with an entrance just east of Waldby & Clay's Bank. Here negatives taken during the past eight years were in good preservation and duplicates were furnished on short notice. Enlarging of all kinds of small pictures to any size desired was among his specialties in this period. In 1882 he claimed: "... My new quick working instrument and new accessories together with first-class workmen, gives me the best facilities for making ARTISTIC WORK of any gallery in the county. In my Copying and Enlarging Department I employ only the best and most experienced workmen, and my INDIA INK, OIL, PASTEL & CRAYON WORK can not be equaled in the West..." He employed photographer Charles F. Hawkins in 1882 and 1885, and photographer A. M. Ketcham in 1885. Julius claimed in 1883 to be the photographer "... oldest in business in southern Michigan. I investigate all new ideas and adopt all that are meritorious. I am the only Photographer in Adrian who is successfully using THE EMULSION DRY PLATE PROCESS, by which pictures are taken instantaneously, or in less than ONE SECOND; no matter how many are sitting in a group, a complete natural picture is guaranteed. All styles of old pictures enlarged and made as natural as taken from life ... those having old Daguerreotypes that they wish having copied or enlarged, will find it to their interest to bring said work to me, as I am the only artist in Adrian who has EVER made the Daguerreotype." Some of his cabinet photographs were excellent copies of daguerreotypes. Stereoscopic views of Adrian published by book seller Charles Humphrey were blind stamped "J. A. Foster, MFR., Adrian, Mich." He advertised in 1885: "FOSTER the photographer that has been called the notorious counterfeiter of the human race, his work is so natural and perfect. - BEST WORK, LOWEST PRICES..... Two galleries, Underwood Block and 4 East Maumee, south side. Has all the Spencer Negatives." 1, 3, 5 and 7 East Maumee Street were in the Underwood Block. The photographers David H. Spencer and then George E. Spencer occupied this Adrian gallery from 1880 until 1885. Julius A. Foster died on August 21, 1893. His widow Anna was living in Ann Arbor Township in 1900 with her brother Henry and his wife.

Sol was born in Canada on September 8, 1883, third of the four sons of David Montague and Rebecca Angeline (Moore) Foster. His family immigrated to the United States in 1887, and the children became American citizens when David was naturalized while they were minors. Rebecca seems to have died, and David married a lady from Vermont named Adeline about 1889. She was helping in 1900 to raise four teenagers, Sol and his brothers George and Argo plus an adopted daughter Lida. Mabel was born in Michigan in 1881, and she married Sol about 1905. Their children were born here: Earl (later Francis) in June of 1908, Helen in 1911, and Bernard in 1914. On the negative of a post card photograph of a whaleback freighter aground was lettered: "STR. ATIKOKEN AT MARINE CITY. 8\17\13. SOL. copr. Sol M. Foster, Marine City, Mich., 1913." The same "SOL" was lettered on the negative of a postal photograph of a fire which consumed an Anchorville church in 1917. Sol was a tall man in 1918, with blue eyes and dark brown hair. He was working for Fred H. Holmes in 1918, was operating his own drug store in 1920, and was back working as an employee in 1930.

Alfred was born in Ohio on June 11, 1881, the only child of Charles and Helen (Brink) Fowler. He matured into a medium sized man with blue eyes and brown hair. Lula Mae was born in Ohio in 1879, and she married Alfred about 1902. Their daughter Helen was born in Ohio in 1903. The rest of their children were born in Michigan: George in 1905 or 1906, Charles in 1907, Vesta in January of 1909, Catherine in 1912, and James in April of 1918. "FOWLER" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs along with such legends as: "PELLSTON SCHOOL HOUSE. 880" and "G. R. & I. STATION, PELLSTON. 2873" and "G. R. & I. ENG. #4, PELLSTON. 2882." Some of these had "FOLEY STUDIO, PETOSKEY, MICH." printed on their backs, and others were postmarked in the summer of 1915. "Beebe & Fowler" or "B.B. & FOWLER" or "B & F" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of scenes in Alba, Bellaire, and Elk Rapids. These words were hand lettered, perhaps on a blackboard, and reproduced photographically so as to cover the front of a post card:

"YES. WE CAN PLEASE YOU WITH OUR WORK,

Frank was born at Middletown, Indiana, on October 24, 1892, the only child of Austin A. and Rose M. Fowler. He became tall and slender with blue eyes and light brown hair, and was in the Indiana National Guard for three years. Mildred was born in Michigan in 1894, and she married Frank about 1911. Their daughters Ellen and Margaret were born in Michigan between 1912 and 1914. Both Mildred and Frank were restaurant cooks in 1920. From limited evidence, it looks as if Frank died and Mildred then married and divorced a man named Marlow. She was cooking in a restaurant and providing a home for her daughters in 1930.

George was born in New York in June of 1850, and did not marry until 1880. Ward B. Flower came to Charlotte in March of 1884, when he and George became partners. Some cabinet mounts reversed the order of the names to "Flower & Fowler." Mrs. Anna E. Fowler maintained a separate photographic gallery during this period, and George was also listed as a "Portrait and Animal Painter. Work in Oils, Crayon, Ink and Water Color." Mr. & Mrs. Fowler ran a similar advertisement a couple of years later. Some of George's cabinet mounts had the year (1889, 1891, 1892-93 or 1893) printed on them along with: "More Photos like this can be had at any time. ENLARGING PICTURES a specialty IN ANY STYLE which is permanent and first-class..." or "Special Attention given to all kinds of Portraiture in Crayon, Ink, Oil or Water Color..." Another imprint was: "... Our Negatives are carefully preserved, from which PERMANENT BROMIDE PICTURES, Any size, can be made at a low price. All kinds of PICTURES ENLARGED, and finished in any style. AIR BRUSH PORTRAITS in Ink and Water Colors a Specialty. Oil Portraits painted direct from life, if desired. ALL WORK GUARANTEED..." The Bellevue studio was undoubtedly a branch of the Charlotte business, such as the Olivet studio was called later. A photograph which George exhibited at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893 was awarded Second Prize in Class E. He was identified as a Charlotte photo supply dealer in 1895. When the Michigan Photographers' Association was organized on January 15, 1895, George was elected president of the organization. He exhibited some interior views from Charlotte at the Detroit convention of the Photographers' Association of America early in August of 1895. In 1896 his views about the best colors for mounts, larger mounts for cabinet photos, showcase backgrounds and contents, effective advertising, photographing babies, Sunday work and the value of photographic journals were published. George had an incandescently lighted showcase featuring his framed large work which was lowered at night to street level so as to block off the stairway which led only to his studio. During the second annual meeting of the Michigan Photographers' Association at Detroit in February of 1897, George was awarded the first prize in Class E for his exhibit of six Paris Panels and six cabinet photos, and the third prize in Class H for his six interior pictures, each seven inches and over. He advertised nationally in the spring of 1898: "For Sale - Two galleries; leading gallery in city of 5,000, county seat, best location, north light; another in Olivet, Mich., college town; sell both together or separate; bargains. Address G. H. FOWLER, Charlotte, Mich." He advertised locally in 1899: "BEST PHOTOS - all sizes from Button to life size. HOME GROUPS - day or night. VIEWS - exterior or interior. ENLARGEMENTS. We wish to call attention to our PORTRAIT WORK. We have and are doing the best class of this kind of work in the county or in this part of the state. What we do not have time to do we employ done by artists of known reputation - so our patrons can be assured of getting just what they pay for, and the best for the money. Our prices are in harmony with the quality desired from one dollar up... We wish to call special attention to our New Style MEDALLIONS. Four sizes, 4 1/2 to 7 1/2 inches. Water Proof and Permanent." Mrs. Anna E. Fowler was identified as a principal of Fowler's Studio on some cabinet mounts, and as a partner in G. H. Fowler & Company in the gazetteer for 1901. George was reported late in 1903 to be building himself a new studio on North Washington Avenue in Battle Creek which he expected to open within a few weeks. He was still an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. In 1915 he advertised: "Home Photography and Enlargements, Any Kind of High Grade Photo, Negatives Made by Appointment Only, Original Paintings in Oil, Awards from State and National Photo Associations." In 1917 this was shortened to: "Home Portraits and Enlargements and Original Paintings in Oil."

Fowler, Ransom A.

- Fenton Township student ..... 1900 1
Fenton PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1909-1915 t 2
His grandparents all came from New York and Ransom was born to natives of Michigan on August 18, 1889, at Muir, Michigan. He was one of the three children of John W. and Emma Jenny Fowler, and his sister Gladys was born in Michigan in July of 1893. Ransom grew up on the family farm, and he graduated from Linden High School in 1905. 1 3
He then was employed by a cement plant near Fenton as chief electrician for a year before he went to Big Rapids as a student in the Ferris Institute. He may have spent some time in New York before joining his father in opening a garage at Flint. Luella Marion was born in New York State in 1891, and she married Ransom on December 20, 1909. "Photo by R. A. Fowler" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of a window display by a Fenton store during the Christmas season of 1909. Luella gave birth in Michigan to Ransom (later Adelbert) in 1911, and to Kenneth in July of 1914. He and his father sold the garage business, and Ransom took flying lessons from O. E. Williams. In 1914 and 1915 he took photographs of the graduating classes of the O. E. Williams School of Aviation lined up in front of one of the aircraft at Fenton. The school taught the construction of aircraft as well as flying, and by August of 1917 Ransom had helped to build three biplanes and was working on a fourth. He had test flown the third plane from the Harry Baker farm south of Flint on August 24 in preparation for exhibition flights the following week at Windsor and other Canadian cities. Ransom and his mechanic returned to the farm on August 25 for further test flights. He was flying at 100 to 150 feet above a cornfield when a down-draft caught the plane and it crashed into the ground. Ransom apparently jumped from the biplane before it hit the earth, but he was seriously injured. He died from his injuries on August 30, 1917. He was one of the twelve instructors and students of the Williams School whose lives were lost in the development of aviation. 3 2

Carrie was born in New York in 1849 or 1850, and married Charles A. Fox when she was twenty years old. They had two children, both living in 1900 and both gone by 1910. Note that Charles was a Capac photographer from 1890 to 1895. Photographs in the post card format embossed: "FOX STUDIO, MANISTEE, MICH." included a young lady sitting on the traditional paper moon and a toddler standing on a chair. "RIVER STREET, Manistee, Mich. July Fourth, 1910." and "By MRS. CARRIE FOX, MANISTEE, MICH." were press printed on the face of post card photographs of a parade. A caption was similarly printed on a postal photo of the Home for Aged Women in Manistee. Carrie was a widow by 1920. Elfreda or Elfrieda Graefe was proprietor of the Fox Photo Shop at 406 River Street in 1922. An 81-year-old widow named Carrie Fox was an inmate in 1930 of the Home for Aged Women at Binghamton, New York. 1 2 1 1

Charles was born in New York State in 1849 or 1850, and he married Carrie twenty years later. In January of 1891 both of these notices appeared in the same Capac newspaper: "Wade & Anderson, photographers of Romeo, Mich., have arranged to visit this place every Thursday to do work." and "C. A. Fox says that he will work Romeo for his photograph business at $2.00 per dozen, which is his present price. He will exhibit samples of his work in the Romeo postoffice. He believes in Carrying the War into the enemy's Camp." One week later the paper announced: "$1.50 will buy one dozen Cabinet photographs of yourself every Thursday until further notice. All work warranted to be first-class. Remember, Thursday is the only day you can get pictures for this price. - C. A. Fox." A few months later he ran a less belligerent advertisement: "Call on C. A. Fox and get a dozen Cabinet photographs for $2.00 or a dozen Sunbeams for 50¢. He will satisfy you." Eugene was born on August 17, 1891, at St. Louis, Missouri, the elder son of John A. and Minnie Francisco. His brother Paul was born in August of 1899. Eugene became a medium sized man with dark eyes and brown hair. Mabel I. Card was born in Missouri in 1891, married Eugene about 1912, and gave birth to Jack in Missouri in 1913 and to Eleanor in Michigan in 1914. Eugene was a nephew of Mrs. Alford S. Lyndon. He was sole proprietor of Lyndon & Company in 1924 and 1925, but Alford S. Lyndon was back as his partner in 1926. Harvey E. Boyce was associated with Eugene from 1926 through 1945. A circular stamp with "FRANCISCO-BOYCE PHOTO CO., ANN ARBOR, MICH. SPARKLESTONE PRINT" was applied to the back of some snapshots. Beginning in 1938 the Francisco-Boyce Photo Company operated from both of the locations listed above. Eleanor C. Francisco was a branch manager for the company in 1938. Eugene died in May of 1964 and his widow, Mrs. Mabel I. Francisco, was living in Ann Arbor in 1965.

Harry was born at Mount Pleasant to Charles and Mabel Francisco on August 10, 1891. Miss Lillian Belle Alexander was born in Michigan in 1890, came from Gaylord to marry Harry in 1910, and gave birth to a son in 1911 and to a daughter in 1913. Note that Harry's brother-in-law, Vernon Van Wie, was a Mount Pleasant photographer from 1906 to 1911. Harry's photographic business was begun in a wooden building in approximately the same location that the Francisco Studio occupied in 1944. "H. H. FRANCISCO, PHOTOGRAPHER, MT. PLEASANT, MICH." was printed on the backs of post card photographs including views of the Michigan Condensed Milk Company factory, the Catholic Church and the Chippewa River. "Photo - FRANCISCO - Mt. Pleasant, Mich." was lettered on the negatives of postal portraits of a steer that seems to have been named "Mac Reckard". Harry was stout with blue eyes and light brown hair, was affectionately known as Poddy, and spent much of his leisure time fishing and hunting or wood working novelty nicknacks for his home or office. Although his health was bad for his last two years, he remained active in business until eight weeks before his death on August 14, 1944. He was survived by his wife, his mother, a daughter, a son and a granddaughter. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery. Harrison A. Francisco, the son, took over the photographic business when he returned from the army and maintained it until he retired in 1973. The Clarke Historical Library has a large collection of photographs and negatives from the Francisco studio.

Henry (often H. E.) was fourth of the eight children and the second son of Benjamin and Rachel Jane (Earls) Francisco, and was born in Tompkins County, New York, on January 6, 1837. The family moved in the fall of 1848 to Barry County, Michigan. H. E. left home in 1854 for Grass Lake where he worked on farms during the summers and attended school during the winters until 1857, when he entered the Kalamazoo Baptist Institute. Three years later he transferred to the Kalamazoo Commercial Institute for a year before engaging in the ambrotype business, in which he cleared $1000 in one year. Frances A. (sometimes Frank) Babbitt was born in Niagara County, New York, on August 12, 1834, eldest of the four daughters of Grass Lake pioneers Levi and Lucy Babbitt. She married H. E. on April 3, 1861, and their only daughter was born in January of 1862 and lived less than a year. The Franciscos lived east of the village of Grass Lake until 1876, then traveled the western states for six months before purchasing a 200-acre farm south of the village. John was born in Michigan in January of 1884 and Minnie was born here in February of 1888. Both were adopted by Henry and Frances some time prior to 1900, and both took the surname Francisco. Henry was the 1900 census enumerator in his district. He was married for the second time about 1907 to a widow who became Mrs. D. A. Francisco. By 1920 Henry was a widower living with the family of his adopted daughter and her husband.

Ernst was born at Kuernbach, Baden, Germany, on September 11, 1829, the son of Rev. Johann Heinrich and Auguste Dorothea Charlotte Frank. He came to the United States in 1851 and helped on the farm of his brothers and sisters near Saginaw for six months before taking a job in the optical trade which he had learned in Germany. On October 20, 1859, he married Emma Scheurmann, who was born in Baden in February of 1840. Not all of their eleven children reached maturity. They were providing a home in 1880 for Otelia, Bella, Emma, Wilhelmina, Ernest, Bertha and Martha. Ernest, Bertha and Martha were born between June of 1875 and September of 1879, and they still were at home in 1900. Ernst began selling insurance in the 1870s. He sold wines, liquors and cigars, and was an agent for ocean steamship lines and foreign passage until the insurance business grew to demand his full attention. He was treasurer of the city for two periods of four years each, deputy postmaster, township supervisor and a member of the school board.

Frank was born at Chicago, Illinois, to German parents on March 21, 1892. He was a slender single man with grey eyes and dark brown hair in 1917, and 5½ inches of bone had been removed from one of his legs. Florence was born in Illinois to German parents in 1900 or early in 1901, and she married Paul when she was 18 years old. Their daughters Charlotte and Lorraine were born in Illinois between 1919 and 1924. "Vineyard near Keeler, Mich." was written on the negative of a photograph which had "GENUINE PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEW, PHOTO BY PAUL H. FRANK, SISTER LAKES, MICH." printed on its post card back. The card was mailed in August of 1922.

Harold was born at Altona, Michigan, on March 29, 1887, the son of Hugh and Hila M. Fraser. He became a tall man with blue eyes and brown hair. He advertised with the same words that James A. Butler had used two years earlier: "Commercial Photographer, flashlights, portraits, enlarging, amateur finishing, equipped with Seavey Window and Rex Washer." Harold was inducted into the army at Detroit on July 15, 1918, trained at Michigan Agricultural College in East Lansing, and was assigned to Repair Unit 307 of the Motor Transport Corps on September 13, 1918. He shipped overseas on October 20 and was promoted to sergeant on February 1, 1919. He returned to the United States for demobilization on October 12, and was honorably discharged on October 18, 1919. Gertrude was born in Michigan to an English mother in 1890 or early in 1891, and probably was the daughter of David and Emma McCollin. She and Harold married about 1926.

William was born about 1823 in Sussex County, New Jersey. Phebe was born in New Jersey in 1824, and she married William about 1844. Their son Lyman was born in New Jersey in 1846 and died as a child. Their daughter Hattie was born in Michigan about 1858. William was 5 feet 8½ or 9 inches tall with a fair complexion, dark blue eyes and brown hair when he enlisted as First Sergeant in Company A of the Fifth Michigan Cavalry at Romeo on August 14, 1862. The regiment left Detroit on December 4, 1862, for Washington, D. C., where it was assigned to the Michigan Cavalry Brigade along with the First, Sixth and Seventh Michigan Cavalry. William was mustered as Second Lieutenant of Company K on December 16, 1862. He was honorably discharged as a Supernumerary Second Lieutenant on March 24, 1863. Something happened to Phebe and William was married at Ortonville on April 1, 1880, to Miss Emma J. Predmore of Romeo, who was born in New Jersey on July 13, 1846. Their daughter Cora was born in 1881 or 1882. William applied for an Invalid Pension in 1888, but apparently did not qualify for it until 1898. He died at Romeo on April 1, 1899. Emma received a Widows Pension until her death on June 27, 1930, at the Romeo home of her daughter, Cora B. Frazer.

Freeland, View Artist" with no location specified was stamped on the backs of plain buff 8 by 10 inch mounts carrying views of groups of mostly unpainted simple commercial buildings facing directly onto railroad tracks. The same stamp was applied to some cabinet mounts, including several of well-dressed men seated on logs out in the woods. "Freeland & Baker, 1895, Aristo Finish" or "Freeland, 1896, Aristo Finish" or "Freeland, 1897, Aristo Finish" was printed on other cabinets, again without specifying a location. Walter's intended move from Bad Axe to Pigeon was reported in April of 1898. A blind stamp consisting of "Freeland" in script over "PIGEON, MICH." in smaller block letters was used on post card photographs of street scenes in Caseville, Mayville and Pigeon with postmarks ranging from 1907 to 1916, as well as portraits of a teacher which she gave to her students after adding a couple of inspirational sentences. "Copyrighted by W. B. Freeland, Pigeon, Mich." was added in various ways to the negatives of bird's-eye views, street scenes and other photographs postmarked between 1910 and 1914. Failing eyesight forced Walter to retire from photography, and he sold his Pigeon studio to D. C. Miller of Sebawaing early in the spring of 1917. The prospect of eventually becoming blind preyed on his mind, and he became despondent. He repeatedly threatened suicide, and on Tuesday morning, May 22, 1917, his threats became a reality. Walter hung himself in a box car standing on a railroad siding. Zelma was living in 1920 with her parents, Melvin and Julia Stower.

His father came from New Hampshire and Dorus was born in New York in June of 1848, last of the five or more sons of Healy and Lydia Freeman. He grew up on the family farm and entered the photographic business in New York State about 1870. Margaret was born in New York to German parents in March of 1852, and she married Dorus about 1880. He maintained a studio at Blissfield from 1882 until he retired in 1932. They had no children but seem to have adopted Ethel, who was born in New York in April of 1894. Something happened to Margaret, and Dorus was raising thirteen-year-old Ethel when he was married for the second time about 1907. His bride was Mrs. Eleanor M. Glaser, an Ohio-born widow with three mature children who usually was called Ella. His studio was on Adrian Street in 1915, when his advertising was for Photos in Platinum and Platino. Dorus was ill for six months prior to his death on September 2, 1936, and burial was in Pleasant View Cemetery. Eleanor survived until March 29, 1938.

His parents emigrated from England, and Moody was born in Michigan in 1852 or 1853. He applied for a patent on March 10, 1877, covering Processes of Enameling Photographs, and was granted Patent Number 190,023 on April 24, 1877. His second application was filed on June 8, 1878, relating to Photo-Mechanical Printing, and his Patent Number 209,036 issued on October 15, 1878, with one-half of the rights assigned to Arthur F. Mansur. Some of his patrons at 80 Gratiot Avenue were African-American. Mrs. Maggie Freeman was identified as Moody's wife in 1880, and as his partner in M. R. Freeman & Company in 1892, 1893 and 1895. The company employed Darwin H. Forsyth as a photographer in 1891 and Blanche Freeman as a clerk in 1895 and 1896. 80 Gratiot Avenue was at the corner of Randolph Street. M. R. Freeman & Company advertised as view photographers and producers of cabinets and crayons in 1892, and emphasized portraits and commercial work from 1894 through 1898. Moody offered fine portraiture and general photography in 1902. After 1907 he and Maggie (later Margaret) had separate addresses. Margaret was identified as a widow in 1920.

John was born in 1847 or 1848 and raised at Camden, New Jersey. He came to Michigan in 1868. The local newspaper noted in March of 1875: "John Freaney is doing a rushing business we judge, he having purchased another chair, looking glass, etc. His new photograph gallery is nearly finished,... with a large skylight,... John Freaney left for East Saginaw yesterday morning for the purpose of purchasing the necessary apparatus for his new photograph gallery. Look out for an early opening." The fire which devastated two blocks of business buildings in Mount Pleasant early in the morning of August 5, 1875, destroyed John's ground floor barber shop and his photographic gallery above it. His furniture was saved, but he had only a small amount of insurance on the building which was a total loss. By November he and most other Mount Pleasant business men were back to work in new buildings. In April of 1877, in his gallery up stairs at the first door south of T. W. Swart's, he enlarged old pictures, did copying and took photographs and tin types in the best of style. He took first-class photographs for $2.00 per dozen during December of 1877. He and Miss Sophie Watson, who was born in New York in 1853 or 1854, were married early in June of 1878. A few months later, John claimed to have the cheapest place in Isabella County to get photographs. His gallery was still over his barber shop in 1879, when he would take your picture for ten cents or less. One of a group of tintypes of Isabella County native Americans in ordinary clothes retained its paper sleeve on which was printed: "J. H. FREENEY, Photographer, Main Street, Mt. Pleasant, Mich." In June of 1880 John was described as black and Sophie was described as mulatto. By this time John had hired a photographer from Ohio that was reputedly hard to beat, and by September he was offering ferrotypes for less than seven cents each and the best made photographs for $3.00 per dozen along with two large cabinet pictures free of charge. He sold his Mount Pleasant photography business to Ellsworth & Smith in April of 1883. John made sound real estate investments, and by 1882 owned substantial tracts of pine land and a mill sawing eight million shingles a year. At one time he had three lumber camps, ten teams, four yoke of oxen, and one hundred men employed. He was the founder and sole owner of Wise, with about 400 inhabitants settled around his saw mill on the branch of the Pere Marquette Railroad between East Saginaw and Mount Pleasant. In the spring of 1888 he was operating two shingle mills and four charcoal kilns. Between September of 1888 and July of 1889 John lost his shingle mill at East Saginaw three times, once by a boiler explosion and twice by fire. The Michigan Gazetteer for 1879 was the only directory which printed (col'd) after John's name.

Ayrault was born in Detroit to Cassius M. and Phoebe J. French on June 14, 1893. By 1917 he was of average height and stout with light brown eyes and black hair, and thought that he would be exempt from military service because of his eyesight and his contributions to the support of his mother. He was inducted into the army at Detroit on September 20, 1917, and sent to Camp Custer where he was assigned to Company G of the 339th Infantry and briefly to the Supply Company of the same regiment. On December 17, 1917, he was transferred to the Supply Company of the 170th Infantry Brigade as a wagoner. He left for Europe on July 23, 1918, and was transferred to Company 4 in the Service Battalion of the Army Schools as a wagoner on October 16, 1918. He returned to the United States on January 6, 1919, spent some time at Walter Reid Hospital in Washington, and was honorably discharged at Camp Custer on February 20, 1919.

| Lester was born in 1856, eighth of the nine children of John and Charlotte French. He grew up on a farm in Cannon Township of Kent County, Michigan. He attended school in Grand Rapids from 1870 until 1873. At one time he and his brother owned and operated eleven photograph galleries in different cities of the United States and Canada. These may have included French & Company in 1882 at London, Ontario, and French Brothers in 1884 and 1885 at Toronto, Ontario. During the 1890s, Lester owned large tracts of pine and mineral lands in Michigan, as well as real estate in Detroit, Grand Rapids and Chicago. He moved west in 1906, and died at Pasadena, California, about May 19, 1916. Burial was in Detroit's Woodlawn Cemetery. Cassius M. French and Lucius J. French of Detroit and William B. French of San Diego were his brothers, and his sister Martha was married to photographer Joseph S. Simonds. |           | 2 122 3322 555 |

Rupert was born at Battle Creek to parents from New York on September 20, 1881, the son of Eugene A. and Mary Etta (Beach) French. His four brothers were born in New York between 1876 and 1879. His sister Clara was born in Michigan in January of 1884, and his sisters Ruth and Bertha were born in Illinois in January of 1891 and June of 1892. He and his sisters were living in 1900 with their mother and her second husband, Albert E. Brown, along with Albert's children Bessie and Homer. Effie L. Kellogg was born at Kalamazoo on February 25, 1876, the daughter of Albert and Lucina (Ashley) Kellogg. She and Rupert were married on July 7, 1911. Rupert became a stout man with brown eyes and dark hair, and prior to 1918 his right leg was amputated six inches above the knee. "W. R. French, Battle Creek" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of a musical performance in a small venue at Camp Custer which was mailed in January of 1918. The photo was taken from the back of the room and Rupert had somehow attracted the attention of a few of the seated soldiers who had turned their heads toward the camera. The Kendall Street studio was at the same address as the residence of Rupert and his wife. In 1922 the French Studio offered "Enlarging and Copying, Commercial and General View Photography, Home Portraiture...." Effie and Rupert had no children. She was enumerated as his assistant photographer in 1930, and undoubtedly took a significant part in the photographic business much earlier. Rupert died at Battle Creek on August 21, 1952, and Effie died there on July 19, 1963. 3 1

Zerah was born in New York State in 1826 or 1827, Margaret was born there a couple of years earlier, and she married Zerah about 1847. Their daughters Adelia and Alice were born in Michigan between 1849 and 1853, their son Frederick was born in the Dakota Territory in 1865 or early in 1866, and their son Albert was born in Wisconsin three years later. Zerah's first name looked like Zeria in the gazetteer and like Zinah in the assessment rolls. The 1883 history stated that the photograph gallery established in 1862 at Big Rapids by Zerah French was the first in Mecosta County.

Henry was born in the Mecklenburg region of Germany about 1828. Adeline was born in Michigan to German parents about 1840, and she married Henry about 1857. Their six sons and four daughters were born in Ohio between 1858 and 1879. Like other Toledo photographers, Henry was overrun by the throng of soldiers and relatives wanting pictures in June of 1861. The Detroit photographer was identified as Hennick Frentz. Henry's son Charles was a Toledo photographer in 1890. "No. 235 Summit St., H. C. FRENTZ, Photographer, And Wholesale Dealer in Photograph & Ambrotype Goods. NEGATIVES PRESERVED." was printed on some card photograph mounts without specifying the city.

Ferdinand was born in the Baden region of Germany in May of 1844, the son of Joseph A. and Elizabeth Catherine Friend. He immigrated to Canada in 1850 with his family. Ernestina Wilhelmina Gonder was born in March of 1854 to German parents at Waterloo, Ontario. She married Ferdinand at Kincardine, Ontario, on June 15, 1875. They came to Detroit in 1879, and they never had children. Ferdinand was enumerated as an artist in 1880, and was a member of the Photographers' Association of America by 1881. He and John H. Owen employed Charles A. Smith as a photo printer until Charles supplanted John as Ferdinand's partner. Friend & Smith employed Roe Howard as a retoucher and Miss Anna S. Coman as a clerk in 1882. Some of Ferdinand's later employees were: Louisa Mahiat, photo finisher in 1883; Peter Richard, photographer in 1883 and 1884; William M. Harmer, photographer in 1883 and 1885; Anthony P. Godfrey, photo printer in 1889; and his sister-in-law Sophia Gonder, photo printer in 1891. Charles E. Alvord advertised as the successor to Ferdinand Friend at 244 Woodward Avenue in 1887. Ferdinand employed two assistants in the Grand River studio in 1896, and did all kinds of commercial work. Mrs. Ernestine W. Friend, Ferdinand's widow, was living in Detroit from 1913 through 1917.

Walter was born in Michigan to parents from New York in April of 1860, third of the seven children of Stephen and Adaline Frisbie. He was called Jay as a child. Lone & Frisbie advertised in March of 1886: "... Now when we say first-class, we mean just what we say. Our reception Parlor is to be second to none in the state, and our Operating Room is being fitted up according to the best improved plans with large top and side lights, facing to the north, and our instruments are of superior quality. We also use the new improved LIGHTNING PROCESS for all our Photographs, enabling us to secure fine artistic life-like Portraits without fatigue to the sitter. We have a fine lot of bright new Scenic back-grounds and Accessories; also grass mats with which we produce Fine Artistic Effects, such as LANDSCAPE, PARLOR SCENES, ETC. that Looks as Natural as Life Itself. - We shall also be prepared to do all styles of COPYING and ENLARGING.... J. B. Lone, Operator. W. J. Frisbie, Gen. Ass't." Their gallery opened during the first week of April. By early June they had sent photographs to California, Wisconsin and Dakota as well as to many places in Michigan, and had hired a Detroit retoucher named Mr. Harmer. During the summer of 1886 J. B. Lone was making tintypes as well as photographs, hired a new man, built a neat printing room and added a number of scenic back-grounds. The Baby Day late in October at Lone & Frisbie's gallery was such a grand success, with Mr. Lone taking pictures of seventeen babies, that they advertised an Old Folks Day between 9 and 11 a.m. on November 11. All persons over 75 years old could be photographed and receive a free cabinet photo. The oldest person photographed, 86 year old Mr. Canute of Coe, was presented with six cabinet photographs. Later in November Lone & Frisbie hired Mr. A. W. Brown as a retoucher. Mr. Frisbie returned to Mount Pleasant early in December after spending some time at his home in Holly. He intended to devote some time to assisting in the gallery, but within a week his interest had been purchased by Joseph B. Lone. Rosanna was born in Quebec in March of 1871, and she came to the United States in 1887 or 1888. She and Walter married about 1889, and their daughters were born in Michigan, Flossie in February of 1891, and Laura in January of 1894. Rosanna was an inspector in the adding machine factory in 1920, but was a housewife in 1930.

Frank was born in Stark County, Ohio, on February 14, 1858, next to last of the four or more children of Henry C. and May Ann (Brown) Fryett. He attended school until he was 18 years old at Alliance, Ohio, and then worked three years in the Pennsylvania oil district. He opened the Redlands gallery in February of 1892 and later sold it to J. H. Young. The California Historical Society has five prints of San Bernardino larger than 10 by 15 inches from Frank's Redlands gallery. In some directories the address of Frank's first gallery in Grand Rapids was listed as 86 Monroe, third floor. Late in 1898 a special meeting of the officers of the Photographers' Association of Michigan appointed Frank to replace secretary Charles E. Heath, who had resigned. At the fourth annual convention of the Michigan Photographers' Association, held at Grand Rapids on February 1, 1899, Frank was awarded the Grand Prize, the Silver Trophy for Professionals. Two of his "Prize Pictures" were reproduced by a photographic journal the following month. "FRYETT, The Leading Photographer ... 84 Monroe and 39 N. Ionia Sts...." was printed on some turn-of-the-century mounts. He employed Minnie M. Mayer as a photographer in 1900 and as a photo printer in 1901, and Mrs. Ella M. Caverly as a retoucher in 1903. Bertha was born in Michigan to German parents in 1878, and she married Frank about 1903. He still was an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. This ad appeared in a 1920 theater program: "FRYETT'S PHOTOS ARE DIFFERENT. Call Mrs. Fryett for appointments. Studio 89 Monroe Ave. Citz. Phone 65901." Both Frank and Bertha were enumerated in 1920 as photographers with their own studio. Frank died at Grand Rapids in January of 1921. His father came from Vermont and Dana was born at Centreville on September 20, 1887. He and his twin sister Dollie were last of the nine children of Ali B. and Alice E. Fuller. Their siblings included a pair of twin girls and the Bradley J. Fuller mentioned above. Dana became a tall man with brown eyes and dark brown hair. Hattie was born in Michigan in 1886, and she married Dana about 1906. Their children also were born in Michigan: Doris in 1908, Bradley in 1911, Sonia in August of 1915, Donald in October of 1917, Genevieve about 1924, and Dale in October of 1926. A post card photograph of a young man in his World War I army uniform was embossed "FULLER STUDIO, 409 N. BURDICK, KALAMAZOO." He often was called Emery. His father came from New York and Emory was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio on November 7, 1863. He and his twin brother Melvin were last of the five children of Curtis R. and Artemicia Fuller. His older brother Myron also was a photographer, and his career is addressed in a later entry. Henrietta Irene Linzee was usually called Etta and was born in Michigan to parents from Ohio on March 7, 1865, the daughter of Belden C. and Jane M. (Tillotson) Linzee. She and Emory were married in 1883 or early in 1884, and their daughter Norma was born in Michigan about 1899. Emory's purchase of the Elsie gallery from William Brown was reported in the spring of 1901, and his acquisition of the Ovid studio was reported in the spring of 1908. Emory died on May 16, 1943, in Alameda County, California. Etta died there on December 26, 1952.

Fred was born in Massachusetts in 1824 or 1825, second of the eight children of Augustus and Lucretia Fuller. One of his younger brothers was the photographer Luther J. Fuller who is the subject of a subsequent entry. Fred married nineteen-year-old Miss Lucinda McLellen at Hastings on May 11, 1848, and their daughter Esther was born within a year. Their daughter Carrie was born in the summer of 1860. Fred was 37 years old and five feet seven inches tall with a light complexion, blue eyes and light hair when he enlisted at Hastings in Company C of the First Michigan Engineers and Mechanics on August 30, 1862. The regiment left Michigan in December of 1861 and served extensively throughout 1862, spending August rebuilding railroad bridges which had been destroyed in raids by the Confederates of General Morgan. The regiment was hastily concentrated at Louisville in September, and in the middle of October Companies A, C and H had 17 men wounded as they took part in the battle of Perryville, Kentucky. On the night after this battle, Frederick drank water from a contaminated spring and contracted chronic diarrhea. He and his company had been sleeping in the open for several weeks, and his resistance had been lowered by inadequate rations, overwork and exposure. The regiment was united and marched with the army to Nashville, then spent November and December building bridges in preparation for the advance to Murfreesboro, Tennessee. Fred was treated regularly by the regimental medical staff but his condition worsened until he was sent to a Nashville hospital in December. He was discharged on a Surgeon's Certificate of Disability at Nashville, Tennessee, on January 22, 1863. Lucinda gave birth to their son Fred in April of 1870 at Hastings, where Frederick was working as a chair maker. At this time they were providing a home for Frederick's mother, Mrs. Lucretia Fuller, who was described as insane. Frederick died at Van Buren, Arkansas, on August 10, 1890. His widow returned to Hastings and lived for almost three more decades. Lucinda spent the last of her life in the Michigan Soldiers' Home, where she died on December 18, 1919.

Luther was born at Philadelphia, New York, on June 9, 1834, fourth of the eight children of Augustus and Lucretia Fuller. He and Miss Harriet M. Worden were both living in Olivet when they married there on February 22, 1860. Harriet was born in Michigan and her father, James Worden, was shot and killed during a Civil War battle on April 6, 1862. Luther was 5 feet 8 inches tall with a dark complexion, dark brown hair and hazel eyes when he enlisted at Parma as a private in Company E of the 20th Michigan Infantry on August 5, 1862. When he was later asked to provide affidavits from members of his company, he stated that he could not remember the names of any of his comrades since when off duty he was taking pictures for soldiers in the regiment rather than forming intimate acquaintances. On a march from Washington to Frederick, Maryland, he was felled by sun stroke and later exposed to severe rains. Fever and jaundice followed in camp at Frederick on September 15, and he was sent to a hospital in Baltimore. By November 26, 1862, his disability was pronounced permanent and he was discharged from the hospital and the army. In March of 1863, Luther announced that he would be spending a few weeks in Charlotte as a photographer. He was awarded a premium for the photographs he exhibited at the Eaton County Fair in September of 1864. Fuller & Worden were assessed at Charlotte in May of 1865, and Luther was assessed at Lansing in September of 1865 and at Marshall in August of 1866. Fuller & Sessions were assessed in October of 1866, the same month in which Luther was assessed as an individual photographer at Leslie. What follows was extracted from a letter Luther wrote to the Commissioner of Pensions in February of 1885: "... for much of the time previous to Oct. 1st, 1867, I was traveling with a Portable Photograph Parlor .... I spent most of the winter of '62 and '63 at Olivet, Eaton Co., Mich., Taking Pictures such of the time as my health would admit of my doing so. During the summer of 1863 I traveled in Eaton County and in the fall moved to Barry Co., Mich., for the purpose of Caring for my aged and Insane Mother, and tried to farm some during the summer of 1863 but my health would not permit me to labor sufficiently to succeed, and during the winter of 1863 and 1864 I was appointed Recruiting agent for Barry Co., Mich., and devoted most of the winter to enlisting men for the United States service. In the spring of 1864 I gave up farming and returned to the picture business and was compelled to hire much of my work done which I could have done myself if my health had been good as when I enlisted. I traveled in Barry and Eaton Counties during the summer and wintered at Bellevue, Eaton Co., in '64 and '65. I traveled during the summer of 65 in Eaton, Clinton and Ingham Counties, Michigan, and wintered at Dansville, Ingham Co., until March when I went up to Pere Marquette, now Ludington, Mason Co., Mich., and spent about three months there with an idea of going into fruit growing but soon found that my health would not admit of my working. I returned to Olivet and then to Stockbridge, Mich. I commenced taking pictures, My wife assisting me. I traveled in Ingham Co. and I spent the winter of 65 and 66 at Leslie, Ingham Co., and traveled during the summer of 66 and wintered at Ayers Corners, Ingham Co. Took pictures in Eaton Rapids, Eaton Co., during the summer of 67, coming to Kansas in September, reaching Garnett Oct. first and have called this place home since that time. The first year after coming to Kansas I worked in the carpenter business in company with Charles E. Dewey.... I have taken pictures most of the time since Oct. 1868 though I have tried manual labor on my farm several times and have been compelled either to rent it or hire help, as there has been but a very small portion of the time that I could perform but very little manual labor...." Harriet and Luther were divorced on the grounds of barrenness on June 26, 1869. He soon married Miss Alvira Eloise Worden and their son Ray was born in December of 1869. Harriet reverted to her maiden name and was living with Eloise and Luther in 1870. Ray did not survive and Eloise died on October 18, 1871. Luther's third marriage was on June 23, 1875, to 21 year old Mrs. Charlotte Cahill, who had been a widow since 1871. Their children (Arthur, Maude, Adelaide, Emma, Harry and Flora May) were born between 1876 and 1889. Luther died at Garnett in February of 1920, and Charlotte lived until June 12, 1926.

Clyde was born in Ohio on June 15, 1878, second of the six children of William F. and Louisa Ellen Funk. He became a short slender man, and still was single in 1918 when both his hair and his eyes were light gray. His business and home address was 56 South Jefferson Street in Battle Creek at this time, and he was authorized to photograph at Camp Custer. "© HAMM & FUNK, BATTLE CREEK." was lettered on each of five panoramic negatives of Camp Custer used in making 5 ½ by 14 inch composite photographs. A series of post card photographs showing the destruction caused by a tornado at Fine Lake, twelve miles northwest of Battle Creek, on March 28, 1920, was made from negatives marked: "Photo by C. B. Funk, Battle Creek, Mich." They picture the ruined dancing pavilion and hotel, cottage owners looking for their possessions, cottages blown from their foundations and overturned, debris and general devastation. The Superior Photo Service offered amateur finishing and commercial photography, with Clyde as manager in 1922 and owner in 1924 and 1929. Kermit C. Krum was associated with Clyde in both the Central Park Studio and the Central Photo Studio. Harold D. Stevenson was the proprietor in 1935 of a Superior Photo Service at 16 North Jay Street in Battle Creek.

His father came from Pennsylvania and Will was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in November of 1865, last of the four children of Mahlon and Sarah Funk. Her parents came from New York and Illinois, and Leora Field was born in Michigan in September of 1862. When she married Will in 1899 or early in 1900, it was the second time around for both of them. They had no children. "WILL FUNK, Photographer, Bangor, Mich." was printed below the image on cabinet mounts that appear to date from the early 1890s, including views of an oil or salt well derrick and a family in their garden. A report that Guy Cross and Will Funk had formed a photographic partnership was published in November of 1898. Will and Leora owned a house and lot in 1916 on Morrison Avenue in Bangor.

He was identified as C. Broussais Fuqua in 1880 and again in 1902. Bruce was born in Virginia in August of 1862, fairly early in the Civil War. He was eldest of the seven children of W. M. and Vandalia Fuqua. His father was a physician, and in 1880 another physician and his wife were boarding with the Fuquas. Their immediate neighbors included three prostitutes in their twenties. Carrie Bates was born in Texas in December of 1876 and she married Bruce about 1893. Their children were born in Texas: James in October of 1894, Ruth in November of 1895, and Hubbard in July of 1897. Bruce was a widower by 1910, and his business was on Main Street opposite Water Street from 1904 until 1913. "C. Bruce Fuqua" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs along with such captions as: "Birdseye View of Paris, Mich" and "Main Street, Paris, Mich." and "State Fish Hatcheries. Paris, Mich." and "East View, Paris, Mich." Some of these cards were mailed in November of 1910. Beatrice was born in Michigan early in 1875, and her marriage to Bruce was her second. They were married between 1910 and 1920, and still were together in 1930.

Charles was born in England in April of 1842, the son of Charles F. Futvoye. They immigrated in 1850 and by 1854 were living in Detroit. He enlisted at the Detroit Barracks as a corporal in Company F of the 17th Michigan Infantry on July 14, 1862, and was mustered into the army on August 26. The inexperienced 17th was first engaged at South Mountain, Maryland, on September 14, 1862, where 140 of the 500 men that drove the enemy from behind stone walls at the crest were killed or wounded. The regiment had severe casualties three days later at Antietam. From Maryland and Virginia the 17th was sent in March of 1863 to Louisville, Kentucky, and then in June was ordered to join in the siege of Vicksburg. Due to sun stroke on a march from Jackson to Pearl River, Mississippi, Charles' left eye lost its sight. He spent two months in one hospital at Cincinnati, was given a brief furlough, and then was treated in another Cincinnati hospital until April of 1864. He rejoined the regiment at Annapolis, Maryland, in time to participate in the battle of the Wilderness early in May. On May 12 the 17th made a daring charge upon the Confederate works at Spottsylvania, Virginia, was surrounded in dense woods, and lost nearly 200 killed, wounded and taken prisoner. The regiment had been practically annihilated, and the few survivors were assigned to other units for the duration of the war. After the grand review in Washington Charles was mustered out of the army with his company at Delaney House, D.C., on June 3, 1865. Charles W. Davis was the other half of Futvoye & Davis. Miss Sarah Steptoe was born in England in September of 1846, became Mrs. Charles Futvoye at Detroit on September 2, 1868. She gave birth to William in August of 1869 and to Bessie in January of 1873. In 1880 Charles was 5 feet 6 inches tall with a fair complexion, auburn hair and grey eyes. Ten years later he was almost totally blind in the left eye, partially blind in the right, deaf in the left ear and had chronic rheumatism. On February 17, 1905, Charles died at the home of his son in Chattanooga, Tennessee, and the body was returned to Detroit for burial in Woodmere Cemetery. Sarah received a widow's pension of $8.00 per month until April of 1908 when it was increased to $12.00 per month. Interment was at Woodmere Cemetery after her death on January 21, 1915.

Charles was born in the Cluny District of Aberdeenshire in Scotland in June of 1869. He and his twin sister Ann were tenth and eleventh of the twelve children of Alexander and Catherine Fyvie. Two of their sisters were twins. Jean (often called Jennie) was born in Canada of Scotch parentage in June of 1873, and married she Charles about 1897. Their children also were born in Michigan: Charles (later Gilbert) on January 12, 1899, Laurel in 1901, Margaret in 1905, James in October of 1908, and William early in 1911. "CHAS FYVIE, HELMER, MICH" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of Helmer, Locke Creek and Manistique Lake. Many of the cards were blind stamped "Grant Bros, Newberry, Mich." and some of them were mailed in August of 1913.

Harriet was born in New York State in October of 1835, second of the five children of Loyal and Mary (Johonnott) Wilson. By 1850 her mother was a widow and her older brother Willard was identified as the farmer. Solon White was born in Canada in 1835 or early in 1836, and he married Harriet about 1857. Their daughter Florence was born in Illinois in 1858 or early in 1859. Solon enlisted as a sergeant in Battery E of the First Illinois Light Artillery on September 27, 1861, and was mustered into the Union Army on December 19, 1861. He died at Chebanse in Iroquois County, Illinois, on October 23, 1862. Harriet's second marriage was to Wallace B. Gage at Bloomfield in Walworth County, Wisconsin, on June 27, 1867. She succeeded her husband as a Menominee photographer. Wallace died in 1893. Harriet was enumerated as a capitalist in 1900, and was said to have her own income in 1910. She did not apply for a Widow's Pension until 1902, and finally obtained a pension of $20.00 per month in 1913. Wallace was the son of Danas B. and Manah Gage, and was born in New York in 1829 or 1830. His first wife, Emogene, died at Antioch on January 15, 1862. Seven months later, on August 6, Wallace enlisted as a private in Company D of the 96th Illinois Infantry. In military records he was sometimes identified as a fife major or a musician rather than as a private. From June 2 to July 27 of 1863 he was treated for hemorrhoids in a hospital at Nashville, Tennessee. On May 26, 1864, he was back in a Nashville hospital with pneumonia. During June he was transferred to a hospital at New Albany, Indiana, where he was treated for an injury to the right side of his chest. He was later transported by hospital boat to Hospital #2 at Quincy, Illinois, where his hemorrhoids and other medical problems were addressed. He went home on furlough for a while, but returned to Quincy where he was honorably discharged from the hospital and the army on June 22, 1865. Wallace was too weak to return to farming, and it was a while before he was strong enough to clerk in a store. Then he often was absent for a day or two at a time due to illness. He moved to Waukegan in the fall of 1866, and apparently did little or nothing to earn a living while there. He and Harriet A. White were married at Bloomfield, Illinois, on June 27, 1867. Wallace claimed to do all kinds of photographic work in an artistic manner in 1872. Harriet succeeded him in the photographic business when Wallace turned to painting signs. He was five feet ten inches tall with a dark complexion, grey hair and black eyes when he applied for a pension late in October of 1889. He died at Menominee on November 8, 1893.

His father came from Vermont and Guy was born in Michigan to Franklin J. and Ida L. Gaines on June 25, 1883. Helen was born in Michigan in 1885 or 1886, and she married Guy about 1905. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Phyllis 1914 and Donna in April of 1917. In 1909 and 1910, with some postmarks as late as 1914, Guy produced many post card photos of Flint scenes: South Saginaw Street with the arches and other major streets, automobile and buggy factories, public buildings, the Michigan School for the Deaf, hotels and hospitals, the railroad yards, a tent village of people hoping to find homes and a camping scene by the light of a bonfire. He took along his camera on a workers' excursion from Flint to Port Huron. Guy was slender with blue eyes and brown hair in 1918. He worked as a photographer from his home at 747 Hamilton Avenue, and seems to have simultaneously worked in an automobile factory. He was so enumerated in 1920 as a repairman and in 1930 as a body worker. Guy died in Flint (probably in a hospital) on August 15, 1971. 1 3 1 1 t t t t 3 1 4 4

William was the son of William Clarke and Julia Grace (Marshall) Gardiner. He was born on December 10, 1861, at Brampton, Ontario, and spent several of his early school years at Avening, Ontario. Louise East was born in Toronto to William H. and Mary East, and was twenty years old when she married William there on November 25, 1882. Their son, Harry Marshall Gardiner, was born in Toronto on September 18, 1883. Their daughter Ethel was born in Michigan in May of 1891. William was associated with photographer William Still during part of his time at Orangeville, and was in the fruit business at Toronto in 1890. His partner in The Whitmore Studio in 1894 was Mrs. Elizabeth Whitmore, widow of the photographer Charles E. Whitmore. William may have been photographing Mackinac Island as early as the summer of 1894, and he may first have visited Daytona as a photographer the following winter. He produced photographs of Mackinac Island scenes as 8 by 10 inch platinum prints and on cabinet mounts. More than 3500 of his mostly portrait negatives are held by the Mackinac Island State Park Commission. About 1908, a 34-page brochure entitled Mackinac Island: the Ancient Michilimackinac was published by W. G. MacFarlane of Buffalo, New York, for W. H. Gardiner. Twenty one lithographed views of the island based upon William's photographs were produced by the Detroit Publishing Company, as were hundreds of views of Nantucket, Massachusetts, from photographs taken by his son. Gardiner's Gift Shop seems to have opened at Daytona in 1901. H. Marshall Gardiner worked with his father, photographed in Bermuda, and opened a studio at Nantucket in 1910. William acquired residential and commercial property at Daytona, was active in civic affairs, and had the W. H. Gardiner Building completed there in 1920 as the headquarters of the family business. Hand colored scenic photos of Daytona became a Gardiner specialty. William had a fatal heart attack at Calhoun, Georgia, while en route to Daytona on October 22, 1935, and his body was returned to Canada for burial in Toronto's Mount Pleasant Cemetery. H. Marshall Gardiner continued the business, spending his summers at Nantucket and his winters at Daytona until his own death in December of 1942.

- Roy was born to a mother from New York on April 13, 1888, at Oxford, Michigan, last of the nine children of James H. and Emma J. Gardner. He became a slender man with brown eyes and black hair. His wife and children also were born in Michigan, Eva in 1888, Ernest in 1910 and Mildred in 1915. Eva's parents had emigrated from Canada. "Gardner Photo" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of Flint scenes, and many of the cards were postmarked in 1916 and 1917. They included views of business streets, schools, theaters, hospitals and parks. Roy was afflicted with after effects from infantile paralysis, and was described in 1917 by the draft registrar as being in bad shape. This and his supporting a wife and two children exempted him from military service. He later dealt mostly in cameras and snapshot printing. His wife was working as a photo finisher in 1930. Their son, Ernest J. Gardner, worked as a photo finisher in 1930, managed the shop for several years before and after Roy's retirement in 1957, and kept it open for two or three years after Roy's death in 1963.

married to James Buchner and George had two step-sisters, a step-brother and a two-year-old half-sister. In 1900 1
George was living and farming with his brother John, and their divorced sister Sarah A. Lenard was keeping house for 1 them and caring for her two-year-old daughter Jennett. In 1910 George still was living and farming with John, and 1 John's new wife was taking care of the house. Elise (later Elsie) was born in Canada to Scotch parents in 1881, and she 1 crossed the border to marry George in 1912. Their children were born in Michigan: Marie in 1913, Bertram in April of 1 1915, and Donald about 1923. John was a widower by 1920, and he farmed with George and lived with George's 1 family in 1920 and 1930. Rustford is in Deerfield Township. 1 3

George was born in Michigan in September of 1877, second of the five children of Edwin C. and Bernice (Sprague) 1
Garrett. “GEORGE GARRETT, KODAK ARTIST, VERMONTVILLE, MICH.” was stamped on the back of the 1 t plain 4¼ by 5¼ inch mount of a photograph of a threshing machine drawn by a steam traction engine. “Kenneth Miles, t Mother Miles Brother.” was written on the back in ink, and “1889, Uncle Thead Muir’s outfit, over 100 years old” was t written on the back in pencil. “Kodak” was first used in an advertisement in October of 1888. George may have taken t 2 this picture when he was twelve years old, or the 1889 date may be misleading. George did not marry until he was 49 1 years old. His bride was 23-year-old Florence who was born in Michigan to Canadian parents. Their daughter Bernice 1 was born in 1928 or early in 1929. 1

Charles was born in Indiana to parents from New York in December of 1856, the first child of Oliver and Mary A. Garrison. His brother Fred was born five years later. Eugene Atwater was Charles' associate in Chicago, in Allegan and in San Francisco, and the entry under his name has more information about their businesses. Charles advertised nationally early in 1885: "SITUATION OFFERED - A first-class operator and retoucher. A permanent position for the right man. C. F. Garrison, Battle Creek, Mich." Adah Durban was born in Michigan to an English father and a mother from New York on December 23, 1852. She married Charles about 1887, and they had no children. Charles also was associated with the photographic firm of Garrison & West at Ruthven, Iowa. Adah, her nephew Richard Massey and Charles' cousin Nettie Gilbert also were enumerated in 1900 as photographers at Rolfe, Iowa. Charles seems to have died prior to 1940, but Adah lived one hundred years before she died in Los Angeles County on June 8, 1953.

George and his wife were born in New York, he in March of 1849 and Louise (later Lucy) in September of 1852. They married in 1876 or 1877 and never had children. George sent two dozen stereo views of Watkins Glen to a photographic journal in 1867. In reporting upon similar views which George exhibited at the Milwaukee convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1883, it was noted that his views of the glen had been known for a good many years, and that now he planned to distinguish himself at Chicago. George may have been a principal of Rockwell & Gates, photographers at 6317 Madison Avenue in Chicago in 1894. Stereo views of the mass production type were produced under many of the company names listed above. Printed on the backs of some stereographs was "PICTURESQUE AMERICA, New Series, Gates, Photographer, Chicago." Included in this series were views of "Picturesque South Haven 'by the Sea'"; ice along the lake shore; the Black River; "The Merry Bathers" and Phoenix Street on July 4th, 1900. Both "GATES' PICTURESQUE EUROPE. Published by The M. H. & G. Co., South Haven, Mich." and "GATES' PICTURESQUE AMERICA. Published by The M. H. & G. Co., South Haven, Mich." were printed on the face of stereo views at opposite ends of the same mount. This series included some beautiful portraits of the Great Lakes boats which served South Haven as well as more scenes along the Black River. George's partners in South Haven were Bertram C. Hopkins, a South Haven photographer since 1894, and David C. Moyer, a South Haven photographer from 1888 until 1919.

His father came from Pennsylvania and Maurice was born in Ohio to a mother from Illinois on July 24, 1874, eldest of the four children of Albert W. and Virtue A. Gates. He was called Norman as a child and at times later in life. Katherine was born in Michigan to German parents in 1877 or 1878, and she married Maurice about 1899. Their children were born in Michigan: Wesley in 1900, Leola in 1903, and Loretta in 1912 or early in 1913. "GATES, - Water Proof Finish - 512 Franklin Street, Traverse City, Mich." was printed below the photograph on some cabinet mounts. Maurice was selling insurance in 1904, and may have dropped out of photography for a year or two at that time. "PHOTO BY M. N. GATES, MONROE, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of photos, including one taken in 1908 of a group that had been bathing at Monroe Piers. "M. N. GATES, MONROE, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of a bird's-eye and other views of Monroe. "GATES PHOTO" was lettered on several negatives of President Taft and of the Custer Statue being unveiled on June 4, 1910, as well as the negatives of postal photographs of business streets, the court house, schools, churches, the armory and the lotus pond at Monroe, the bath house, hotel and interurban cars at Monroe Piers, and cottages at nearby Pointe aux Peaux. Maurice was 5 feet 8½ inches tall and stout with brown eyes and hair of mixed colors in 1918. By 1923 Katherine was widow, and in 1930 she was providing a home in Monroe for her son Wesley and two male boarders in their twenties.

All of his grandparents were Scotch and his parents emigrated from Northern Ireland. John was born in Detroit in March of 1870, fourth of the six children of William and Ellen Gault. Georgina was born in 1871 at Brantford, Ontario, the daughter of Hector and Mary Havens. She came from Elk, Michigan, to marry John at Windsor, Ontario, on July 4, 1895. Their children were born in Michigan: Mary in 1896, Russel (later John) in 1898, Charles in 1906, and Harriet in September of 1908. Something happened to Georgina after 1920, and by 1930 John had a 57-year-old wife named Janet who was born in Michigan and had been married previously. Leslie was born in Kentucky to English parents in February of 1839, third of the seven children of John and Julia Gault and their only son. Mary was born in New York in February of 1844, and she married Leslie in 1864 or 1865. They had two sons born in New York, Willard B. in November of 1866 and Leslie R. in January of 1869. Then Anselm L. was born in Michigan in February of 1873, and Mary or Marie was born in Ohio in August of 1881. The Ionia and the earliest Detroit listings were for Reverend Leslie R. Gault. His sale of the Root Block gallery in Ionia to George W. Clark was reported early in 1893. He taught at the Detroit Business University from 1903 until his death at the age of 68 on March 5, 1907. His widow still was living in 1930.

Leslie was born in New York State in January of 1869, second of the four children of Leslie R. and Mary E. Gault. Her father emigrated from Canada, Florence Ethel was born in Michigan in October of 1872, and she married Leslie about 1889. She was Ethel F. Gault in 1900 and 1939, and Florence E. Gault in 1910 and 1920. Their children were born in Michigan: Charles in June of 1891, Leslie in July of 1893, Frances in July of 1897, and Eleanor in 1901 or early in 1902. Leslie employed his brother Anselm L. Gault as a photo printer in 1891. "L. R. Gault" was printed on some Ionia cabinet mounts, and "L. R. Gault, Jr." was printed on others, but many different printings were only "Gault, Ionia, Mich." and could have carried the work of John or of either Leslie. One of these shows the interesting store front of Kneeland & Merriam. Leslie dropped the Junior after the death of his father in 1907. He and Ethel were sharing their Lansing home in 1930 with his widowed mother, Mrs. Mary E. Gault.

Hiram was born at Stoughton, Massachusetts, on January 5, 1824, the son of Lemuel and Betsy (Swan) Gay. He was not the Hiram Gay that served in Company A of the 67th Ohio Infantry during the Civil War. Hannah was born at Stoughton, Massachusetts, in July of 1826, the daughter of Abel and Sarah (Withington) Farrington. She married Hiram on May 24, 1846. Their children were born in Massachusetts: Hannah (later Betsy) in May of 1850, Hiram Revere in 1857 or early in 1858, and Hattie in October of 1859. Their son and their younger daughter still were at home in 1880. Hunter & Gay were proprietors of the Excelsior Gallery and of the Detroit Viewing Company. Hiram was 75 years old when he died on October 9, 1899. Hannah was providing a home in 1900 for her spinster younger daughter and two children of her older daughter. She was living in 1920 with the family of her son-in-law, Charles A. Bartlett. Hannah died on January 25, 1923.

| Luron was born in New York State in 1828 or 1829. In 1860 the Geer Ambrotype & Photograph Gallery was up stairs in the Empire Block on the south side of Main Street with an entrance between Bennett's dry goods store and the Gift Book Store. Luron was succeeded in Jackson late in 1863 or early in 1864 by L. C. Chamblin. By 1866, Mr. & Mrs. Geer had been succeeded in Jackson by Stanley C. Brooks. From Greenville, Luron produced a card photograph of two western Indians, with "Rain-in-the-Face and Spotted Tail" written on the back. The identification is questionable, particularly of Spotted Tail. Luron attended the inaugural convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880, and was on the first list of PA of A members published in May of 1881. Printed on the back of a card photograph in the Florida State Archives was: "Geer's Portable Photograph Gallery, 1st CLASS. ALL STYLES OF PICTURES MADE. Having had 25 years experience in the business, I GUARANTEE TO MAKE 1ST CLASS WORK. A specialty made of Babies and small children. COPYING AND ENLARGING OLD PICTURES. Views of Residences and LARGE PORTRAITS, made and Framed. Remember I shall remain but a short time only. L. H. GEER, PHOTOGRAPHER." In St. Augustine, his photographs and enamel tintypes were guaranteed to be the cheapest and best in the city. Luron died at Orlando in 1903. |           | 2 JJ 11 tt 888 33 44 77777 5 |

| Rosetta was born in August of 1830 in New York State. She later married Luron H. Geer, gave birth to Clarence and Flora in New York between 1848 and 1851, and gave birth to Lillie in Michigan about 1853. She was a portrait painter, was identified as Mrs. Rosa Geer in Detroit, and in the late 1860s was head of the Art Departments at Albion College and at the Coldwater Female Seminary. On Saturdays she taught landscape painting at James LeClear's studio in Jackson. Her daughter Lillie became a Greenville music teacher and artist, and exhibited her paintings with the Western Art Association at Detroit in 1870 and at the 1879 Michigan State Fair in Detroit. Rosetta probably took part in her husband's photographic activities in Greenville and in Florida, and definitely was associated with his gallery in Orlando. |           |     |

Abraham was born at Unionville in Berks County, Pennsylvania, on July 29, 1825, the son of William and Catherine (Brower) George. In 1835 the family moved to St. Joseph County, Michigan, and settled on 160 acres of government land two miles west of Constantine. Abraham remained on the farm until 1843. In 1848 he married Mary A. Boyd, the daughter of Jacob Bonebright. Their sons were born in Constantine: Samuel E. (later Edward S.) late in 1848 or early in 1849, and Linville H. in the summer of 1853. Abraham's gallery was over the Mercury office. In the spring of 1857 he was "... now taking pictures, perfect facsimiles of the sitters on patent leather. They need neither glass nor case, and they can be handled without injury. They ... can be put in a letter and sent without additional postage." Abraham bought out his employers in 1861. By 1889 he owned extensive property in addition to his foundry, machine and implement shops, and was considered to be one of the wealthy men of Constantine.

Gunnar was one of the ten children of John and Amanda (Larson) George and a younger brother of the photographer Helmar George. He was born in Sweden on March 30, 1898. In 1912 he still was in Sweden, and in 1918 he had yet to apply for United States citizenship. He was short and slender with brown hair, and his nearest relative was Helmar George. The George Studio was the only advertiser of portrait and commercial photography in the 1919 yearbook of Pontiac Central High School, and probably took the photographs which were reproduced in it. Gunnar's partner in 1922 in both the George Studio and George & Ouilette was Raymond Ouilette. The George Studio and the Pontiac Commercial Photo Service had the same address in 1928. Gunnar visited his homeland in 1935. He obtained his passport in mid-July and sailed back on the f. M. S. Kungsholm, leaving Gothenburg on September 26 and arriving at New York on October 5, 1935. He still was single and a Swedish citizen at this time.

Helmar was one of the ten children of John and Amanda (Larson) George, and was born in Sweden on September 29, 1882. After attending the state schools and a business school, he spent three years in the Swedish navy and then took up photography. He learned the fundamentals and then was in the photographic business for three years in Sweden. He emigrated in 1906, landing in New York and heading for Boston, where he spent a year and a half in an art school. Returning to New York, he was employed by a prominent photographic firm for two years. Then one of the most extensive operating firms in the country sent him to Detroit to open a branch studio. Eighteen months later he opened his own studio in Pontiac. Helmar was married on April 8, 1910, to Miss Vilma Sundborg, a daughter of Oscar and Helene (Lawbon) Sundborg, and an actress and singer well known to Swedish and American audiences. "Copyright 13 H. George Studio" was lettered in stylized script followed by "PONTIAC, MICHIGAN" in very small block capitals on the negative of a post card photograph of a bank interior postmarked in December of 1913. The same identification without the copyright was used on a view of a display of fruit and vegetables in the window of a Pontiac bank postmarked a year later. The H. George Studio took the photographs reproduced in the 1915 yearbook of Pontiac Central High School, and advertised portrait and commercial photography in it. Helmar was average sized with blue eyes and dark hair in 1918, and his nearest relative was his younger brother, Gunnar George.

Heneage was born at Berrow in Somerset in the south of England about 1837, into a family of eminent physicians and clergymen. He was eldest of the seven children of Heneage and Margaretta Gibbes. He ran away to sea when he was 14 and spent many years in the merchant marine, much of the time on the coast of China. When he returned to England he undertook the study of medicine. Jessie was born in August of 1840 at Calcutta, India, and she married Heneage about 1870. Their only child, also named Jessie, was born in October of 1871. Heneage began investigating normal histology before receiving his doctorate with honors from the University of Aberdeen in 1881, and was able to make a thorough study of morbid histology during his three years as curator of the Anatomical Museum. While Professor of Histology at Westminster Hospital in London he treated more than 50,000 patients at the Metropolitan Dispensary. He was becoming famous, and was sent to India as the Cholera Commissioner for the English government in 1884. The germ theories of the eminent German doctors studying the cholera epidemic were opposed by Heneage’s former teacher as spokesman for the English medical community. When the University of Michigan decided to have a Professor of Pathology, they chose a man of international renown in this field, Heneage Gibbes. Things did not go smoothly at the university. Heneage had invented a cure for tuberculosis and felt grossly insulted not to be allowed a clinic with which to prove its effectiveness. When Dean Vaughn instituted the teaching of the germ theory at the university, Heneage instantly revolted. He had a striking personality, a giant physique, and an inclination to attack boldly the theories of those who seemed to be antagonizing him. His relations with the Dean became more and more strained until his position was abolished so as to restore peace. A couple of years before that happened, this report appeared in a photographic periodical early in 1893: “Prof. Heneage Gibbes, of the Ann Arbor University, during a visit to his native England, made a series of exquisite landscape negatives, and has favored us with proofs from several of them. The river scenes, the lanes, the trees and the castles, are of such ‘bits’ as we do not readily find in this young country of ours. Trees and hedges and byways must have years and centuries in which to perfect for picturesque camera-work such as we have before us now in soft, velvety prints - platinum.” Heneage’s wife Jessie died in 1909, and he moved to McAlester about 18 months before his death there on July 8, 1912. His daughter was in New York at the time, and she had his body returned to Detroit for the funeral and burial. 1

Elizabeth was born in New York State in 1832, and she married tinsmith D. A. Gibbs about 1856. Their son Frank M. Gibbs was born in Michigan in 1857 or early in 1858. David A. Gibbs was 33 years old when he went from his home in Ingham County to enlist at Detroit as a private in Company B of the Second United States Volunteer Regiment of Sharp Shooters on September 25, 1861. He was mustered into the Union army on October 4, 1861. David was promoted to full sergeant, and later received a disability discharge on August 22, 1862. He enlisted at Jackson in Company B of the Second Michigan Cavalry on May 27, 1864, and was mustered back into the army on the same day. He was promoted to corporal on March 21, 1865. David was mustered out at Macon, Georgia, on August 17, 1865, and does not seem to have reappeared in the lives of his wife and son. He applied for a pension from Wisconsin on July 10, 1890. Frank became a tinsmith like his father. He and his wife Kate were living with his mother in 1880.

Greenville PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1900-1901 1 t

Eugene was born in Michigan to an English father and a mother from New York in November of 1851, last of the five children of Henry and Polly Gibson. By 1860 his mother was a widow and his twenty-year-old brother was responsible for the family farm. Ella P. Alsbro was born in Michigan to parents from New York in June of 1854, the daughter of William and Polly Alsbro. She married Eugene in 1879 or early in 1880, and they stayed for a while on the farm of his sister Henrietta and her husband, Ambrose Lamereaux. They never had children. "E. H. GIBSON, Greenville, Mich." was stamped on the back of the 8 by 10 inch mounts of 5 by 8 sepia prints of a parlor, a teacher and 16 pupils by their school, a three generation family outside their home, and a couple in front of their rural home dated May 14, 1901. The same stamp was applied to the back of the 10 by 11 ¾ mount of a 6 ¼ by 8 photograph of a log homestead. Ella was living in 1910 on the farm of her parents in Livingston County, and was enumerated as a married woman while Eugene was not to be found. She was a widow living alone in Greenville in 1920.

| John was born at London, Ontario, on August 15, 1851, to John and Elizabeth (Comstock) Gibson. His father was a manufacturer of steel mill picks and a blacksmith. John became a photographer as he left school at St. Mary's, and worked there for 18 months before he moved to Bay City. He advertised from Room One of the Shearer Block in 1872: "... SPECIALTIES: Frames, the largest assortment of FINE FRAMES in the city; PHOTOGRAPH ALBUMS, a good assortment always on hand and for sale cheap; PHOTOGRAPHS OF LAKE SUPERIOR, the celebrated pictures of B. F. Childs, the best ever made of the PICTURED ROCKS. Also, STEREOSCOPES; a line of Cheap Oil Chromos." Some stereo views of Bay City had a Harman & Verner label pasted over his name. J. Harvey Scotford & Gibson advertised: "WHAT WE MAKE: Photographs, Tin Types, India Ink Portraits, Water Color Portraits, Oil Portraits, Frames Made to Order, Mats Made to Order, Copying of all Kinds. WHAT WE SELL: Frames of all Kinds, Chromos, Albums, Cases, Stereoscopes, Stereoscopic Pictures, Passe Partouts, Fancy Card Frames. We warrant our work to be SUPERIOR TO ANY IN THE CITY. Pictures in all styles new and novel." In 1881 John visited Cheboygan and exhibited crayon enlargements of portraits there. He began emphasizing his middle name, using J. Jefferson Gibson at Alpena, and Jefferson J. or J. Jefferson Gibson at Ann Arbor. He was succeeded at Alpena by Charles C. Gibson, and Emerson B. Lewis was his first partner at Ann Arbor. Gibson exhibited his work at the Chicago convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1887, and received one of the ten bronze medals awarded for groups of two dozen cabinets. "GIBSON" was lettered on the negatives of a majority of the well mounted 8 by 10 inch photographs of activities, lectures, demonstrations and apparatus in the University of Michigan Medical School produced in the later 1880s with printed captions. Nearly 80 of these outstanding photos are held by the Bentley Historical Library. Miss May M. Clark was John's associate in Gibson & Company, and became his wife in 1889. Ann Arbor cabinet photographs by Gibson included a small girl with a huge dog, an organ manufactured locally and many University of Michigan students. Gibson and Frederick A. Cole were listed as portrait artists at Plymouth and at Jackson, and as portrait artists and photographers in Detroit at the same address as Bracy & Gibson. Albert A. Morgan was Gibson's partner at Howell and at Port Huron, where they employed Lizzie Deery as an artist and Ella T. Crawford as a clerk. Jackson patrons of Gibson & Widman were advised to "Take the Elevator." "Gibson Photo, Ann Arbor" was lettered on the back of 14 by 17 inch mounts with gilded bevel edges carrying photographs taken at Island Lake in the summers of 1891 and 1892, showing Governor Edwin B. Winans with 12 and 18 uniformed officers of the Michigan National Guard. John J. Clark was a photo printer for the Gibson Photograph Gallery in 1892, and later was a partner in Gibson & Clark. In 1892 Gibson was selected to be the Official Portrait Photographer by the management of the World's Columbian Exposition. and visitors to the fair was printed: "GIBSON, Portrait Photographer World's Columbian Exposition, Jackson Park, Chicago, Ill. Permanent address, 12 W. Huron St., Ann Arbor, Mich." John and his staff were to photograph each of the twenty thousand persons expected to receive a season pass to the exposition, and nearly three thousand of them had been photographed early in April of 1893. After an illness of two years, John died at his Chicago home on October 9, 1902, survived by his wife Mae and his son, J. C. Gibson. Interment was at Ypsilanti.

Her mother emigrated from Canada and May was born in Michigan about 1863, the daughter of John and Helen Clark. Her brother John became a photographer. She completed the Scientific Course and graduated from the Michigan State Normal School in 1882, and in 1889 married her photographic partner, John Jefferson Gibson. Apparently she was not John's first wife, for he was described as married back in 1880, though he was boarding by himself with the family of George Moffatt in Alpena. Their son Jefferson C. Gibson was born in Illinois in 1894. May undoubtedly played a greater part in her husband's extensive photographic ventures than is indicated above, and she continued his Chicago photographic business after his death. She was a widow by 1910.

Benjamin was born at Troy, Pennsylvania, to William and Eunice Gifford on May 4, 1829. Miss Julia B. Rappley was born in 1831 in Seneca County, New York. According to the pension record she married Benjamin at Kidders Ferry, New York, on July 23, 1851. However the 1850 census report indicates that at that time they already had a three-year-old son named Hiram who evidently died as a child. Their next four children were born in New York State: William about 1854, Mary about 1861, Ellen about 1863, and Arthur about 1865. Their daughter Cora was born in Michigan in 1874 or 1875. Benjamin was a five foot nine inch shoemaker with a dark complexion, black hair and dark eyes prior to his enlistment at Elmira on October 24, 1861, in Company F of the First New York Light Artillery. He became a bugler, and on a march from Yorktown to Richmond, Virginia, in May and June of 1862 he contracted pneumonia. He spent June and July in hospitals at Whitehouse Landing, Virginia, and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and was honorably discharged on a Surgeons Certificate of Disability at Philadelphia on August 1, 1862. The Giffords lived for a while at Covert, New York, before moving to Leslie, Michigan. By the fall of 1872, Benjamin had established a reputation for taking Spirit Pictures in which cloudy but discernible guardian spirits appeared behind or above the corporeal sitter. A delegation from Lansing which included a doctor and the photographer Benjamin F. Hall visited his gallery to determine whether his results were truly marvelous or were some sort of hoax. Gifford informed them that the chemicals, the camera, the posing chair and the surrounding room must all be magnetized in order to obtain his results. He prepared to take one of his pictures for a lady as they watched. Once she was positioned and the plate was in the camera, he clapped his hands once and immediately put one of them on the upper and the other on the lower surface of the camera. He next walked to the lady, put his hands on either side of her head, and held this position for about one minute. Then he returned to the camera and took the picture in the normal manner. The visitors were allowed to examine the resulting negative and could see nothing unusual except for a cloudy background. Gifford stated that the faces of the guardian spirits in these cloudy areas would come out more clearly in the print. B. F. Hall asked to see a negative from which a particular spirit picture had been printed. He pointed out the black pencil marks on the plate that had been used to convert the clouds into the semblance of faces, and attributed the original cloudiness to a bad or peculiar condition of the chemicals. B. F. Hall issued a couple of procedural challenges which Gifford declined, stating that he would run his business in his own way, and would not be dictated to by others. The doctor who reported this visit to the newspaper was convinced that Gifford was a swindler, but acknowledged that the lady who saw her proofs the next day would be delighted to behold the faces of her departed friends. Benjamin was ill for six months before he died from exhaustion and paraplegia at Detroit on January 5, 1897. Burial was at Leslie, Michigan. Julia soon moved from Roscommon to Detroit, where she spent her last years in the home of her elder son. She was receiving a widow's pension of $12.00 per month at the time of her death in Detroit on August 17, 1916.

different post card photographs. George was born at Bridgewater in Williams County, Ohio, on May 5, 1886, the only t 3 child of Clarence J. and Sarah Ann (Copeland) Gifford. He matured into a tall slender man with brown eyes and brown 1 2 hair. Harriet Belle (Hattie) Shumway was born at Jasper in Lenawee County, Michigan, on May 8, 1886, the daughter 3 1 of Francis R. and Laura Alger (White) Shumway. She and George were newlyweds at LaGrange in 1910. They never 3 1 had children, and Harriet died in 1924. George then married Opha Westfall, a spinster who grew up on a neighboring 1 3 farm. Opha was the daughter of George Clarence and Alice Amelia (Chaffee) Westfall, and was born in Gorham 3 1
Township on June 23, 1884. She died in Williams County, Ohio, on September 24, 1966, and George lived until 3

John was born at Milford, New Jersey, on April 21, 1839, and grew up in Philadelphia. He and Edward L. Morgan 4 3 opened a gallery there in 1857. Morgan retired in the 1860s, and John continued the business on his own. He was 3 a frequent contributor to The Philadelphia Photographer. In March of 1872 it was reported that he and Henry L. 3
Bingham of Kalamazoo had formed a copartnership, but that Gihon would maintain his opaque and cut-out business 3 from Philadelphia. The cut-outs were masks used in making the medallion style of oval picture. Before the end of the 3 year it was mentioned that Gihon had been superintending the Chicago gallery of C. D. Mosher for some time and was 3 4 about to leave for South America. After spending the centennial year in Philadelphia, John went to work for the Callao 4 Mining Company in Venezuela. With his health failing, he left South America by ship for Philadelphia but died at sea 4 on September 16, 1878, leaving a widow with three children. 4

Solomon was born in Michigan to parents from Massachusetts in April of 1853, last of the six or more children of Solomon and Sophia Gilbert. He was identified as Porter in each of the cited census reports. His father was a physician, and by 1870 Porter had a step mother that was his senior by only eight years. He was enumerated "at home" in 1870 and 1880. Mary was born in Michigan to German parents in September of 1858, and she married Solomon in 1886 or 1887. They never had children. Solomon's gallery was opposite the water works about 1895, and it was on Front Street in 1899. Most of his stereo views were anonymous, but "Mary milking by Gilbert" was printed on the negative of one view, and "S. P. Gilbert, St. Clair" was blind stamped into the mounts of others. "S. P. Gilbert, No - 13. June A.D. 1902" was stamped on the backs of another group of stereographs with numbers up to at least 44. His stereo camera seems to have been used more for family snap shots than for commercial views, and his subjects included local streets, buildings and scenery, a circus parade and performance at Port Huron, a family excursion to the high rollway on the Au Sable River, and Niagara Falls. "S. P. Gilbert, ARTIST, Gallery Opposite Water Works, St. Clair, Mich." was stamped or printed on the backs of 7 by 11 buff mounts carrying 5 by 8 inch sepia prints, including one of the steamer "Unique." He was an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. The negatives of some post card photographs were lettered with such titles as: "St. Clair High Views by Gilbert" or "Catholic Church and Parsonage by Gilbert." Negatives of a series of postal views of a tragic interurban collision were numbered up to at least 14 and marked "SOL." His business included picture framing in 1912. Solomon had a succession of partners in the undertaking business through 1917, and then continued as S. Porter Gilbert. Mary seems to have passed away some time after 1910, and by 1920 Solomon had a wife named Clair. She was born in New York to a Canadian father and a mother from Indiana in 1868.

Elmer was born in New York State to a mother from Vermont in May of 1856, the eldest of five children. They all were living in 1870 and 1880 with their mother, Mrs. Elisabeth Gillam. Emily was born in England in December of 1863, and she was brought to America in 1866. She married Elmer about 1882, and their sons were born in Michigan: George in September of 1884, and Orange in July of 1887. Elmer was enumerated in 1900 in Lapeer County's Rich Township, where Silverwood was the only village. However, Clifford was only three miles east of Rich Township, and that may have been where Elmer was working. Emily was a widow by 1920, when she was living in Detroit with the family of her elder son.

George was born in 1822 in New York State, second of the four children of Mrs. Mary (Annin) Gillett and Gersham Benedict Gillett III. Eliza H. Blood was born in Massachusetts about 1814, and she married George on February 4, 1847. In 1850 they were living on a farm neighboring that of his parents. His wife seems to have died between 1858 and 1860, and was buried next to George's parents, to whose home George had returned by 1860. By 1862 his elder sister Lucretia had opened a gallery in Saline. Revenue stamps were affixed to nearly half of George's cartes de visite, mostly two cent, but some one cent and three cent stamps. His subjects included Randolph Rogers statuary, an engraving of the University of Michigan campus, Professor Louis Agassiz of Harvard University, U of M professors and many members of the U of M class of 1865. These messages were printed on the backs of some of his cartes de visite: "Negative Preserved. Special attention given to enlarging ambrotypes, or old pictures to any size desired, or colored in India Ink, Water and Oil colors in a superior manner." or "Copies can be furnished at any time. Old pictures copied & enlarged to any size & colored in India Ink, Oil & Water Colors, by a first class artist." or "Entrance to Gallery in rear of Stebbins & Wilson's Store. Copies can be furnished at any time." George employed Samuel B. Revenaugh for a year or more before selling the gallery to him and two associates. Revenaugh & Company were identified as successors to G. C. Gillett on cartes de visite from Kelley's Block in Ann Arbor. George remained unmarried in 1870 and 1880, and in 1880 was boarding with the family of a man who worked in his tile yard. Three of the other six boarders also worked in the tile yard.

Herman was born in Michigan to parents from New York in 1862, and no siblings appear in the available records. He was living in 1870 and 1880 with his mother, Mrs. Adeline Gillett. It is possible that his father was a Civil War casualty, but no evidence of this has been found. Her father emigrated from Germany and Nettie was born in Kansas in 1872. She married Herman about 1895, and they never had children. By 1930 Herman was a widower.

His father came from Massachusetts and John was born in New York on August 10, 1865, third of the six sons of Alonzo and Abigail (Wright) Gillett. He was called Frank as a child and in the gazetteer for 1901. John used photograph mounts from Grass Lake with his name spelled "J. F. Gillette." Jennie was born in Michigan to parents from New York in February of 1879, and she married John in 1899 or early in 1900. During the first year of their marriage they were sharing their home with John's twice widowed mother, Mrs. Abigail W. Norton. Their daughter Erma was born in Michigan in 1901 or early in 1902, and their son Wade was born in California in 1903. By 1920 John was a widower, and his daughter Erma seems to have been adopted by Jennie's sister and her husband. His son Wade continued to live with John through 1930. John's oldest brother Charles was working as a photographer in John's studio in 1920. John died at San Francisco on August 21, 1947.

Lucretia was born in Cayuga County of New York state, probably in the summer of 1820. Her parents were Mrs. Mary (Annin) Gillett and Gersham Benedict Gillett III. Her brother George was born two years later, and her sisters Ann and Delia were born between 1831 and 1838. Lucretia never married and remained with her parents as long as they lived. The family had lived in Cayuga, Monroe and Genesee Counties of New York State before moving to north-central Illinois in the 1850s and then to Saline in 1858. Brother George also was listed as a Saline daguerrean artist in 1860, and had opened a gallery in Ann Arbor by 1863. Their mother Mary died in 1865. Their unmarried sister Ann, who had been living on her own for several years, by 1870 had returned to the family home which she operated as a boarding house for the next twenty years. "Miss L. A. Gillett, Artist, Saline, Mich." was printed on Lucretia's early cartes de visite, which included a view of a rural home in a snow covered rolling landscape. Two or three cent revenue stamps were affixed to some, and later "Negative preserved. Old pictures copied to Card or Life size, and Painted in Oil, Water Color or Pastel." was printed on others. She photographed two cats resting comfortably in the seat of a bent wood chair, and two women pretending to fish from an obviously phony boat. The NPA monogram of the National Photographic Association was printed on some of her card photograph mounts, probably the last on which she was Miss L. A. Gillett. She was identified as "L. A. Gillett" or just "Gillett" on her later card mounts and on all of her cabinet mounts. In 1874 she contributed $3.00 toward eliminating the debts of the NPA. The well known photographer of Yellowstone Park and western scenery, F. Jay Haynes, is said to have "... completed his apprenticeship in photography with the owner of a studio in Saline, Michigan,..." in 1875. Since Lucretia was Saline's only photographer in that era, she apparently was Haynes' tutor. Her father died in 1875 and left his property to his three daughters. Lucretia was among the first subscribers when she contributed $10.00 toward the erection of the Photographic Hall for the 1876 Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia. Miss Laura A. Green worked for her as a receptionist and photographic assistant and lived in the Gillett boarding house prior to opening her own gallery at Manchester in 1888. Lucretia sold the Saline gallery in March of 1890 to George E. Waterman, who operated it as a branch of his Ypsilanti business and advertised it as "Miss Gillett's old stand." In order to be with their sister, Mrs. Delia Shepard, Lucretia and Ann moved to Long Beach, California, and Lucretia died there in 1894 at the age of 74.

Orville was born in Michigan to parents from New York in September of 1863, the son of Zadock (often Ladock) and Emily Gillett. His sisters Ella and Minnie were born here between 1858 and 1861. Zadock was 32 years old when he enlisted at Saginaw as a corporal in Company E of the 29th Michigan Infantry on September 3, 1864. He was mustered into the Union Army on the same day, and the regiment left on October 6 for Nashville, Tennessee. They were sent to defend Decatur, Alabama, and arrived just in time to march into the rifle pits under a galling fire with the coolness of veterans. Though the Confederates outnumbered the defenders three to one, their attacks on Decatur were repelled on October 26, 27 and 28. Men of the regiment engaged the enemy several times in Tennessee during December while out on post duty or escorting trains. Then they were assigned garrison duty at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, until they were mustered out of the army there on September 6, 1865. Zadock was paid with his regiment when it was disbanded on September 12 at Detroit. Miss Edith Malcomb (or Malcolm) was born in Michigan in June of 1866, and she married Orville in 1886 or 1887. They never had children. Orville advertised in 1896: "Photographs, Portraits, Picture Frames, Best Cabinet Photos $1.00 per dozen. Palace West Side Studio, 55 West Bridge Street,... Go to Gillett's Studio for Finest Photos at Lowest Prices. Fine Mat Finish on Fancy Cards, $2.00 per dozen." Some of Orville's employees were: apprentice Morris L. Cook in 1892; clerk Mrs. E. M. Gillett and photographer Albert A. Aman in 1893; assistant Miss Edith Gillett, retoucher Miss Ella E. Cram and operator Carl Ericson in 1895; Rachel S. Malcomb, retoucher in 1895 and clerk in 1897; photographer Clyde F. Green in 1897, 1898 and 1900; retoucher Ora E. Wines and photo printer John G. DeVries in 1898; Mrs. Laura Green, clerk in 1898 and retoucher in 1900; apprentice Nathan P. Hoskins in 1900; Arthur G. Gillette, retoucher in 1900, photo printer in 1901 and photographer in 1902 and 1903; retoucher Elizabeth C. Parady from 1901 through 1904 and in 1906; retoucher Blanche M. Parady in 1902; Ralph B. Putney, photographer in 1903 and photo printer in 1904; photographer Fred M. Van Campen in 1907; clerk Jessie M. Hudson in 1907, 1908 and 1910; and photographer Soloman Feingold in 1910. Rachel S. Malcomb probably was related to his wife, and Arthur G. Gillette was a cousin.

Arthur's parents were born in Michigan, but he was born in Texas on August 25, 1880, and became a slender man with blue eyes and black hair. His wife and son were born in Michigan: Blanche Grace (Cassidy) Gillette in 1882 and Orla in 1902. He and Orville A. Gillett were cousins, and his last name was spelled Gillett before 1904. He probably occupied the same studio building from 1904 through 1922, for most Grand Rapids addresses changed between 1911 and 1912. He employed Frank M. Findlay as a photographer in 1909, and Leonard A. Ver Sluis as an apprentice in 1913. Blanche was his assistant in 1920. They provided a home from 1910 through 1930 for Blanche's English mother, Mrs. Lena Cassidy.

At the Seventh Annual Convention of the Photographers Association of America at St. Louis in June of 1886 “once the medals were all awarded the Committee desire to tender Gilling of Detroit, Mich., honorable mention for his enameled photographs.” There was no photographer with such a name in Detroit, so this may have been a garbled reference to Charles A. Millard.

Edwin was born in Michigan to parents from Pennsylvania in May of 1859. He was second of the three sons who were living in 1870 with their mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Gillis. Ida was born in Indiana to parents from New York in June of 1859, and she married Edwin in 1882 or 1883. They had no children. "Dealers in Picture Frames.... Duplicates can be had at any time for one shilling apiece." was printed on the card photograph mounts of Brown & Gillis from both Galesburg and Three Rivers. "... for one shilling apiece." was crossed out on some Three Rivers mounts. At Three Rivers Edwin was a "PHOTOGRAPHER and dealer in PICTURE FRAMES. First-Class Photographs and Satisfaction Guaranteed. Copying, Enlarging and Babies Photographs a Specialty." On 6 by 4 inch paper folders carrying tintypes was stamped: "ED. GILLIS, PHOTOGRAPHER. Baby Pictures A Specialty. Three Rivers, Mich." He also produced some fine stereoscopic views of Three Rivers, and shamelessly pirated stereographs by George Barker of Niagara Falls and other eastern photographers, leaving their imprints partially visible in his copies. Edwin succeeded Palmiter & Warrant at Kalamazoo, where he offered "Pictures Framed in Artistic Style." Printed on some mounts was: "EDWIN GILLIS, Artist in Photography, Copying and Enlarging a Specialty. 101 W. Main St., over Kalamazoo Nat. Bank.... Copies of the Cabinet can be had at any time." On April 25, 1889, he applied for a patent on a Negative Holder for use in a developing tank. When Patent Number 425,420 was granted to him on April 15, 1890, Edwin had assigned one-half to James W. Struthers, a Kalamazoo produce and seed merchant. Edwin was succeeded as Lawton's photographer by the Shaefer Brothers. He was involved with mining in 1910. Ida was a widow by 1920, when she still was living in Kalamazoo.

Jerome was born in New York State in July of 1845, fourth of the five sons of Nathaniel B. and Arametta Gilman. He claimed to be 17 years old when he enlisted at Ann Arbor for three years in Company A of the First Michigan Lancers on October 21, 1861. He was mustered into the service on November 6, 1861, and later deserted. Veteran photographer James M. LeClear was the senior partner in LeClear & Gilman. Frances was born in Wisconsin in 1856 or early in 1857, and she married Jerome about 1878. Their daughter Mary was born in Illinois in May of 1880. The surname was spelled "Gillman" in the records more often than it was spelled "Gilman."

Will was born in Indiana to parents from New York on May 21, 1884. His brother Harry was born in Michigan in 1878. Their mother, Mrs. Jennie (later Jeanne) E. Gilmore, married George Watson about 1892. This couple shared a home with Harry and William in 1910 and 1920. In 1910 they had a boarder named Isabelle Alvord who was born in New York about 1885 and who was a photographer. William was tall with blue eyes and brown hair, and he called himself a Home Portrait Photographer in 1916. He explained in 1917 that this meant "Portraits Made at your Home Exclusively...." Louise (later Louisa) was born in Michigan about 1891, she married William when she was 28 or 29, and she continued to work as a librarian for the Detroit News for a couple of years. Their daughter Marilyn was born in Detroit about 1921.

Arthur was born in Michigan in August of 1882 to Michael C. and Caroline Gingrich, who came from Canada and Indiana. All of his grandparents emigrated from Germany. He grew up in Lincoln Township of Osceola County with two older brothers, two older sisters and a younger sister. That Arthur had enrolled from Michigan in the Illinois College of Photography was reported early in 1906. Emily's father came from New York, she was born in Michigan about 1883, and she married Arthur in 1908 or early in 1909. Their children were born in Michigan: Caroline in 1911, Oren in 1912, Ruth in February of 1915, and Bessie in August of 1918.

Morris was born at Gorki, Russia, on January 25, 1892, he became an average sized man with light blue eyes and dark brown hair, and he immigrated in 1914. Sophie was born in Russia about 1893, and she came to America in 1908. They both grew up speaking Yiddish, and they married in 1918. Their sons were born in Detroit: Earl Benson Ginsburg in July of 1918, and Daniel Ginsburg 1922 or early in 1923. The change in address from 993 to 7727 Mack Avenue during 1920 was due to sweeping revisions in the Detroit numbering system, rather than to relocation. "GINSBURG STUDIO, 7727 MACK AVE., DETROIT, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of studio photographs of family groups and individual children. By 1930 Sophie had become Sonia, Morris had become Maurice, and he was a naturalized citizen of the United States.

His father emigrated from the Saxony region of Germany, his mother emigrated from the Bavarian section of Germany, and Frederick was born in Michigan on March 8, 1857. Mary was born in the Hanover region of Germany in February of 1853, was brought to America as a child, and married a man from Germany named Eckhart. Their four children born in Michigan included William in July of 1875, John in December of 1876, and Bertha in March of 1881. Mary's second marriage was to Frederick about 1891, and these three of her children had taken the Ginzel surname and still were sharing the Ginzel home in 1910. Bertha and her husband, Milton Davis, were living with Frederick and Mary in 1920. By 1930 Mary was a widow living with her daughter and her son-in-law, who now was managing the furniture business. Frederick's partner in the photographic business was veteran photographer Richard J. Lynch.

Miss Maggie J. Preston was born in Canada to Scotch parents about 1850. Phillip Frank Glascoff, usually called Frank, was born in the Bavarian region of Germany in 1845 or 1846, and was the son of George and Augusta Glascoff. Afraid that his father would keep him from joining the army, he enlisted as a private in Company H of the 17th Michigan Infantry at Marshall as Frank White on July 3, 1862, and used this name throughout his military service. He was captured at Spottsylvania Court House on May 12, 1864, and was kept for nine months in prisons at Andersonville, Georgia, and at Charleston and Florence, South Carolina. Frank was paroled at N. E. Ferry, North Carolina, on February 27, 1865, and a couple of weeks later was sent to Camp Chase in Ohio. He rejoined his regiment in time to be mustered out of the army as a sergeant with his company and honorably discharged at Delaney House, D. C., on June 3, 1865. Back in Albion he became a stone cutter and a dealer in marble and granite. Maggie was 24 and Frank was 28 when they were married at Corunna on September 1, 1874. Their sons, David and Robert, were born at Albion in 1875 and 1877. Frank's health, and particularly that of his stomach, had been ruined by his incarceration in the south, and he died of heart disease at Albion on March 17, 1891. Maggie also had a bad heart, and she died at Albion on June 8, 1895.

Robert was born at Hudson, New York, on August 14, 1818, second of the five known children of Richard Bunker Glasier and Rachel Anna (Hutchings) Glasier. The surname often was spelled Glazier. Maria was born in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, on December 8, 1813, the daughter of Jacob and Rachel (Balderston) Walton. She married Robert in 1842 at Saline, Michigan, and their children were born in Ann Arbor: Rachel on December 31, 1843, Lydia on November 29, 1845, George on October 20, 1847, and the twins Amy and Mary on September 18, 1849. Amy died as a child. Robert was a devout Quaker and was reputed to be a conductor on the underground railroad. He was enumerated as a daguerreian artist in 1860, when he and John M. Scott were business partners and next door neighbors. Robert and Maria were sharing their home in 1880 with Rachel, Lydia and Mary as well as three university student boarders. Robert died at Ann Arbor on January 5, 1889, and Maria lasted another year until June 15, 1890. The burials were in Forest Hills Cemetery.

Francis was born in Canada in 1856 or 1857, and probably was the son of William and Mary Glass with at least two older sisters born in Canada. His father was an Irish Methodist clergyman and in 1880 Francis was living with his widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Glass, who was born in Massachusetts. He some times was listed as Frank Glass. Gussie was born in Canada in 1861 or early in 1862, and she married Frank when she was 19 or 20. Their son Frankie was born in Michigan about 1883, and their daughter Minnie was born in Minnesota in April of 1885.

Anthony's parents, John and Mary F. (Okum) Glaza, emigrated from the Polish region of Germany, and he was born in Michigan on February 18, 1892. He was the third of their four sons, and was the younger brother of the John F. Glaza who is the subject of the following entry. The negative of a post card photograph of the crew posed in front of the United States Life-Saving Station at Eagle Harbor was marked "A. F. GLAZA, DEC. 4, 1913." Anthony was awarded a Gold Life Saving Medal on July 15, 1914, by the United States Coast Guard. The typed legend: "Photo by A. F. Glaza" was added to the negative of a postal photo of the Catholic Church at Eagle Harbor which was postmarked in September of 1916. Winifred Ida Tucker was born in Michigan on October 28, 1895, third of the eight children of life saver Charles A. and Flora C. Tucker. She and Anthony married in 1916, and their children were born in Michigan: Mildred in October of 1918, Anthony in 1920, Charles in 1922, and Ruth in 1923. The steamer City of Bangor was carrying 248 new Chrysler automobiles when she went aground off Keweenaw Point on November 30, 1926. The crew got ashore, built a fire as a beacon, and were rescued the next day by a 36-foot motor lifeboat commanded by boatswain Anthony Glaza. Though the City of Bangor was abandoned where she lay, the insurance underwriters had the ice chipped away and holes cut in the hull to retrieve the cars. A post card photograph of some of the Chryslers being driven over the ice banks along the shore of Lake Superior en route to Copper Harbor on February 20, 1927, was inscribed in the negative: "A. F. Glaza." Anthony was a Warrant Officer in the United States Coast Guard in 1930. He died in August of 1966 at Western Springs in Cook County, Illinois. Winifred lived on in Illinois until February of 1990.

John's parents came from the Polish region of Germany and he was born in Michigan on January 30, 1889, eldest of the four sons of John and Mary F. (Okum) Glaza. The preceding entry is about his brother Anthony. Jessie J. Race was born in Michigan to parents from Wisconsin on August 8, 1882, and she married John about 1911. Their children were born in Michigan: John on December 6, 1912, Race (later Lawrence) on March 19, 1914, Enid on January 10, 1916, and Robert on May 10, 1920. The negatives of postal photographs of "Circle Ridge" on the bay shore at Grand Marais and of nearby Sable Falls were both marked "GLAZA - 1924" and "J.F.G." was lettered on the negatives of other post card photographs of Grand Marais. Jessie and the children continued to live in Grand Marais while John was in charge of the Two Hearted River Coast Guard Station. John died on January 26, 1966, at Milford, Michigan, and Jessie lived until January 4, 1968.

Eli was born in Michigan in August of 1843, third of the five children of Charles and Jane Glover. Sarah B. Latta was born in New York in November of 1849, the daughter of Alfred and Martha Latta. She married Eli about 1873, and each of their children was born in a different state: Grace in Utah in November of 1874, Edith in Oregon in March of 1879, Arthur in Michigan in August of 1882, and Sheldon in Washington in December of 1891. Eli applied for a patent on September 28, 1880, covering an Album in which the pages were attached with metal hinges, and Patent Number 243,772 issued to him on July 5, 1881. Patents on this Album had previously been granted by Belgium, Italy, France, Germany, Austria, Spain and England between October 15, 1879, and September 23, 1880. On May 16, 1881, Eli filed an application covering a Clasp for Albums, and Patent Number 250,066 was granted to him on November 29, 1881. The business of the Art Album Company, and later the Metal Back Album Company, was based upon these patents. From an application filed June 1, 1882, on a Combined Pocket Knife and Rule, Patent Number 273,081 issued to Eli on March 13 1883. Eli filed applications on January 12 and June 5, 1889, and was granted Patents Number 421,266 and Number 421,267 on February 11, 1890. The first covered an Album or Picture-Exhibitor with multiple leaves which rotated vertically within a case, and the other was for a pedestal-like Stand or Holder for Albums of the conventional kind. Eli and Sarah still were providing a home in 1920 for Sheldon, who was a geologist for the State of Washington.

His parents came from Kentucky and Pennsylvania, and Lycurgus was born at Sangamon City in Logan County, Illinois, on August 5, 1858, the son of William E. and Christina (Ream) Glover. Her father came from Virginia and Ida was born in Illinois in September of 1863. She married Lycurgus in 1883 or 1884, and they never had children. For the Detroit Publishing Company between 1901 and 1911, Lycurgus photographed city streets, buildings, factories, monuments and overviews as well as resorts and events in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Ohio, the District of Columbia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. In Michigan he took photos at Ann Arbor, Calumet, Charlevoix, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Hancock, Mackinac Island, Marquette, Petoskey, Port Huron, the St. Clair Flats, Sault Ste. Marie and Wyandotte. Lycurgus and Ida still were together in 1900, but by 1910 he was free to marry again. Alice Maude Potts was born on the Isle of Wight on September 21, 1877, and she married Lycurgus at Cincinnati, Ohio, on May 5, 1910. Their daughter Thelma was born at Detroit on March 31, 1912. Two 7 by 9 inch photographs of the Michigan Central Railway terminal and yards were copyrighted in 1916 by L. S. Glover. Lycurgus was divorced and rooming alone with a Detroit family in 1920. He became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers' Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921. He and his daughter Thelma were among the seven lodgers with a Los Angeles couple in 1930. Lycurgus died at Los Angeles on May 29, 1935.

Mary was born in Ohio in 1833 or 1834. "MRS. GLOVER'S Gem and Art Gallery. Pictures from 25 Cents to $3.00 per Dozen." was printed on the pasters of tintypes in carte de visite sized paper frames. The listing in 1873 was for Mrs. W. H. Glover. William H. Glover was a Kalamazoo photographer from 1865 until 1872, and a Grand Rapids photographer between 1875 and 1877. Mrs. Sarah Glover of Grand Rapids was identified as his widow in 1883. Mary and William may have been divorced, and Mary seems to have married Clark F. Johnson after William's remarriage and death. As Mrs. Mary M. Johnson, she continued to operate the gallery at 116 Main Street until 1883 and then moved across the street. Please see also the entries for William H. Glover, Clark F. Johnson and Mrs. Mary M. Johnson.

| Fred was born in Michigan to an English father and a mother from Vermont in October of 1859, last of the four known children of William and Sarah Goddard. One William Goddard said that he was 44 years old when he enlisted at Flint as a private in the 29 th Michigan Infantry on August 30, 1864. He was mustered into the Union Army on September 3, and the regiment left on October 6 for Nashville, Tennessee. They were sent to defend Decatur, Alabama, and arrived just in time to march into the rifle pits under a galling fire with the coolness of veterans. Though the Confederates outnumbered the defenders three to one, their attacks on Decatur were repelled on October 26, 27 and 28, 1864. William died of disease on January 12, 1865, at Jefferson, Tennessee. Fred was boarding in 1880 in the home of Charles Jackson, who had just closed his photograph gallery to concentrate on his furniture business. Henry C. Moore probably was Goddard's photographic partner. Fred was 45 years old when he married for the first time. Grace was born in New York State about 1869, and she was 21 years old when she married a man from Iowa named Gibson. When she married Fred in 1904 she brought along her fifteen-year-old son Warren Gibson. |         |   |

| Anthony was born in Michigan to parents from the Irish Free State on March 31, 1868, fourth of the five children of Patrick and Johanna (English) Godfrey. Alberta Bertie Schultz was born in Detroit on June 6, 1878, and she married Anthony in 1899. Their son Ralph was born in Detroit in 1900 and died as a child. Their daughters also were born in Detroit: Edna Mary on March 1, 1902, and Helen Louise on February 18, 1906. Anthony employed William H. Manning as a photographer in 1893 and 1895, and David M. Kerr as a photographer in 1895. His associates in A. Godfrey & Company were Henry P. Strong in 1893, William H. Manning from 1897 through 1905, and William A. Lininger from 1906 until 1914. Lininger was sole proprietor in 1915. Anthony had acquired commercial experience with Alvord, and A. Godfrey & Company emphasized this aspect of the business from the beginning. "A. Godfrey & Company, Commercial Photographers, 41 West Fort St...." was stamped on an 8 by 10 print of the interior of the old Detroit Museum of Art. They exhibited other interior views at the Detroit convention of the Photographers' Association of America early in August of 1895, and advertised as commercial photographers in 1897, when they were making a specialty of amateur work. After 1902 they were also dealers in photographic supplies, and in 1916 and 1917 they advertised copying and lantern slides. A series of photographs documenting the construction of the Detroit Yacht Club during 1921 and 1922 was made by Godfrey & Grossman and bound into book form. After seven years as Anthony's partner, Joseph L. Grossman was sole proprietor of Godfrey & Grossman in 1926 and formed Grossman & Knowling in 1927. Anthony was enumerated as a retired photographer in 1930, and was 71 years old at the time of his death in Detroit on February 1, 1940. |           |     |

James was born at Sinnwald in the Canton of Saint Gallen, Switzerland, on November 4, 1881, the only son of Andre (or Andrew) and Lizetta (or Elizabeth) Goeldi. His sister Lydia was a couple of years older, and his sister Minna was a couple of years younger. His parents immigrated in 1888, and James sailed from Le Havre, France, on the ship La Tourain in April of 1893 bound for New York. He became a citizen of the United States when his father was naturalized on September 21, 1896. He was a stout man five feet nine inches tall with a fair complexion, brown eyes and dark brown hair. James seems to have visited his homeland twice. He obtained a passport in September of 1904 with the intent of returning to America in 1905. He obtained another passport in May of 1912, and later left Hamburg on the ship Pennsylvania of the Hamburg-Amerika Line on September 14, 1912, with New York as his destination. In 1915 James offered photo retouching, wash drawings, and bird's-eye views, and specialized in phantom drawings and sectional motors. His studio was at 650 Woodward Avenue from 1915 until 1918. James and his sister Lydia still were single and living with their widowed mother in 1920. Katherine was born on February 27, 1883, and she was brought to the United States from Germany in 1884. She and James married in 1920, and their son Richard was born in 1921 or early in 1922. Their daughter Gretchen was born in May of 1925. They were living in Pleasant Ridge in 1930. Katherine died on August 5, 1975, and James lived until January of 1977.

John's parents emigrated from Germany. He was born in Michigan on September 29, 1877, and became a short man with grey eyes and black hair. Celia was born in Ohio in 1878 and married John in 1900. Their son Ralph and daughter Gladys were born in Michigan in 1901 and 1902. "Birds Eye View of Buick Factories, Flint, Mich. Copyrighted June 1910 By J. M. Goepfert." was lettered on the negative of a 3 ½ by 11 panoramic photograph produced as a double length post card or mounted on a 5 ¼ by 13 ½ board. "L. P. MASON'S RESIDENCE, BAY PORT, MICH. Photo by J. M. GOEPFERT" was lettered on the negative of a postal photograph postmarked in 1911. Celia was a department store saleslady in 1925 and 1926, when she was living in the home she and John had occupied in previous years. John was not mentioned in Flint directories after 1924. May was born in Michigan to German parents in 1877 or early in 1878, and married first when she was twenty years old. By 1930 she was married to John.

Ellen was born in Canada in July of 1859. Her first marriage to a man from New York resulted in the births of Lena and Blanche in Michigan between 1881 and 1884. Her second marriage about 1899 was to Frank Goff, who was born in Indiana in February of 1857 to a couple that had emigrated from England. In 1900 she was helping to raise two of Frank's sons and six of his daughters ranging in age from one to eighteen, plus her own daughters. By 1910 Ellen was living on the farm of her parents, Amos C. and Marie O'Reilly, and was not caring for any children.

His father came from New York and Frank was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in April of 1846, first of the four children of B. J. and Julia Goff. He and his brother George and his sister Ellen were living in 1870 with their widowed mother, who seems to have been quite comfortable financially. Frank was living by himself in 1880, and was divorced and boarding with an Elkhart family in 1900. Wausau, Wisconsin, had a photographer from 1884 until 1902 that was identified as Frank L. Goff in one source and as F. Lee Goff in another.

August was born in July of 1841, emigrated from Germany in 1855, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States. Agnes was born in Canada to Scottish parents in June of 1847, and she crossed the border in 1865. She married August about 1873, and they raised two children. Their son Charles was born in Michigan in April of 1874. By homesteading they obtained title in December of 1889 to 160 acres in Turin Township of Marquette County near the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. Their farm was just north of the village with a post office called Turin, but known as McFarland by the railroad and on modern maps.

James was born in Georgia on September 27, 1884. He became a five feet eight inch man weighing 120 pounds with brown eyes and black hair. Lillian was born in Tennessee in 1894, and she married James when she was 21 years old. They never had children. Lillian was listed without an occupation in 1920, though she was providing for one boarder and twelve roomers. James was among the first five black men to open photographic studios in Detroit. John J. Theus was his partner from 1925 through 1927, when they advertised: "... Photographs, Enlargements and Panorama Pictures, Groups and Weddings." In 1929 James also had a restaurant at 2101 Joseph Campau Avenue, but Lillian was enumerated as the proprietor of the restaurant in 1930. Another James Goins died in Detroit on September 8, 1966, aged 73.

Elisha was born in Kentucky in March of 1838, fourth of the nine children of Henry and Rebecca Goldman. He married Miss Julia Bowen about 1856. Their daughter Alphonsine was born in 1857 and lived to marry Calvin Camp. On July 12, 1862, Elisha enrolled as a corporal in Company C of the 71st Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He was mustered out of this regiment on October 29, 1862. Bronsons Harbor was in Berrien County, Michigan. In January of 1864, 334 veterans of the Twelfth Michigan Volunteer Infantry re-enlisted in Arkansas and returned to Michigan on furlough. Elisha said he was 25 years old when he enlisted at Buchanan in Company C of the Twelfth Infantry on February 6, 1864. The veterans and new recruits of the regiment assembled at Niles for the trip to Little Rock, Arkansas, where they arrived on April 1, 1864. Their assignments involved long marches, frequent skirmishes, picket and guard duty. They fought on June 26 at Clarendon and on September 4 at Gregory's Landing, Arkansas. During this period Elisha was hospitalized at Camden, Arkansas, with malarial fever, which left him deaf in his left ear. In October of 1864 the regiment moved to De Valls Bluff, Arkansas, and was separated into detachments that were posted wherever needed for the following year. The Twelfth assembled at Camden, Arkansas, in January of 1866, and Elisha was mustered out with the regiment on February 15, 1866. His wife Julia died at St. Joseph in 1866. Sara Ann Littlewood was born at Watervliet to English parents on May 24, 1857, the daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Barrit) Littlewood. She and Elisha were married at Kansas, Illinois, on July 19, 1872. They were living together at Watervliet in 1880, but Sara soon returned to Kansas, Illinois. She married Sylvester Oar there on October 22, 1885, and died there in 1949. On May 6, 1885, at Holton, Michigan, Elisha married Miss Mary E. Slater. Mary was born in Ohio in December of 1852 and was blind. She had been educated in a school for the blind. Their daughter, Bertha L. Goldman, was born at Benton Harbor on April 28, 1888, and lived to marry a man named Epperson and to care for her mother during her last years. Elisha died of disease at Harper, Kansas, on August 30, 1903, leaving 50-year-old Mary with a small house and lot. Mary was seriously ill for two years prior to her death on April 28, 1911.

Edward was born in Michigan to a mother from Maine in December of 1874, the son of Albert Edward and Mary Ann (Graham) Goodell. His brother Charles was born at Saginaw on August 21, 1870. His father died at Flushing on August 26, 1879. In 1880 Mary Ann and her sons were living on the farm of her parents, James and Hannah Graham. Along with co-inventor William B. Haskins, Edward filed a patent application on a Locking Attachment for Photographic Apparatus on May 15, 1899. The purpose of this invention was to prevent the shutter from being actuated until the film roll had been advanced properly. Patent Number 636,036 was issued to the inventors on October 31, 1899. Edward was living at Ecorse in 1900 with a maiden aunt. He married for the first time when he was 42 years old. His bride, Flavia, was born in Texas to a mother from Louisiana about 1880. 1 2

Willard was born in Connecticut in May of 1871, second of the five children of John H. and Fanny M. Goodfellow. Her father emigrated from Scotland and Mayte was born in Canada in May of 1872. She immigrated in 1890, and she married Willard about 1891. Mayte went back to Canada to give birth to Jack in April of 1893, but their son Willard was born in Michigan in September of 1894. Benjamin Jacobson was secretary and treasurer of the Goodfellow Film Manufacturing Company, which was located at room 21 in the Newberry Building. The Detroit Film Exchange was a Manufacturer, Renter and Dealer in Moving Picture Films and Supplies in Suite 24-27 of the Newberry Building in 1907, and in Suite 14-20 of the Newberry Building in 1908. Willard and Mayte were living with the family of their younger son in 1920, but Willard was free to marry again about 1922. His spouse was named Birdie, and she was born in Pennsylvania in 1897 or early in 1898. Willard died in Los Angeles County on March 22, 1957.

William was born in England in March of 1866, second of the ten children of William and Louisa (Madson) Goodfellow. The family immigrated in the early 1870s, and they spent a few years in New York before moving to the Michigan copper country. William was living with the family of a brother-in-law in 1900. He used the post card format with his blind-stamped "Goodfellow, SOUTH RANGE, MICH." for studio portraits, including a uniformed South Range baseball player and a uniformed Baltic baseball player, as well as for views of South Range and Painesdale. He produced a great series of a Fourth of July parade at South Range. William never married. He was living with the family of his brother John in 1920, and with the family of his brother Charles in 1930.

His parents emigrated from England, and Thomas was born in Canada in 1840 or 1841. On October 13, 1863, he enlisted at Worth in Saginaw County as a private in Company B of the Eleventh Michigan Cavalry. The regiment was returning from a raid early in July of 1864, and was about half way between the Big Sandy River in Virginia and its camp at Lexington, Kentucky, when Thomas was kicked in the groin by a mule that he was leading to water. He suffered from exposure while being transported to the regimental field hospital where he was treated for two or three weeks before he was transferred to General Hospital Number One in Lexington. Two months later he spent a two-week furlough back in Sanilac County and then ten days in barracks at Detroit before returning to his regiment. His health had not improved, so early in December he was sent for two weeks to a hospital at Louisville, Kentucky, and then to a hospital between there and Cincinnati. Late in March of 1865 he was transferred to a general hospital at Camp Douglas in Chicago. Thomas was discharged from the army at Chicago on May 26, 1865. He married Miss Evelina Waterman, who was born in Canada about 1840. Their son, Charles T. Goodman, was born on June 15, 1876. Eight Huron Avenue was over the First National Bank at the corner of Huron Avenue and River Street. On July 6, 1879, a severe wind storm demolished his photograph stand and tore a portion of the large sky light from the roof of his gallery. Thomas produced tintypes in paper sleeves, and in 1881 made a specialty of enlarging from old pictures. In 1883 he was 5 feet 9 ½ inches tall with a light complexion, brown hair and hazel eyes. His first wife died at Saginaw in 1896, and Thomas married May C. Connors there in 1897. He was identified in the 1900 census as Thomas H. Goodwin, and some of the census information does not agree with the pension record. Thomas died on February 27, 1905.

John was born in Michigan about 1840, second of the five children of Nelson and Rebecca Goodrich. He was boarding on the farm of a young couple in 1860. John was said to be a 21 year old resident of Genesee County when he enlisted at Fort Wayne in Detroit in Company F of the Second Michigan Volunteer Infantry on June 5, 1861. Company F was drawn mostly from the uniformed Flint Union Greys. The regiment left Detroit for Virginia on June 6, was quartered on Washington Heights near the chain bridge, and first saw action at Blackburn's Ford on July 18. While many regiments ran off in confusion, the Second with its brigade coolly covered the Union retreat from the first Battle of Bull Run. They wintered near Alexandria, Virginia, and in the spring of 1862 took part in the siege of Yorktown. Fighting at Williamsburg on May 5 cost the regiment 17 killed, 38 wounded and 4 missing. At Fair Oaks on May 31, 500 men charged across an open field against ten times their number, and lost 17 brave fellows in that one desperate essay. One of the many wounded that day was John, who was discharged for disability at Detroit on August 18, 1862. He used at least four different imprints on cartes de visite from Holly, including one which read: "Photographed by J. R. Goodrich, HOLLY, MICH. NB. Negatives kept. Duplicates can be had." Revenue stamps were affixed to some of his cartes but not to others. No Veterans Pension Record was found for John.

Roy was born at Fenton to Daniel Edwin and Jennie (Shields) Goodrich on March 6, 1894. He was living with his divorced mother from 1900 through 1917. She was working at home as a laundress in 1910, and was said to have ample funds for her own support in 1917. Roy was a tall slender man with blue eyes and black hair when he was inducted into the army at Flint on March 4, 1918. He was sent to Greenleaf, Georgia, where he became a private in Provisional Ambulance Company L. He was soon transferred to Camp Merritt, New Jersey, and to the Medical Detachment at St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken, New Jersey. He and nineteen year old Miss Lillian Loehr were married at Hoboken on February 7, 1919. He was promoted to first class private on March 10, and he was discharged from the service on June 19, 1919. His mother came from Massachusetts and Winford was born in Michigan on September 30, 1879, youngest of the four sons of Osman E. and Carry Goodrich. The opening of a gallery in Pender by Mr. Goodrich was anticipated in the spring of 1900. Winford was living at Pender in June of 1900 with the family of his brother, Arthur Goodrich. Leona was born in Iowa to a mother from Illinois on December 17, 1880, and she married Winford about 1902. He advertised nationally in the autumn of 1903: "WANTED - A young married man with good habits and personality wants a permanent position with someone wishing a strictly first-class, all-around workman who is alive to the interests of his employer; state salary you will pay, but don't offer $12.00 or $14.00 per week, as I will not consider such propositions. She was Gertrude Watson before she married William O. Goodridge in 1879 or 1880. Their sons William O., Junior, and John F. Goodridge were born at East Saginaw in 1883 and 1885. Their daughter Altena was born there in February of 1891, nearly six months after the death of her father. When Gertrude moved to Geneva, William's estate retained an interest in the business, and the surviving brother, Wallace, operated as Goodridge Brothers until 1919. Gertrude and her three children were enumerated in the household of Wallace L. Goodridge in June of 1900. She remarried, and returned as Mrs. Frederick B. Jackson to Saginaw where her home became a gathering place for the Goodridge family and the place where Wallace Goodridge spent his final weeks.

Glen was the youngest son of Glenalvin J. and Rhoda Cornelia (Grey) Goodridge, and was born in Pennsylvania in August of 1861. By 1890 he had accompanied his mother to her former home at York, Pennsylvania, and had opened a barber shop there. He married Miss Virginia E. Brown in 1893 or 1894, and their son was born a few years later. The son was not enumerated in the censuses for 1900 and 1910. Virginia was a widow by 1930.

Glen was the eldest son of William C. and Evalina (Wallace) Goodridge, and was born in 1829 at York, Pennsylvania. His father, a former slave, was a prominent citizen of York with many business and real estate interests in addition to his barber shop. Glen took lessons in daguerreotyping from Joseph Reinhart during the three months that the Virginia artist worked at York in the spring of 1847, and continued to learn during subsequent visits to Philadelphia. He succeeded Reinhart in the rooms over China Hall in July of 1847 and occupied them until the spring of 1848, when he moved to a private study in his father's home on East Philadelphia Street. For several years he took daguerreotypes in what leisure time was afforded by his teaching responsibilities, but in January of 1851 he opened a full time gallery in Centre Hall, the tallest building in York. Centre Hall was erected by his father near the northwest corner of George and Main Streets, and had two large gables and a skylight over the fifth floor gallery which consisted of the Sky Light Operating Room, a Ladies' Private Room and two large work rooms. Glen and sixteen year old Miss Rhoda Cornelia Grey were married on June 10, 1851, and between 1853 and 1857 had a daughter and two sons. During the 1860s a third son was born. The Second Premium for a case of daguerreotypes was awarded to Glen at the 1853 York Agricultural Society Fair. He acquired the exclusive right to the ambrotype for York County, introduced this medium to the citizens of York in the summer of 1855, and was awarded the premium for the best ambrotypes exhibited at the 1856 York County Fair. Family and personal financial reverses sent him back to teaching in September of 1859, but in the spring of 1861 he returned to photography with a gallery across Centre Square from his former location. He produced stereoscopic views of York, and soon opened a branch gallery twelve miles east in Columbia, where he usually worked on Mondays. He seems to have employed his brothers Wallace and William in the Hartmann Building gallery. On August 28, 1862, Glenalvin was indicted for the rape five months earlier of a young white woman with a diverse reputation. He was tried in November and found guilty on very questionable evidence which indicated that Wallace was more probably the father of the woman's child and that she had been paid rather than forced. After two motions for a new trial had been rejected, Glen was sentenced to five years in the Eastern Pennsylvania Penitentiary on February 17, 1863. His father began strenuous efforts to obtain his release, and finally prevailed upon Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania to grant a full pardon to Glenalvin on December 13, 1864. Glen moved his family to East Saginaw and joined his brother Wallace in the third floor gallery which had already been established in their joint names at the northeast corner of Washington and Genesee Avenues. He took an active part in the photography business and such social activities as the Colored Debating Society, of which he was recording secretary in 1866. Some labels adjacent to revenue stamps on the backs of carte de visite sized paper sleeves of Goodridge Brothers tintypes offered "... Photographs, Ambrotypes, Ferrotypes, and the durable ALBATYPE on Porcelain, which are more beautiful than any other style of Likeness." while others mentioned "Stereoscopic Pictures, Portraits, Cartes, Imperials, Large Photographs." Their advertising identified them as portrait and landscape photographers with the largest and best skylight in the state, who took pictures in all the modern styles and executed first class work for reasonable charges with satisfaction warranted. Their daguerreotypes and ambrotypes won prizes at the 1866 and 1867 Saginaw County Fairs. In May of 1867 Glen went to visit his father and sister at Minneapolis, Minnesota, and he was still there on November 14, 1867, when the tuberculosis which he had contracted in prison proved fatal. John Jezierski's book about the Goodridge Brothers includes a much more detailed account of Glen's life and reproduces a number of his daguerreotypes and ambrotypes.

Wallace was born to William C. and Evalina (Wallace) Goodridge at York, Pennsylvania, on September 4, 1840. He attended a school for African-American children at York where his elder brother Glenalvin was sometimes the teacher. He probably worked in Glenalvin's ambrotype gallery in the later 1850s. He apparently fled to East Saginaw from York during the summer of 1862 to avoid paternity charges. He seems to have established the Goodridge Brothers gallery in anticipation of Glenalvin's arrival, and was advertising locally in January of 1865, only four weeks after Glen was released from prison. Ambrotypes by the Goodridge Brothers won prizes at 1866 and 1867 Saginaw County Fairs, but their advertising emphasized tintypes and paper photographs from the beginning. Following Glen's death in November of 1867, William, who had been working with his elder brothers, was promoted to full partnership in the business. He was responsible for much of their outdoor photography over the next twenty years, while Wallace made most of the portraits and was the business manager. Printed on some of the pasters holding tintypes into their carte de visite sized paper frames was: "GOODRIDGE BROTHERS, Portrait and Landscape PHOTOGRAPHERS,... Carte Imperiale, Photographic and Stereoscopic Views, Photographs in India Ink, Oil, Pastel and Water Colors;... Albums, Stereoscopes, Rosewood and Gilt Frames for Sale." Similar pasters mentioned "... Photograph Views, Photographs on Porcelain, Muslin, Linen, Silk, Watch Dials, and in Cups. Transparent Ambrotypes for ornamenting Windows, &c. Invalid and deceased persons taken at their residence. - Photographs, Ambrotypes and Gems by the dozen." They sent cabinet photographs to the Philadelphia Photographer in 1869 as examples of their work. Wallace joined the National Photographic Association prior to the NPA convention at Cleveland in the summer of 1870, and the NPA monogram was printed on some of their card photograph mounts during the early 1870s. In 1871 the Brothers were making specialties of Rembrandt, Berlin and the new AMERICAN PORTRAITS, copying, enlarging in various mediums, and publishing Michigan Views. On October 22, 1872, fire broke out in a grocery store in the Crouse Block on the northeast corner of Washington and Genesee Streets. Before it could be controlled, the blaze swept through every business in the block including the third floor gallery which the Goodridge Brothers had occupied since 1864. Their losses totaled $3800, representing almost everything except five cameras, one of which was soon used to take stereo views of the rubble. Within days construction had begun on a new gallery on South Washington Street. The Brothers worked from a temporary location for a while, but by December their new quarters were nearly finished. The 15 by 66 foot single story building was in the middle of the east side of South Washington Street between German and William Streets directly opposite Smith's Opera House, and had a north side light as well as a sky light to enhance working on the ground floor. John H. Freney worked for the Goodridge Brothers at about this time, and in 1877 Joseph H. Gray was their general agent for Michigan, probably selling stereo views. Other employees were assistant operator James H. Morris from 1880 to 1883, assistant view photographer Arthur W. Brown from 1880 to 1887, Glen J. Goodridge from 1884 to 1889, photographer William Edwards in 1886, apprentice George W. Watson in 1890 and artist Otto A. Schulz in 1900. Many First and Second Premiums were awarded to the Brothers at Saginaw County Fairs through the 1870s and into the 1880s, and in 1878 they exhibited thirty frames including one with fifteen pictures of infants, others with views of the city and with railroad scenes, and a photograph with a porcelain finish. Their pastel portraits, cabinet photographs, landscape photos, miniature photos and stereo views won prizes at the State Fairs which were held at East Saginaw in 1874 and 1875. The New York Daily Graphic reproduced eleven views of East Saginaw in a full-page collage on December 3, 1878, printed a similar collage of Bay City two days later, and printed an entirely different page on East Saginaw on January 4, 1882, all from Goodridge Brothers photographs. Since 1873 the Goodridge residence had been adjacent to the gallery, and about 1882 the studio frontage was expanded southward in front of the residence. Many East Saginaw addresses were revised at about the same time. In the spring of 1883 competitors reduced the price of Cabinet photographs to $2.50 per dozen, initiating a price war which lasted more than a year. In November of 1884 Wallace was offering four cabinets or two panel photographs for $1.00. He was active in the Knights of Labor at this time, and was modestly active in the Republican Party and in state organizations of colored citizens during the decade. The Goodridge Brothers contributed 27 of the 94 views in Saginaw Illustrated published by H. R. Page & Company and the International Publishing Company in 1888, when they were successfully taking pictures at midnight by the flash process. The Forestry Division of the U.S Department of Agriculture purchased twelve 8 by 10 and two larger logging prints from the Brothers for exhibition at the 1889 Universal Exposition in Paris, France. Wallace was 49 years old when he married for the first time at Baltimore late in 1889 or early in 1890. His bride was Miss Margaret H. Jacques of Baltimore, about 35 years old and known as Maggie. She became active in the Zion Baptist Church as pianist and organist, and drew Wallace into other church activities. Following the death of William O. Goodridge in August of 1890 Wallace continued the gallery with William's widow as a partner, but she does not seem to have participated in the business. The facade of the gallery was remodeled at about this time. He advertised "Photographs in all sizes and styles in India Ink, Crayon and Pastille. Bromide, Platinum and Argentic Enlargements." Maggie worked in the studio as his assistant in 1894 and 1895, as did his nephews William O. Goodridge, Junior, from 1900 until his death in 1904, and John F. Goodridge from 1903 until 1908. Wallace planned to fit up a fine enlarging room with a capacity of 200 enlargements per day in 1900. A 27 page 5 ¼ by 7 ¼ booklet called Goodridge's Art Souvenir of Saginaw, Michigan, USA was produced in 1902 by the Albertype Company of Brooklyn, New York, which reproduced 147 Goodridge Brothers photographs. More than fifty of their views were reproduced as press printed post cards by various publishers between 1902 and 1910. In 1906 they were special photographers for the Michigan Central and Pere Marquette railroads, had expertise in X-ray photography, and Wallace was ready to "... teach photography in all its branches, or in any special department, instruments and accessories being furnished direct from the factory.... Kodaks and cameras for sale or rent, and a full line of photo buttons and jewelry, films and dry plates." Wallace served as Senior Grand Warden of East Star Lodge Number 6 of the Prince Hall Masons in 1905, and was treasurer of the Lodge from 1907 to 1922. He was elected vice-president of the newly formed Saginaw Professional Photographers Association in November of 1906. "Goodridge Bros. Post Card. Saginaw Semi-Centennial 1907. Fraternal Day." was stamped below the photographic view of an August parade in the business section. Wallace accidentally overturned an oil lamp used for drying prints on May 3, 1908, and the darkroom was instantly in flames. Though burned about the face, he managed to unlock and open the door and escape to give the alarm. The fire department prevented the fire from spreading to the front of the building but the photo rooms were gutted, some equipment was damaged, and fifteen picture backgrounds as well as the photographs on which Wallace was working were destroyed. Renovation cost nearly a thousand dollars and was partially covered by insurance. Several Goodridge Brothers panoramas were made from the spring of 1913 to 1918, which ranged in size from 6 by 24 to 10 by 42 inches. Maggie, Mrs. Wallace L. Goodridge, died in May of 1914. The 1915 Michigan Manual of Freedmen's Progress included a picture of Wallace standing in the doorway of his studio, and Mills 1918 History of Saginaw County reproduced more than thirty Goodridge Brothers photographs. Wallace was an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905, and probably long before that, and lost his pocketbook containing ten dollars to a Chicago pickpocket while attending the annual PA of A convention in 1920. He was 81 years old when he died of heart disease on March 3, 1922, at the Saginaw home of his sister-in-law. Burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery. Much more detail about his life and work was included in John Jezierski's book about the Goodridge Bothers.

William was the youngest child of William C. and Evalina Goodridge, and was born at York, Pennsylvania, on May 28, 1846. Evalina died when he was six, and he was raised by his sisters Emily, Susan and Mary. He probably had photographic experience at York before he accompanied some of his siblings to East Saginaw in the early 1860s. He was corresponding secretary of the local Colored Debating Society in 1866, and married 18-year-old Miss Alice Guin Hayner in 1867. They had no children and Alice died in January of 1874. By 1868 William was a full partner in the Goodridge Brothers gallery with most of the responsibility for outdoor photography, and a year later he was leading a small orchestra on festive occasions. In addition to portraits and copies of popular prints, Goodridge Brothers cartes de visite documented business streets, commercial and public buildings, the busy river and some local disasters. Pairs of cartes were taped together to form folding panoramas of such events as the 1870 flood. They were producing stereo views by 1868 on 3¼ inch high yellow mounts with the pairs of images no greater than 5½ inches wide, which included East Saginaw streets and buildings, F & P M Railway trains and structures, logging scenes and the 1870 and 1871 floods. Their later views were on a variety of mounts mostly 4 inches high with the width of the images ranging from 6 ¼ to 7 inches. Some identified them as "... Publishers of Plain, Colored and Glass Stereoscopic Views." and others had series titles such as: "In and about the Saginaws - the Great Lumber and Salt District of Michigan." and "Scenes in the Pineries of Michigan." A group of these logging views was sent to Anthony's Photographic Bulletin in the spring of 1875, showing lumber camps on the Tittabawassee River and the log banking ground at Averill. They produced more views of East Saginaw and a couple of Saginaw City, photographed the results of explosions, fires and the flood of 1876, recorded the mills along the river, and pictured the interiors as well as the outside of churches and commercial buildings in three dimensions. A 43-inch-long panorama of the flooded river front of East Saginaw with Carrollton and Saginaw City in the distance was made in 1876. The Brothers advertised in 1879: "Views Made in Any Part of the State. Every style of Picture known to the profession executed in a superior manner. Special View Photographers for Frank Leslie, New York Graphic, Detroit Lithographing Co. and F & P M R'y. Michigan Views published in Stereoscopic and Book Form..." By 1880 Gertrude Watson had become William's second wife. Their sons William O. Goodridge, Junior, and John F. Goodridge were born in 1883 and 1885, and their daughter Altena was born in February of 1891, nearly six months after the death of her father. As an assistant view photographer, Arthur W. Brown worked with William through much of the 1880s. The Goodridge Brothers used 3¼ by 5 inch Victoria and and 4¼ by 6½ inch Cabinet mounts for some single views of homes, mills and an inspection locomotive, and were "Publishers of Goodridge's Photo-picturesque Michigan Views of Points of Interest and Summer Resorts For Sale, including those of manufacturing of Lumber and Salt." They added stereographs of Bay City, Cheboygan, Ludington, Mackinac Island, Mackinaw City, Roscommon, West Branch, Lake Orion and other places in Oakland County to their views of East Saginaw and lumbering. Their stereo views of his East Saginaw commercial enterprises were used as an advertising medium by "Little Jake" Seligman. The Brothers made 20 by 25 inch mammoth views for the railroads in the spring of 1882, and began producing more single views ranging in size from 6 by 8 to 10 by 14 inches. They photographed social and business groups, commercial buildings, residences, and the police and fire departments of East Saginaw and Saginaw City. In the spring of 1883 William photographed seven Wright & Ketcham camps north of Averill with emphasis on the logging railroads, the big rollway at Averill, and the river drive to the mills at Saginaw City. He photographed logging operations in Schoolcraft County in the Upper Peninsula in 1885, in Otsego County in 1886 and 1887, in Iosco County in March of 1888, and was back at Averill for more 10 by 14 pictures in January of 1889. William was ill with a kidney infection for two weeks before his untimely death on August 17, 1890. Wallace continued the business with William's widow as a silent partner, and employed both of William's sons for a while in the early 1900s.

Albert was born in April of 1870 at Middle Rasen in Lincolnshire, England, the son of John Burkitt Goodson and Elizabeth (Gooseman) Goodson. He immigrated with his family in 1880, and later became a naturalized citizen of the United States. He and two younger siblings were living in 1900 with their widowed mother. Emily was born in 1869 or 1870 in Ireland, where she married a man named Adams. She gave birth to Gordon in 1892, shortly before they immigrated to America. Her son Frederick was born in Michigan in 1894. Emily married Albert at Detroit on September 16, 1903, and their daughter Dorothy was born in Detroit in 1904. A photographic journal carried this advertisement in the summer of 1903: "FOR SALE - Belle Isle Studio, situated in aristocratic residence district near Belle Isle Bridge; 5 car lines pass the door. Fitted to 16 x 20; modern and A1; opened one year; 800 negatives on hand; good prices; invoices $1,800; a snap; cheap for cash; good reasons for selling. Goodson & Best, 1379 Jefferson Ave., Detroit, Mich." Oval prints from the same negative were affixed to 9 by 6 inch mounts of Goodson & Best and of H. E. John's parents emigrated from France to the Netherlands, where he was born in 1845. He immigrated to America about 1866. Angelina was born in 1849 and she emigrated from the Netherlands about 1867. She married John a year or two later, and they became naturalized citizens of the United States in 1875. They never had children. John employed Elisha B. Neal as a photographer in 1889. He called himself an Artistic Photographer in 1891, when his specialties were fine cabinets and enlarging of all kinds of pictures. While John maintained them both, 110 Canal Street was called the "old" studio, and 330 Monroe Avenue was the "new" studio.

Thomas was born in Nankin Township to parents from New York on May 1, 1848, third of the four children of Harrison and Almeda (Shook) Gorham. His mother died in 1854 and by 1860 his father had married a widow named Emily with three young children. Her father was English and Ella was born in New York in December of 1850. She married Thomas about 1871 and their son Fred was born in Michigan or Kansas in 1872. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Harriet in July of 1887 and Myrtle in March of 1892. In addition to his photography, Thomas was an artist and a picture frame merchant in 1878, a picture frame merchant in 1882, and a dealer in picture frames and fancy goods in 1884. His grocery was described as a general store in 1898. He and Ella were still providing a home for their daughters in 1910, and Harriet was teaching in a high school. Thomas died in 1911 at Boones Mill, Virginia, and burial was in Oakridge Cemetery at Marshall, Michigan.

Joseph was born into a Yiddish-speaking family in Russia on November 21, 1880, immigrated in 1906 and became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1913. Jennie (later Dina) was born in Russia in 1887, she married Joseph about 1904, and she immigrated with him in 1906. Their son Ben was born in Illinois in 1906, and their daughter Sarah was born in Michigan late in 1908. Joseph advertised in 1913 as a "Photographer and Artist, Water Color and Crayon Work, Enlargements to all sizes." He was stout and of average height in 1918, and had brown eyes and hair. Studio portraits, including some in middle European ethnic costume, had "GORMAN'S STUDIO, 585 HASTINGS ST., DETROIT, MICH." printed on their post card backs. A naked baby and other studio portraits were in the same format with the substitution: "... 3419 HASTINGS ST...." This change in address was due to universal revisions of the Detroit numbering system, and not to relocation. Something happened to Dina, and about 1922 Joseph married Regina. She was born in 1896 or early in 1897, and she emigrated from Austria in 1921. Their son Seymour was born in Detroit in 1923 or early in 1924. Gorman's Studio, of which Joseph was always the sole proprietor, advertised in 1925: "Artistic Photographers, Water Color and Crayon Work, Portraits Taken Day or Night." Joseph died in Detroit on November 30, 1941, and Regina continued to live in Detroit for several more years.

Frank's father was born in the Polish region of Russia in September of 1847, his mother was born in the Polish region of Prussia in August of 1859, and they married about 1876. Their son Stanislaus (later Stanley) was born in Poland in May of 1880, and the family immigrated to America in 1882. Frank was born in Michigan on December 31, 1884, second of the eight children of Michael and Maryanna (Jenangafez) Gorzycki. He matured into a tall slender man with blue eyes and dark hair, and some time prior to 1918 his left hand was cut off. Isabel B. Wisniewski was born in Michigan on September 18, 1884, to parents who emigrated from the Polish region of Germany. She was eldest of the six children of Michael and Euphrosenia (Ceranski) Wisniewski. By 1918 she was married to Frank, and records of children from this union have not been found. Post card portraits of individuals and groups were embossed "F. J. GOZYCKI, . . CENTER AVE., BAY CITY, MICH." or "FRANKS, 207 CENTER, BAY CITY" or just "FRANK'S." In 1911 he was blind stamping postal portraits with "Frank's Studio" in script over "207 CENTER, BAY CITY" in smaller block capitals. How long Frank lived has not been determined, but Isabel died in Hampton Township of Bay County on March 27, 1980.

Henry was born in Canada of German parentage in 1870 and came to Detroit from Brantford, Ontario. Adeline (usually Lena) Plate was born in England in 1866 to German parents, and married Henry in Canada about 1890. Their three sons were born there during the next ten years, and they immigrated in 1908. Henry brought all three of his sons into his various photographic businesses. Clarence was identified as a photographer while his father was still an ironer, was managing the studio at 18, had the studio in his own name in 1916 and 1917, and was involved with one or more of the studios in some way most of the rest of his life. Robert started as a photographer for his father in 1919 or earlier. Edward followed his father's trade of ironer until 1921, when he too became a photographer. The change from 196 to 1234 Griswold during 1920 was due to sweeping revisions in the Detroit numbering system rather than to a change in location. Henry founded The Photo-Craft in 1919 and made Clarence the manager, but he was continually changing the organization of his businesses, titles of the officers, and the assignments of his sons. By 1924 he was proprietor of The Photo-Craft Studio, the Photo-Craft Gift Shoppe and the San Remo Studio. A year later The Rock Shop had replaced The Photo-Craft Gift Shoppe. Henry established the Professional Photo Company as commercial photographers on the third floor at 525 Woodward Avenue, specializing in theatrical work, panoramic views and banquet photos. In 1927 his wife Lena was president and he was vice president of The Photo-Craft Studio. The entries on his three sons indicate how their assignments varied. Henry died in Detroit on December 23, 1933, at the age of 63. Lena still was associated with The Photo-Craft Studio in 1939.

Robert was youngest of the three sons of Henry E. and Lena Gottlieb. He was born in Canada on December 5, 1899, and spent much of his working life in studios founded by his father. By 1918 Robert had formally declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States. The San Remo Studio was at 1234 Griswold Street from 1921 through 1926, at 215 State Street from 1928 until 1930, at 232 State Street from 1931 through 1939, and at 17190 Lahser Avenue in 1940. They offered studio and out-door photography in 1921, when the studio was open from 8:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily, including Sundays and holidays. In 1926 they featured passport and identification photos and quick service. Clarence A. Gottlieb was proprietor of the San Remo Studio in 1937, as was Mrs. Jeanette Gottlieb in 1939 and 1940.

Isaac was born at Clayton in Jefferson County, New York, on August 16, 1836, second of the six children of Willard and Sarah Elizabeth (Beecher) Gould. Willard died in 1849, leaving Sarah to manage the farm and raise her children on her own. On August 14, 1861, Isaac enlisted at Owosso as a private in Company F of the Ninth Michigan Infantry. He was mustered into the army with the regiment on October 15 and by December 1, 1861, was doing extra duty as a nurse in a hospital at West Point, Kentucky. He spent most of July in 1862 as a rheumatism patient in hospitals at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, and was there when Confederate cavalry under General Forrest captured the town on July 13. He was detailed as a train guard in September of 1863, and on November 8 fell into the Tennessee River while on such duty. Isaac re-enlisted on December 7 at Chattanooga, Tennessee, and spent one day in the hospital with rheumatism on December 16, 1863. He was returning from his veteran furlough on February 21, 1864, when the train derailed south of Indianapolis. His car ran into a field and tipped on its side. Two men fell across the aisle onto Isaac, badly bruising his right arm and side. In June and July of 1865, Isaac received another 30-day furlough, and he was mustered out of the army with his company at Nashville, Tennessee, on September 15, 1865. Emily C. Colburn was born in Cheektowaga Township of Erie County, New York, on October 29, 1841. Her family was living at Livingston when she married Isaac at Conway on March 8, 1866. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Lula on March 9, 1867, Fannie Lorena on August 13, 1870, Bessie Amelia on April 13, 1872, Kittie Belle on April 11, 1875, and Alice Cary on July 19, 1880. Isaac advertised in 1875 that he was "... now prepared to execute all branches of Photography with artistic skill. Also, has on hand the largest, best and most complete assortment of Mouldings, Frames, Pictures, &c. ever brought to this market, which will be sold cheap. Wood and produce wanted in exchange for work." After leaving the army, Isaac had lived in Shiawassee, Conway, Handy, and Livingston (later called Hamburg) as well as Fowlerville before settling at Corunna. He was seriously troubled by rheumatism once or twice a year until 1881, but then the pain became more or less constant. He was working as a carpenter and joiner early in 1884 when he applied for an Invalid Pension, and later was a shoemaker. By February of 1887 he was dependent on charity for part of his support, and he was enumerated as a shoemaker in 1900. Isaac died of heart disease at Corunna on November 16, 1905. Interment was in Pine Tree Cemetery at Corunna. Emily lived in Corunna on a pension until March 22, 1920.

Albert was born at Coldwater to parents from New York on September 25, 1864, third of the five children of Legrand and Susanna (Pelham) Gowdy. He grew up on the family farm. Ella Mabel Van Schoick was born at McDonough in Chenango County, New York, on April 2, 1871, and she married Albert on April 6, 1897. Their children were born in Michigan: Elsie Lenora on February 22, 1898, Mary Susanna on June 21, 1905, and Albert William on April 5, 1910. Albert's specialty in 1894 was fine cabinets, and one of them shows a boy with his large dog and his cat posed on a board and batten pallet against a rough board wall. Another shows a huge arch over the main street of Coldwater promoting William McKinley for president with a brass band playing on top of the arch. Albert advertised in 1900: "GOWDY For Fine Photos. GOWDY For Fine Photo Jewelry. GOWDY For Fine Photo Frames. GOWDY For Medallions...." He advertised again in 1902: "YOUR PHOTOGRAPH - Of course you want it taken in a manner to do the best possible justice to the subject. We study to please - to get the best possible lighting, and to attend to every smallest detail. We would be glad to see you at GOWDY'S PHOTO GALLERY. See us for photo brooches and medallions." Morton was born at Coldwater to parents from New York on January 17, 1860, first of the five children of Legrand and Susanna (Pelham) Gowdy. He grew up on the family farm. In 1889 the Gowdy Brothers offered: "The Finest Work in all the various departments of Photography. Rembrandts, Crayon Pictures and Babies' Pictures a Specialty. All WORK GUARANTEED to GIVE SATISFACTION. A Trial Order Solicited." They photographed Coldwater residences and funeral arrangements of flowers as well as taking the usual studio portraits, and one of their cabinet photographs shows a wagon full of people going through a huge tunneled tree, probably in California. Her father came from New York and Anna L. Gillett was born at Coldwater on December 16, 1871, the daughter of William F. and Mary L. Gillett. She married Morton in Bethel Township on August 6, 1891. Their daughter Ilah was born at Coldwater on July 18, 1893. Anna died on June 6, 1940, and Morton lived until July 7, 1943. 4 1

The twins Alphonse and Batiste Goyer were born in Prince Edward County, Ontario, on January 13, 1876, third and fourth of the eleven children of Alphonse and Clodia Goyer. The family immigrated in 1887, and the boys became citizens of the United States when their father was naturalized. The Alpena photographer was identified as Frederick Goyer, Junior, in the local directory, and as Alphonse Goyer in the 1900 Census. By this time Batiste was called John. "F. A. Goyer" in script, over "PINCONNING, MICH." in smaller block capitals was blind stamped into the 11 ¾ by 13 ¾ mount of an 8 by 10 photograph of a wedding party of seven young women and seven young men., and into a cabinet photograph of two couples in a horse drawn box sleigh with a background of railroad freight cars and some business buildings on Pinconning's Second Street. Fred was still dealing in jewelry in 1918, when he was a short man with brown eyes and gray hair. His nearest relative was his mother, Mrs. Clodia Goyer, who was living in Lawrence, Massachusetts. 4 3

Leonard was born in Prussia in 1842, the eldest son of Julius and Katherine Gradt. He and his brother Frank immigrated with their parents in 1849, and their brother Charles and sister Mary were born in Michigan between 1851 and 1855. Leonard was 22 years old when he enlisted at Flint in Company C of the Seventh Michigan Cavalry on February 13, 1865. He joined the regiment in Virginia. The Seventh fought successfully at Mount Crawford on March 1, at Waynesboro on March 2 and near Charlottesville on March 3, captured some canal boats on March 5 and destroyed part of a railroad on March 11. On March 30 the Sixth Pennsylvania and the Second U. S. Cavalry were retreating on the White Oak Road and being charged by the rebels. Though they had been in the saddle all night, the Seventh counter charged and routed the enemy. Those not captured found safety behind fortifications three miles away. In the final charge of the Battle of Five Forks on April 1, the regiment took many prisoners and pursued the rebels until after dark. On April 6 the Michigan Brigade interposed between two Confederate columns, completely isolating one and setting up the Battle of Sailor's Creek in which the entire isolated corps was captured. On April 8 the Seventh was approached by messengers sent to begin Lee's surrender negotiations. After the Grand Review in Washington on May 23, the regiment was ordered to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and then marched across the plains to the Rocky Mountains to quell Indian disturbances in that wide region. Leonard was mustered out of the army on December 15, 1865. Miss Wilhelmina (often Minnie) Busch was born in Michigan to Prussian parents in 1848, and married Leonard on July 27, 1867. Their children Louise, Charles and William were born in Michigan between 1867 and 1874, and their daughter Leonora was born at Milwaukee on May 18, 1886. The label on the back of a stereo view of a large public school stated: "L. W. GRADT, LANDSCAPE PHOTOGRAPHER, Saginaw City, Mich. Stereoscopic and Large Views taken to Order. Negatives will not be Preserved much over SIX MONTHS, during which time copies will be Made to Order." Leonard's photo of the little excursion side-wheeler steamboat Sea Bird was reproduced by a newspaper early in 1949. Leonard died at Milwaukee on April 8, 1887. His remains were sent to Saginaw for burial. Minnie had returned to Saginaw by 1889 and drew a Widow's Pension until at least 1928.

Anna was born in Wayne Township of Cass County, Michigan, on May 19, 1878, the daughter of Richard W. and Flora Ellen (Copley) Graham. Her parents were born in Michigan, but her paternal grandparents were Scotch and her maternal grandparents were from New York. She was sharing her home in 1900 with her partner and cousin, Edna Copley. Edna's father was the brother of Anna's mother. Charles Frederick Beeton was born at Craighurst in Simcoe County, Ontario, on August 12, 1869, the son of James and Martha (Gough) Beeton. He came to the United States in 1895, and he married Anna at Golden in Jefferson County, Colorado, on April 1, 1901. Charles was enumerated as a Denver druggist in 1910 and 1930, and as the proprietor of a clothing store there in 1920. He and Anna went their separate ways after 1910, and Charles married Edna Francis Smith about 1918. He died at his Denver home on January 19, 1933. Charles F. Lang lived from 1873 until December of 1952, and he married Anna some time after 1910. She ended up back in Michigan, and died at Dowagiac on October 5, 1970.

During the summer of 1891 Arthur was doing considerable business in East Tawas. Early in 1892 he was advertising: "... Get your residence and business places taken as the same will be done on shortest notice, and in the most artistic manner. A Specialty made on Family Groups...." By April he had moved his family to East Tawas, and in June he took a few negatives of the school buildings at East Tawas, together with more than a hundred of the scholars. He returned to his home in Tuscola County in the spring of 1893 after selling his photographic car gallery to his successor in East Tawas, G. B. Perry.

His father came from Pennsylvania and Edward was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in 1843, first of the seven children of William and Ann M. (later Hannah) Graham. He enlisted in Turner's Company (later designated Company H) of the Eighth Michigan Infantry at Ann Arbor on September 18, 1861, and was mustered into the army as a private on September 23. At Pleasant Valley, Maryland, on October 24, 1862, Edward was discharged from the Eighth Infantry so that he could enlist in Company B of the First Battalion of Engineers in the United States Army. He may have served with this company throughout the rest of the Civil War. Marilla Morey was born in Michigan in October of 1847, and she married Edward about 1867. Their daughter Florence was born in April of 1869, and their son Frederick was born in April of 1871. Edward advertised from Manchester: "Negatives preserved. Gilt and Rosewood moulding kept on hand. Frames of all sizes made to order on reasonable terms." He and Marilla were divorced on June 27, 1878. Marilla and her children were living in Manchester in 1880, and Frederick was providing a home for his mother in 1900 and in 1920 at Muncie, Indiana. Edward married Miss Nellie E. Jenkins at Devils Lake, North Dakota, on July 14, 1885. Nellie gave birth to Eva May on August 20, 1890, to Arthur William on February 8, 1893, and to Genevieve on November 13, 1894. Edward filed for an Invalid Pension in December of 1891, and was receiving $12.00 per month when he died on May 1, 1903. Hillsdale (Carson & Graham) PHOTOGRAPHERS on Howell st ..... 1873-1882 t m

William was born in Ireland in 1837. Mary Pollard was born in Ireland seventeen years later. She married William, and gave birth in Michigan to three children. Beatrice and James were born between 1875 and 1878, and Edna was born in January of 1880. Carson & Graham were successors to Andrew & Carson, and a printed label pasted on the back of one their card photographs read: "FERD. B. PHILLIPS. Age 2. Yr. 9. Mo. Taken Dec 29th, 1873." They contributed $5.00 to the debt fund of the National Photographic Association early in 1874. Besides the usual portraits, they photographed a Hillsdale business street in the card format, produced a cabinet photo of the Bawbeese Four Oared Crew, and made stereoscopic and single views of the Hillsdale College campus on 4 by 7 inch mounts. They also produced a 6½ by 8¾ view of the campus on an 8 by 10 mount with a great printed back extolling Hillsdale College as "... CHRISTIAN! THOROUGH! CHEAP!..." The Hillsdale gallery of Carson & Graham was totally destroyed by fire early in 1877. William was described as a daguerreian in 1880, and died in Hillsdale from consumption on March 7, 1882.

Graham, William M.

Kalamazoo COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHER at 1128 Division st ..... 1908-1911 K m

His father came from Vermont, and William was born in New York in 1853 or 1854. Laura Crego was born in New York six years later. She had been married once and had raised a child before she married William about 1909. He had survived two previous marriages. William stamped his name and address on the backs of 10 by 12 inch mounts of 6 by 8 photographs of dare-devils, one jumping into a water tank and the other standing on the seat of a bicycle coming down a long stair-stepped ramp, both from towers much higher than the three story buildings along the street on which they were performing. "Wm. M. GRAHAM, 1128 Division St. Group, View and Architectural PHOTOGRAPHER, also Commercial Work. Kalamazoo, Mich." was printed on the face of a 2¾ by 4½ inch card which carried a 1 by 1¼ photograph of a Kalamazoo business street. "W. M. Graham, Photo." was incised into negatives from which post card photographs were printed.

Grand Rapids Camera Club

About 25 local amateur photographers met to organize this club at the studio of Orville A. Gillett on February 7, 1899. The elected officers were: Leo A. Caro, president; Mrs. Etta Wilson, vice president; Charles Reeves, secretary; and Dr. J. C. Parker, treasurer. The first annual exhibition was held on June 22 and 23, 1899. They met every Friday evening at 23 Fountain Street through 1904, at 96 Fountain Street in 1905 and 1906, and at 74 Monroe Street until 1912, when this address became 93 ½ Monroe Avenue. From 1914 through 1922, demonstrations and inspiration meetings were held each Thursday evening from September to June at 2 Central Place, 12 Fountain Street NE, with occasional Field Days during the summer months. In 1920 the club belonged to the Associated Camera Clubs of America, and in 1924 meetings were in Room 401 at 44 Ionia Avenue SW. Some of the club presidents were: Carter J. Sawyer, a bookkeeper, in 1901 and 1902; Mrs. Eleanor W. Willard in 1903 and 1904; Charles Vander Velde, a bench hand, cabinet maker or foreman, in 1905, 1906, 1911 and 1912; George E. Fitch, a real estate agent, in 1907 and 1908; Edgar S. Gage, a clerk, in 1909 and 1910; William A. Rawson, a dentist, in 1913, 1915 and 1916; Hubert M. Long, an editor, in 1914; William M. Clarke, an architect, in 1917; Harry M. Kurtzworth, a teacher, in 1918 and 1919; and Alden H. Williams, a doctor, in 1920. Some secretaries were: John Thompson, a bookkeeper, in 1901 and 1902; Robert A. McGregor, a clerk, in 1903 and 1904; Mrs. Hogue Stinchcomb in 1905 and 1906; William A. Rawson in 1907 and 1908; Kryn Stoel, a cabinet maker, in 1909; Michael W. Shillinger, a teacher, in 1910 and 1911; Miss Fedora E. D. Brown in 1912 and 1913; Harriet M. Goodrich, a teacher, in 1914 and 1915; and Loa G. Winigar, a stenographer or advertising assistant, from 1917 through 1920. Other club members who held office were Mrs. Charles Alvin, Harvey E. Barnes, John L. Benjamin, Miss Vera Bennett and Hjalmar A. Clemetsen. No professional photographers were club members, but Edgar S. Gage was in the photo supply business in 1912, Fedora Brown gave her occupation as photographer in 1913, and Vera Bennett later had a photographic studio from 1929 until 1932.

Grand Rapids Photographic Club

Also called the Grand Rapids Amateur Photographic Club, the Grand Rapids Photographic Society and the Photographic Club of Grand Rapids, this club was organized in the spring of 1887 with a dozen members. Dr. J. C. Parker was president from 1887 through 1890 and again in 1892. Dr. E. S. Holman was president in 1891. The secretary was A. B. Richmond in 1887 and 1888, and then J. B. Barlow from 1889 to 1892. A. A. Barr was treasurer and librarian in 1887 and 1888, followed by N. Fred Avery in 1889. Avery was still librarian in 1890, and Ralph Teitsort was treasurer from 1890 until 1892. The membership was characterized as all new and amateurs in the crudest sense by the secretary in 1887, so the established professional A. A. Barr must have been a sponsor. The club's first outing was to Holland, Michigan, where they photographed the U. S. Life Saving Service station. A series of stereo views of the life saving facilities was later sent to The Photographic Times by A. B. Richmond. The club met on the first and third Mondays of each month at 7:30 p.m.; in 1888 at 72 Canal Street in the gallery of A. A. Barr, and from 1889 until 1892 at 15 Fountain Street, where A. B. Richmond and N. Fred Avery were principals of a photographic supply firm. J. B. Barlow reported in June of 1893 that the society had disbanded two or three years earlier.

His father came from Massachusetts and Charles was born in December of 1880 at Saginaw, Michigan, third of the four children of Charles L. and Helen Nellie (Ure) Grant. His sister Maud was born in Michigan in November of 1873, his sister Grace was born in Pennsylvania about 1877, and his brother George was born in Michigan in May of 1888. Her parents came from Ohio and Elfrinde Lenore Abbey was born at Saint Johns, Michigan, on June 2, 1885, last of the six children of Roland George Abbey and Angeline (Rice) Abbey. She was often called Elfa, and she married Charles at Chippewa Lake on July 8, 1903. Elfa gave birth to C. Loring Grant at Chippewa Lake early in 1909, and to Rose Lenore Grant at Chase on April 15, 1912. "Published by C. L. GRANT, Chippewa Lake, Mich." was stamped on the face of cyanotype photographs with post card backs mailed between November of 1908 and July of 1910. These photographs almost certainly were the work of Charles L. Grant. From signs on the building of C. L. GRANT, MD, it is evident that it served as the Chippewa Lake post office and was a drug store where post cards and ice cream could be purchased. Charles' services as a notary public also were available. Charles died at Manistee on September 2, 1854, and Elfrinde died there on October 27, 1973. 1 2 2 1 1 2 2 1 t t 1 t t 2

- Guy was born in Michigan in January of 1881, the son of Charles T. and Lucy Harriet Grant. Grace E. Brooks was born in Michigan in August of 1881, second of the three children of Stanley C. and Gertrude H. Brooks. As Caleb Stanley Brooks, her father was a professional photographer from 1864 until 1881. Grace married Guy about 1904, and their daughter Harriet was born in 1905. Their son Charles Stanley was born in March of 1910, but died as a child. Their daughter Alice was born in 1914 and survived. Guy and a fellow worker at the Marshall post office, William B. Welles, developed a modest photographic business, principally in photographic post cards. "Welles & Grant. Photo" or "W & G" was lettered on some of the negatives from which their post cards were printed. It was reported in February of 1915 that "At the close of the Washington banquet last evening G. Howard Grant took a flash light picture of the rooms with most of the banqueters still present. The result was very satisfactory....." Grace and her daughters were living in 1930 with her mother, and Guy could not be found. Grace was an order clerk in an appliance factory, and Harriet was a dietician for a sanitarium.

- Isaac was born in the Elma District of Perth County, Ontario, on July 20, 1871, second of the three known sons of John A. and Harriet (Green) Grant. His twin sister was Hannah Lavenia Grant. Isaac came to the United States in 1885, and by 1900 he was a naturalized citizen. At Bozeman he and two other photographers, Will H. Tippet and William Morgan, were boarding with a Norwegian bartender. Isaac purchased the Newberry studio from Victor R. Foreman in August of 1906, and he and his brother Walter began business there in September of 1906. "I. G. Grant" in script above "NEWBERRY, MICH." in smaller block capitals was blind stamped along the edge of post card photographs, including one of a logging train "PULLING INTO GERMFASK, MICH." Other postal photos had "Grant Bros" in script above "NEWBERRY, MICH." in smaller block capitals blind stamped along their edge. They included studio portraits, business street scenes, a boys club in uniform, a patriotic parade wagon and speakers' stand, and views of Helmer from negatives by Charles Fyvie. The same blind stamp was used on the mounts of larger photos, such as a 4 by 10 inch print of a girls' basketball team and a 6½ by 8½ print of a parade float on large mounts, and a 4 by 5½ print of the Newberry Public School on a 6 by 8 inch mount. Lettered on the negative of this print was: "Copyrighted By I. G. Grant, Artist, Newberry, Michigan, Jan. 1909."

Walter was born in California on April 2, 1879. His post card photographs of Albion included views of business streets, factories (some damaged by a tornado), the depot, schools, bridges, a hospital and the cemetery. His Albion College postal photos include the observatory, the library, the art and commercial building, Robinson Hall, the chapel, the athletic field and fraternity houses. "GRANT" or "GRANT PHOTO" was lettered on the negatives along with a brief caption and sometimes a two-digit number. Walter was a man of average height and weight in 1918, with brown eyes and gray hair. His wife's parents came from the Netherlands, and Anna was born in Michigan in 1878. When she married Walter about 1912 she brought along her fifteen-year-old son, Russell French. Anna gave birth to William Grant in 1915. Walter had an exhibit in floral hall during the Calhoun County Fair at Marshall in September of 1921. He gave a talk in October of 1921 to the Monday Club at Marshall on "Photography, Past, Present and Future." He advertised in 1922 that he would "be in Tekonsha Wednesday, May 24. Anyone wanting pictures made please drop a card to the Tekonsha P. O. general delivery before that date. The pictures will be made in your own home." Photographers of Marshall, Battle Creek and Albion were asked to bid on pictures of Marshall High School seniors. Only two responded, and Walter was chosen by the seniors to take their pictures. It was arranged for half the class to go to Albion on a Monday morning, and for the other half to go on the afternoon of the same day. Mrs. Anna Grant was proprietor of the Grant Studio at 110 East Erie Street from 1924 through 1926, and became official photographer for the White Star steamship line of Detroit. She and William J. Porr were married in the Presbyterian parsonage at Albion On July 26, 1926. Mr. Porr was prominent in Albion before he moved to California in 1902. Walter was enumerated as single in 1930.

William was born in Canada in 1865, eldest of the four known children of John A. and Harriet (Green) Grant. He came to this country in 1879, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1887. His wife and their two eldest children were born in Canada, Emelie (later Amelia) in 1875, Florence in 1893 and Edwin in 1896, and all became naturalized citizens of the United States. Their two younger children were born in Michigan, Leona in 1899 and Clarence in 1902. William has been assumed to be one of the St. Clair Grant Brothers because he definitely was associated with the businesses in Newberry and Germfask. The brothers advertised outside views and enlargements in 1914. Both of his sons were associated with William in the house building business in 1920.

Edward was born at Springfield, Massachusetts, on June 20, 1838, third of the four children of Ashley P. and Mary Ann (Lawrence) Graves. He grew up on the family farm and on June 20, 1861, he married Mary E. Cleveland. Their daughter, Emily Luella Graves, was born on December 27, 1862. Mary died on November 23, 1870, and in June of 1871 Edward married Cornelia (often Nellie) Cleveland. Nellie gave birth to Mary L. Graves on August 9, 1876. Edward succeeded Albion photographer Byron O. Fisher in rooms over Stone's dental office on Superior Street. About 1880 his corner gallery was opposite the Albion House. He offered Crayon, Ink and Oil Pictures per order from Erie Street, where he was succeeded by G. W. Upham. Edward died on June 14, 1897, and Nellie lived until December 21, 1901.

His mother, Alice Gray, emigrated from England and Edward was born in Michigan in October of 1866. He and his mother were living in 1880 with his English grandparents, James and Rachel Gray. Elizabeth was born in Michigan to a German father and a mother from New York in January of 1875. She married Edward about 1892, and their son Leroy was born in Michigan in October of 1897. "GRAY" was lettered on the negatives of postal photographs with such legends as: "RESIDENCE OF E. R. HARRIS, ELLSWORTH, MICH." and "SNOWFLAKE SCHOOL" and "ELLSWORTH, MICH" on a rural view along a railroad track. Similar cards numbered up to at least 27 show the tent city on Intermediate Lake of the Liberty Hunting & Fishing Club of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and the antics of some club members. Some of these cards were postmarked in August and September of 1908. "E. J. GRAY, ALPENA, MICH." was blind stamped on a series of post card photographs that showed firemen futilely hosing down a fire which started in the roof of a church and eventually consumed the entire building. Edward still was using the post card format for baby photographs in 1936.

Frank was born in Michigan to a father from Maine and a mother from Vermont on August 27, 1879, the only child of Henry and Maria Diantha Gray. He was five feet eight inches tall in 1918, with blue eyes and dark brown hair, and was sharing his home with his 72-year-old mother. He seems to have acquired the Detroit Copying Company in 1920 from its founder, Frank Baxter. At this time he was living next door to photographer Almon J. Tripp. Most Detroit addresses changed during 1920, when 103 became 329 Michigan Avenue. Frank was enumerated as divorced in 1920 and as widowed in 1930. His paternal grandparents came from Pennsylvania, his mother came from New York, and Edwin was born in Canada in 1852 or early in 1853, eldest of the four children of Michael and Sophia Graybiel. He immigrated with his family in 1868, and he became a naturalized citizen of the United States on June 19, 1874, in Lenawee County, Michigan. As an adult, he was 5 feet 7 ½ inches tall with a dark complexion, brown eyes and black hair. In 1880 he was single, and was living with his father. His Grand Central Gallery in Adrian was opposite the Gibson House and over Whitney & Wilcox's Bank, later called Whitney's Bank. His advertisement for 1881 was: "... Enlarging, Crayon Work, &c. Making 'Gems' a Specialty." and for 1883 was: "My Specialty is the INSTANTANEOUS PICTURE taken by the Emulsion Dry Plate Process. Just as fine a picture can be had by this process in Cloudy as in Fair Weather. ENLARGING, CRAYON WORK, &c., NEATLY DONE..." Printed on the back of some stereo views was "VIEWS OF GRAND LAKE, Presque Isle County, Michigan. SERIES NO. 1.... E. GRAYBIEL, Photographer,... Adrian, Mich." The 26 numbered views in Series 1 were listed on the mount, and one of them was dated July 29, 1882. George was born in Canada or Illinois about 1831, Annette was born in New York eleven years later, and they were 1 living in a boarding house in 1860. At this time George owned real estate worth $30,000 and had $10,000 in other 1 assets. The first of his 36 patents, Number 71,950, was granted to him on December 10, 1867. Ten of his first twelve p patents were related to pneumatic and electro-magnetic dental tools, and six were assigned to Samuel S. White of p Philadelphia, whose company is still important in this field. The last of the dental tools, a coupling for telegraph p instruments and an electro-magnetic motor were patented in 1876. George then turned his attention to grain binding, p and was granted five patents on automatic binding between 1877 and 1883. By 1880 he had a wife named Martha who p 1 was born in New York in 1844 or 1845, and sons Herbert, Albert and George born in Michigan between 1871 and 1
1878. His first patent on a photographic shutter was Number 342,693 issued May 25, 1886, followed by 362,211 on 1 p
May 3, 1887, 432,999 on July 29, 1890; and 473,188 on April 19, 1892. E. & H. T. Anthony acquired two patents on p pneumatic shutters: Number 208,956 issued to J. W. T. Cadett on October 15, 1878, and Number 316,564 granted to p Cullen C. Packard on April 28, 1885. Contending that shutters sold by New Jersey dealer George Murphy infringed p 3 these two patents, the Anthonys sued him about 1892. The shutters sold by Murphy were manufactured by George F. 3
Green, who assumed the burden of defending the suit. In the fall of 1894 the judge found that Cadett, and particularly 3
Packard, were the real and first inventors of the shutters, and so decided the suit in favor of the Anthonys. E. & H. T. 3
Anthony & Company put out a circular synopsising the decision and warning against handling shutters that infringed 3 their patents, whether the shutters were made by Green or by others. From 1886 to 1891, George was granted nine p patents pertaining to electrical trolley systems for transferring cash and parcels. Three additional patents in this field p issued in September and October of 1893, after George’s death. Mrs. Martha L. Green was executrix of his estate, and p 2 may have operated the photo supply business in his name. 2

| John was born in February probably of 1828, and he emigrated from England in 1842. Malvina was born in New York State about 1831, and she married John around 1852. Their children were born in Michigan: Ella about 1854, Charles about 1858, Frank about 1861, and Kate in August of 1862. An advertisement late in 1865 was for: "GREEN & JEFFERS' Photograph & Ambrotype Gallery! Eight beautiful card pictures for only One Dollar!... With a large NORTH SKY-LIGHT! (the best known light for making pictures) - with the very best of instruments, both of foreign and American manufacture,... We warrant satisfaction to all who may favor us with their patronage. Laura was born in Minnesota to parents from New York in June of 1869. Though the listings in 1892 through 1895 were for Miss Laura E. Green, she apparently married Clyde about 1891. Laura may have married someone else about 1885, for in 1900 she and Clyde were raising a daughter named Ella who was born in Minnesota in November of 1886. Ella was out on her own in 1910, but she was back at home in 1920 calling herself Eva. Laura was living in Washington State prior to her death there on December 29, 1950.

Rolland was born in Michigan in December of 1865, eldest of the three children of Israel H. and Sarah (Lindley) Green. Lottie Vance was born in Michigan in May of 1868, and she married Rolland about 1888. Their son Ronald was born in May of 1890. Minnie R. Taylor was born in Michigan in June of 1867, the daughter of William Oscar and Frances Ann (Truax) Taylor, and she married Rolland about 1897. She too had previously been married, and she brought along her two-year-old daughter Helen who took the surname Green. The children of Minnie and Rolland were born in Michigan: Charles on June 23, 1899, Rolene on March 28, 1902, and Margaret in 1907. Rolland and Minnie went their separate ways, and about 1911 Rolland married a lady named Blanch. She was born in Michigan to an Irish father and a mother from Indiana in 1880, and she never had children. He was often listed as Row or Rolla, and from Portland produced a cabinet photograph copied from an earlier image of a Civil War soldier. His purchase of the gallery at Alma was reported in June of 1898. He advertised nationally in the summer of 1899: "FOR SALE - $1200 buys two fine galleries; business averages from $225 to $350 per month; no opposition; low rent; best opening in the US for an ordinary workman; city population 5000, draws from 20,000; reason for selling, am going in the business on a larger scale; don't write if you haven't cash; will pay expenses if not found as represented; location alone worth the price. Address R. E. Green, Alma, Mich." His ads in a 1905 county directory were: "R. E. GREEN, MAKER OF High-Grade Photographs. If you patronize Green's Studio we will guarantee that you will be satisfied, both in work and courtesy. Ask yourself this question: Did I ever see a poor photograph that came from Green's Studio? The verdict will be never. - Our new style life-size portraits are the finest you ever saw. We made over 200 of these portraits during the month of December, and you never saw as fine a bunch of work. They sell regularly at $4.00, but when we have the negative we furnish them at $1.98. If you haven't a negative come in and have one made..." and "... no matter what you wish in the photo line, always see me before placing your order, all orders handled with the same care and promptness from a Kodak print to the best and largest that is made; bring the babies, I can outdo anyone on photos of babies, Green's photos never fade, its owing to the way they are made; my new life size (16x20) Sepia Platinoid Portraits are made from the original plate (or negative) thereby avoiding any change of expression..." He advertised nationally again late in 1905: "WANTED - At once, printer and photographer or good retoucher that can assist at other branches of the work; lady or gentleman; at reasonable salary; send photo of self and state experience and salary in first letter. Address R. E. Green, St. Johns, Mich." Early in 1906 his ad was: "FOR SALE - Will sell half interest in a $5,500 year photograph business for $1,350. This is a genuine proposition; reason - need competent partner - but must be right party..." He advertised again toward the end of 1907: "WANTED - First-class printer and finisher for Aristo Platino. Salary and experience in first letter. Address R. E. Green, St. Johns, Mich." At the request of an editor after his move to Ionia, Row explained his success at St. Johns: "The reception room ... is the most important of the business ... I make it a point to meet every customer who enters the reception room. I also make it a point to see them when they leave, and take care that they leave the studio perfectly satisfied. I do not believe that I have printed a dozen prints or toned a print or printed a dozen proofs in ten years, but I work my head and do my own operating and developing, and I see that everything is kept in line. I am a constant newspaper advertiser. That is my medium principally, although I do other advertising.... I never cut prices in my life. My work is not of the high-art order; it's just good, clean, average work. This I find is what 90% of the people want.... I did over twenty-five thousand dollars worth of business at St. Johns in less than 4 ½ years.... To make a success of the photograph business ... attend strictly to business and stick to it every minute.... Advertise, even if you use only a small space. Keep that space busy; change your ad. every issue.... Change your showcase at foot of stairs every three weeks. Put some new work in the case every week. Keep the case and glass clean.... By and by ... you will be employing two printers and a retoucher, even if you are in a small town of not over 4,000 people. If you are in a good district the country will give you from 25,000 to 30,000, and you won't have more than one or two competitors." Rolland died at Hastings on November 25, 1938, outlived by two of his wives. Minnie died on February 24, 1949, and Blanche lived until October 31, 1950.

Dolph was born on June 25, 1858, on a farm near Florence in Kent County, Ontario, the second child of James William and Martha Jane (Bears) Greene. Late in 1879 he was being paid $1.25 each for making cutter gearings, early in February of 1880 he cut his fingers while sawing a sill for a delivery wagon, and in August of 1880 he was working at brackets every week night until ten. At this time he and his brother Lou were renting four rooms in the upper floor of a Detroit house for five dollars per month. In 1884 Dolph's parents moved as homesteaders to Sidney, Nebraska, and he apparently accompanied or followed them there. He had been engaged to Miss Mae Reddick since 1879, and they were married at London, Ontario, on October 17, 1885. Their son, Walter LeRoy Greene, was born in Nebraska about 1890 and was known as Roy. Dolph's brother Lou married the sister of William J. Walker, who was a boyhood friend and became Dolph's partner in 1890. After Walker & Greene dissolved their partnership, Walker was arrested on Dolph's charge that he had stolen 150 negatives of prominent people. The court found Walker innocent, and in June of 1891 he sued Dolph for $5000 as compensation for his shame and suffering. In 1893 Dolph's specialty was fine portraiture in all sizes, with special attention being given to the copying and enlarging of old pictures and to crayon and pastel work. His work was said to be superior, and his prices were extremely moderate. Adelaide Johnstone was his retoucher in 1896. Dolph and Mae were providing a Los Angeles home in 1920 and 1930 for her widowed mother, Mrs. Sarah Redick. Dolph still was living in Los Angeles in 1947 with his second wife, Sarah. He died on February 16, 1948, and burial was in Inglewood Park Cemetery at Los Angeles.

Plymon was born in Vermont in 1827 or 1828 and his wife, Clara, was born in Maine at about the same time. He lost $400.00 in the Chicago fire of October 9, 1871, but was soon back in business. Clara gave birth to Harry in Illinois about 1875. The earliest stereo views of Mackinac Island produced by P. B. Greene were on yellow mounts from 28 Washington Street or 315 West Jackson Street in a series of twenty titles numbered from 200 to 219 with many variants. Many of them had a large purple label on the back stating: "... Photographed by P. B. Greene for FENTON & WENDELL." Fenton & Wendell kept a general store on Mackinac Island. The stereoscopic series was later issued on orange mounts from 315 West Jackson Street. Plymon attended the first convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880. His Mackinac series of stereo views was extended to at least Number 244 for publication on tall orange mounts from 315 West Jackson Street and from 342 West Adams Street. Many of these views were also available in the promenade format. Plymon pioneered the use of dry plates in Chicago, and died there on October 25, 1892.

Clarence was born in Adams Township on January 4, 1885, third of the four children of George Wellington Greening and his wife Ellen G. (Dimmers) Greening. "C. W. Greening, HILLSDALE" was blind stamped into the 6 by 7 inch mount of a photograph of six newsboys. Edith Mary Brunhart was born in Indiana to a mother from Ohio on February 22, 1885, and she married Clarence about 1906. Their sons were born in Michigan: Clarence on September 6, 1907, and Arthur on August 11, 1910. The senior Clarence was 27 years old when he died at Hillsdale on February 24, 1912. Edith remarried, but lived only until 1918.

Carlton was born near Miami in Whitley County, Indiana, on August 9, 1846, fourth of the six children of William and Mary L. (Ford) Greenleaf. His father was from New York and his mother was from Massachusetts. Carlton was 5 feet 5 inches tall with a fair complexion, blue eyes and dark hair when he enlisted at Kalamazoo as a private in the 24th Michigan Infantry on March 28, 1865. He was unassigned until May 24, when he was assigned to Company B. He was mustered out and honorably discharged at Detroit on June 30, 1865. He and 21-year-old Miss Frankie M. Wares of Dowagiac were married on February 16, 1871. In the spring of 1872 Carlton advertised in the newspaper of a neighboring village: "... Retouched and Burnished Photos a Specialty. Chromos, Stereosopes and Views, Frames, Albums & Cases AT BOTTOM PRICES. COPYING AND ENLARGING DONE, and work in oil, water colors, or India ink, if desired. Satisfaction Guaranteed." Frankie gave birth to two sons: Ray Greenleaf was born in July of 1876, and Roy Carlton Greenleaf was born in September of 1877. Carlton was publishing a newspaper in 1880 at Dowagiac. He was enumerated as a St. Paul artist in June of 1900. Carlton first applied for a pension in the spring of 1909 from New York City, when he was a 148-pound photographer specializing in landscape work. Frankie died on September 22, 1916. Both of his sons were living with Carlton in 1910 and in 1930. One source has him in Freeport from 1912 on as indicated above, but another enumerates him in Manhattan in 1930. Carlton lived 88 years, two months and seven days prior to his death from a cerebral hemorrhage on October 16, 1934. Chronic heart disease had required constant attendance by his daughter-in-law at the Freeport, Long Island, home of his son for quite a while. Interment was in Greenfield Cemetery at Hempstead, New York.

John was born in Hesse Darmstadt in 1838 or 1839, Emma Chipinger was born in Ohio six years later, and their son Edwin was born in Ohio about 1866. From Wooster in May of 1866 John advertised fifteen years of uninterrupted experience, much of it as head operator in some of the leading galleries of New York and Philadelphia and as a government photographer in the Military Division of Mississippi. In Adrian he was a portrait and landscape photographer, and produced stereo views of Adrian. He employed a Miss Burgett as an artist in 1867, and his brother-in-law John Chipinger as a photograpner and James R. Haight as an artist in 1870. John died of consumption in Adrian and was buried there on February 12, 1871. In reporting the death, editor Edward L. Wilson mentioned that he and John had worked under the same skylight eight years earlier. This was probably in the Philadelphia gallery of Frederick Gutekunst. The photographer Charles E. Wallin succeeded John in Adrian.

Gregg, Gilbert

Gregg was one of a group of commercial photographers that invaded Ironwood late in October of 1923 and pestered business owners to permit them to “shoot” some inside views without charge. Those that acquiesced found themselves and their personnel pressured to buy the pictures. The group moved on to Superior, Wisconsin, where a bottle of flashlight powder in Gilbert’s overcoat pocket exploded. The glass of every window and showcase in the store was broken by the explosion, and Gilbert was thrown through the front door and twenty feet onto the pavement. He was hospitalized but released when it was found that aside from painful burns and bruises his injuries were not serious.

Will was born at Springfield, Massachusetts, on June 20, 1866, one of the three children of William and Ellen R. (Severance) Gregg. His brother Burt was born in Canada in August of 1876. He married first about 1885, and his daughter Bessie was born in Michigan in April of 1888. May was born in Indiana in May of 1868, and she became Will’s second wife about 1899. They had no children. Will probably sold photographic supplies continuously from 1907 into the 1930s. A post card photo of Onaway’s State Street with the prominent sign of “WILL B. GREGG, SHOEIST GENTS FURNISHINGS” was mailed by Will as a New Year’s greeting in December of 1908, and probably was produced by Will. “Photo by Will B. Gregg, Onaway, Mich.” was lettered on the negatives of at least 19 numbered postal “Rainy Lake Views” as well as post card photographs of the Rainy River and other scenes in the vicinity of Onaway. “WILL B. GREGG, PHOTO SUPPLIES. ‘By The Way - When On Your Way - See Onaway’” was printed on the back of some of these cards in the early 1920s. The same motto was lettered on the large window at the front of Will’s shop. May was enumerated as a chiropractor in 1920 and 1930. Will died at Onaway on December 11, 1946.

Gottshalk was born at Berlin, Germany, on March 17, 1826. Adeline Byram was born in New York City on May 15, 1836, the daughter of William Burtzell Byram and Adaline (Williams) Byram. She married Gottshalk at Detroit on April 1, 1856. Their children were born in Detroit: Juanette about 1857, Louis in August of 1859, Adaline in November of 1862, Alice in the summer of 1865, and Sarony about 1878. Their younger son undoubtedly was named for the well known New York photographer Napoleon Sarony. Gottshalk succeeded George E. Hall in the Firemen's Hall gallery, and advertised both locally and state wide: "G. GRELLING & COMPANY GALLERY of plain and colored Photograph, Ambrotype, and Daguerreotype PORTRAITS, Miniature and Life Size, in oil and water colors, FIREMEN'S HALL, Jefferson Ave., cor. Randolph St., Detroit, Mich. DAGUERREOTYPES Copied and Enlarged to the Size of Life. Our Gallery is easy of access to Strangers from all parts of the Country visiting Detroit. There are on exhibition Portraits of the most distinguished of our citizens. As specimens of the superior style of the Art, we respectfully invite their examination and we take this opportunity of acknowledging our sense of the public judgment hitherto expressed in our favor." His "Sky-Light Daguerrean Gallery of plain and colored Photograph and Ambrotype Portraits ..." was advertised locally the next year, Luther P. Dodge was hired as a daguerrean artist, and the rooms in Firemen's Hall were extensively remodeled during the summer of 1857. Daguerreotypes and ambrotypes were not mentioned in his advertising after 1859, the year in which he moved to the north side of Jefferson Avenue. The gallery entrance was now one door east of Young Men's Hall, D. H. Donovan had replaced Dodge as daguerrean artist, and Charles Atkins was also with Grelling & Company. Gottshalk employed Robert D. Chappee as a clerk in 1863, and Wellington Watson as a photographer in 1864 and 1867. The NPA monogram of the National Photographic Association was printed on many of his card photograph mounts from 231 Jefferson Avenue, which was on the northwest corner of Randolph Street. He produced stereoscopic views of Detroit during this period. Portraits of Nancy Martin and of Walter Harper, the founder of Harper Hospital, were enlarged by Mr. Grelling and retouched in ink by George B. Ayres for exhibition in a Detroit store and then at the hospital. Birnie G. Chappee was a Grelling employee from 1871 through 1875, the last three years as a photographer. Gottshalk was succeeded by Gue & Carpenter in the gallery at 231 Jefferson Avenue. He was enumerated in 1860 as a daguerreian, in 1870 as an artist, and in 1880 as a photographer. He died in Detroit on October 20, 1888, survived by his wife Adeline, a son and three daughters. Adaline died at Galveston, Texas, on August 10, 1890.

Judson was born at Elmira, New York, on April 18, 1847, last of the nine or more children of Zelotes and Eliza Grenell. His father was a Baptist clergyman. Mary was born in Connecticut in June of 1850 and she married Judson about 1874. Their son Frederick was born in New Jersey in 1875 or early in 1876. Their son Ralph was born in Michigan in October of 1882. In the amateur competition sponsored by the Michigan Photographers' Association during their second annual meeting at Detroit in February of 1897, Judson was awarded the third prize in Class A for his three marine views, five inches and over; the first prize in Class B for three landscapes, five inches and under with or without figures; the second prize in Class C for three landscapes for three landscapes, five inches and over with or without figures; the first prize in Class D for three marine views, five inches and under; the second prize in Class F for three landscapes with or without figures; and the first prize in Class G for three marine views which could be of any size. Two other prize winners, Glenn R. Miner and Edward Van Fleet, also were associated with the Detroit Tribune. Judson belonged to the Detroit Camera Club in 1897. Judson and Mary visited England and returned on the S. S. Aurania, leaving Liverpool on July 12 and arriving at New York City on July 21, 1904. By 1920 Mary was gone and Judson had a wife named Margaret. Her father emigrated from France and she was born in Michigan on December 26, 1874. She brought along a son who was born in Ohio in 1900 and who became John Adams Grenell. Judson and Margaret visited England and returned on S. S. Scythia, leaving Liverpool on October 4 and arriving at New York on October 14, 1924. Judson died in 1930 in Pinellas County, Florida. Margaret died in San Diego County, California, on November 1, 1965.

His father came from Ohio and Armond was born at Knightstown, Indiana, to a mother from Maryland on June 11, 1860. To audiences of increasing size, he lectured more than two hundred times during his first five years with the Detroit Museum of Art. He was an active member of the Detroit Lantern Club in 1894. He delivered a major address to the Photographers' Association of America during their Detroit convention in August of 1895, addressed the first convention of the Michigan Photographers' Association on "The Relation of Art to Photography" early in 1896, and was the principal speaker at the 1897 PA of A convention at Celeron-on-Chautauqua, New York. When the Detroit Camera Club began planning for an exhibition in 1897, Armond arranged for the exhibition to be held at the Museum of Art. He undoubtedly arranged for this letter to be sent to Clarence M. Hayes in the spring of 1898: "Dear Sir - At a meeting of the Trustees of the Detroit Museum of Art, the following action was taken: It having come to the knowledge of the Board of Trustees that C. M. Hayes of this city possesses the negatives of some 400 prominent and well-known business and professional men of Detroit, that he be requested, if practicable, to furnish the Detroit Museum of Art with a set of photographs, that the same may be preserved for all time in the Museum of Art, representing this period of the city's prosperity, as shown by the portraits of its citizens, and that he obtain, if possible, with this collection, the autographs of the gentlemen they represent; that in conjunction with Director Griffith, this collection be arranged in such a way as to be most convenient to be adapted to the wall space of the Museum, and that the same may be preserved intact. The Secretary was instructed to notify Mr. Hayes of this action. Very truly yours, Fred E. Farnsworth, Secretary." Efforts to find traces of the 400 portraits at the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Detroit Historical Museum and the Detroit Public Library between 1995 and 2002 availed nothing. Armond never married. He was sharing his home in 1900 with his widowed mother Catherine and with three of his siblings who were single and in their thirties: Edwin, Georgiana and Genevieve. He visited Europe three times, returning to New York in October of 1903 from Palermo, Italy, in August of 1906 from Antwerp, Belgium, and in September of 1911 from Rotterdam, Holland. Armond made the welcoming address at the World's Fair convention of the PA of A at St. Louis, Missouri, on October 3, 1904. The museum lectures of this flamboyant mustachioed bachelor were very popular, and his unremitting policy of eclectic collecting rather than concentrating upon the best in the fine arts was controversial. He resigned suddenly in 1913. Armond was providing a home for his sisters Georgiana and Genevieve in 1910 and 1920, and for Georgiana ten years later. He died in California penniless and forgotten in 1930.

James was born at Oswego, New York, on September 28, 1843, eldest of the five children of Francis A. and Sarah Cole (Forshee) Grimes. He enlisted at Niles as a musician in Company K of the Sixth Michigan Infantry on August 6, 1861, and was mustered into the army with the regiment on August 20. He was a drummer. During the siege of Port Hudson, Louisiana, James' company was encamped in an area surrounded by swamp land and stagnant waters for three weeks in March and April of 1863. Due to exposure at this time he was incapacitated by rheumatism on May 27 with ensuing chronic diarrhea which kept him from duty for more than two months. The Confederates at Port Hudson surrendered on July 7, and on July 10 the Sixth Infantry was designated the First Michigan Heavy Artillery. Two weeks later, on July 28, 1863, the regiment was renamed the Sixth Michigan Heavy Artillery. James and many of his comrades re-enlisted at Port Hudson on February 1, 1864, and spent their veteran furlough in Michigan. While in action near Mobile, Alabama, on April 1, 1865, James was wounded in the middle finger of his right hand by a bullet. A week later, as the regiment was leaving Fort Morgan, Alabama, on a boat for New Orleans, one of the deck hands overturned a large can of boiling coffee, scalding James' right leg and foot. This accident kept him off duty for five weeks. With his company, James was mustered out of the army and honorably discharged at New Orleans, Louisiana, on August 20, 1865. Rachel D. Gratewell was born in the Wurtemberg region of Germany on January 3, 1847, the daughter of Frederick and Dora (Fritz) Gratewell. The family immigrated two years later. Rachel and James were married on April 10, 1867. Their son Freddie was born in February of 1868 and died in 1872. All of their children were born at Niles: William in January of 1870, Laura in December of 1872, George in January of 1874, Mellicent in December of 1875, Bertha in October of 1878, Bessie in December of 1880, Frank in March of 1883, and Lawrence in April of 1887. The rheumatism, the wounded finger and the scalded foot continued to trouble James, and he applied for a pension in April of 1889. At this time he was 5 feet 6 inches tall with a light complexion, dark hair and black eyes. In July of 1891 he was asking for an increase over the $6.00 per month pension he was receiving. On October 27, 1893, James suffered a stroke of apoplexy, was unconscious for two or three days, and his left arm and leg were permanently paralyzed. By October 1, 1895, James and his family had moved to Chicago, Illinois. He was afflicted by two additional paralytic strokes before his death on January 7, 1896. The body was returned to Niles for burial. His widow and six of their children stayed in Chicago. Rachel lived until July 27, 1919.

Her father came from New York and Elizabeth was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in March of 1863. While married to Fayette Partridge she gave birth to two children, including Carrie born in September of 1886, and she produced stereo views and portraits from Hamilton about 1891. Levi Groff was born in Pennsylvania to a mother from New York in March of 1865, last of the four or more children of Samuel and Roxanna Groff. He grew up on the family farm, and in 1893 or 1894 he married Elizabeth. In 1900 she was raising his daughter Lea who was born here in May of 1891 along with her own daughter. Elizabeth produced cabinet photographs and stereo views, identifying herself on the backs with a stamp of the same design as one she used earlier as Mrs. Fayette Partridge. One of her stereographs was dated July 12, 1903, and another was marked "View from Gallery Window in Aug. 1909.... Taken by Mrs. L. Groff."

James was born at Epley, Kentucky, to James W. and Olive Jo Ann (Page) Gross on August 9, 1898. He enlisted in the Marine Corps at Hastings on May 16, 1917, and was trained at Paris Island, South Carolina. He was a private in the 75th Company of the Sixth Regiment, U. S. M. C., at Quantico, Virginia, from July until they sailed for France in September or early October of 1917. He had pneumonia late in November, measles in January, and mumps in March of 1918. He still saw action in the Toulon Sector, took part in the Aisne Defensive, and fought in the Chateau-Thierry Sector, the Aisne-Marne Offensive and in Belleau Woods. During the battle of Soissons he was gassed and severely wounded in the hip by shrapnel while attacking through a wheat field near Parcy Tigney on July 19, 1918. He was operated on three times before he left France with the piece of shrapnel as a souvenir, and he arrived at Norfolk, Virginia, on February 9, 1919. He was discharged with an excellent character rating on June 26, and married Miss Eva Elvira Golden at Hastings on August 3, 1919. Eva was the daughter of Ernest A. and Minnie (Rose) Golden, and was born in Baltimore Township of Barry County on November 16, 1900. She gave birth to June Agnes Gross on August 16, 1920, and Ernest was born at Grand Rapids on August 4, 1921. The Artcraft Studio, managed by Ronald R. Cameron, also was at 47-49 Monroe Avenue in 1923. Mrs. Agnes C. Van Campen was proprietor of the Van Campen Studio at 38 ½ Monroe Avenue in 1924 and 1925. Robert G. Riddle was proprietor of the Gross Studio at 2140 Division Avenue South in Grand Rapids in 1930. James and Eva were together in 1930, but they divorced and about 1933 Eva married Clarence Rowlander. James lived until July 9, 1945.

He may have been the son of William and Mena Gross who emigrated from the Bavarian region of Germany and were living in Manhattan in 1880. If so, he had a brother Charles that was born a year later. William became tall and slender with gray eyes and brown hair. Harriett was born in Michigan to parents from New York in 1878, the daughter of Solis and Hattie Harrington. She married William in 1906. Their son William was born in Colorado in 1907, and their daughter Helen was born in Michigan in 1908. They all were living together in 1930.

- His father emigrated from Germany, his mother came from New York, and Joe was born in the old Corktown district of Detroit on September 12, 1886. He and his younger siblings, Morris and Hattie, were living in 1900 with their widowed mother, Mrs. May Grossman. The four of them still were together in 1910, but now Joe was head of the household. Pearl was born in Michigan in 1884, and she married Joe about 1910. Their daughter Margaret was born in 1913, and their daughter Mary was born in 1922. The Commercial Studio did catalogue work and commercial work of all kinds. Joe was short with an average build in 1917, had brown eyes and black hair, and expected to be exempted from military service for a rupture on his right side. Anthony F. Godfrey had been working in Detroit photograph galleries before Joseph was born, and had been identified as a commercial photographer since 1897. Godfrey & Grossman were commercial photographers from the beginning of their business. The change from 97 to 325 West Fort Street during 1920 was due to universal revisions in the Detroit numbering system, and not to relocation. Joe was the only proprietor of Godfrey & Grossman in 1926. George W. Knowling was a founder and an officer of Grossman & Knowling until his death in 1934. Jack Lehr was vice president only in 1929 and 1930. Mrs. Florence Knowling was vice president in 1931, Mrs. Florence Baumeister was treasurer in 1932, Maurice Robbins was vice president in 1935, and Margaret M. Knowling was secretary-treasurer in 1936. Joe was the other founder, was president from 1929 through 1936, and was sole proprietor from 1937 on. The Marquette Building was located at 243 West Congress Street. Joe gained wide acclaim for his skill and served as president of the Detroit Commercial Photographers Association. He became known as "Pappy" Grossman, helped many beginning photographers over the rough spots, and had Joe Clark as one of his many proteges. Pappy retired in the summer of 1948 and died at Miami, Florida, on July 4, 1954, survived by his two daughters and his wife, Esther.

Deloss was born in 1846 at Conewango in Cattaraugus County, New York, the son of Deloss D. and Lydia D. Groves. His brother Darwin was a year younger. Deloss enlisted at Buffalo as a private in the Union Army on July 3, 1863, and was mustered into the Fourteenth New York Heavy Artillery on the same day. He was transferred on October 10, 1863, into Company C of the First New York Veteran Cavalry. He served with this regiment until he was mustered out of the army at Camp Piatt, West Virginia, on July 20, 1865. Nettie, his wife, was born in Michigan in 1851. Their children were born in Ann Arbor: Paul in 1871, Grace in 1872, and Mabel in 1874. Nettie, too, was enumerated as a photographer in 1880, and she continued a photographic career as noted below.

She was enumerated as Nettie in the 1870 and 1880 census reports, and was born in Michigan in 1851. She was married to photographer Deloss P. Groves by June of 1870, when she was eighteen years old. She gave birth to Paul in 1871, to Grace in 1872, and to Mabel in 1874. She advertised as Mrs. Lunetta D. Groves in 1886: "... Stereoscopic Views of University Buildings and Private Residences a specialty. Views on exhibition and for sale at the office...." The backs of only a few of the mounts of the stereo views that she produced were stamped: "Mrs. L. D. GROVES, VIEWS OF ANN ARBOR." Many Ann Arbor stereographs from the later 1880s have hand-written captions on the back of their four by seven inch mounts with no other inscription. One group of such views was numbered from 1 to 23 as part of the captions. These stereo views may be presumed to be the work of Lunetta.

Claude was born on March 30, 1876, to Daniel J. and Isabella (Smith) Guerin at Port Huron, Michigan. He attended the public schools of Port Huron and moved with his parents to Detroit in 1894. Before 1900 he was often identified as A. Claude Guerin. He was 22 years old when he accompanied William Henry Jackson on a three month trip through Illinois, the upper peninsula of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota and Nebraska taking photographs for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad. He kept a diary of the trip, which has been preserved. He graduated from the Detroit College of Law and married Miss Edna Magill in Detroit on September 5, 1903. Claude joined the Security Trust Company when he returned to Detroit in 1909, and worked his way up to vice president and member of the board of directors before his retirement in 1926. He lived until September 7, 1956. 2 1 1 1 2 2 2 3

Anthony was born at Siedliska in the Polish region of Russia called Galicia on May 26, 1893, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gulaga. He left Hamburg, Germany, on April 19, 1912, and on arriving in the United States came directly to Detroit. He was five feet five inches tall as an adult, with a medium build, blue eyes and blond hair. Anna emigrated from the Polish region of Russia in 1910, and was enumerated as Anthony's seventeen-year-old wife in 1920. Since Anthony claimed in 1917 that he had a wife to support, she probably was twenty-seven years old in 1920. Anthony was naturalized a citizen of the United States by the District Court in Detroit on February 28, 1923. He obtained a passport in August of 1923 with the intention of sailing from New York City on S. S. Leviathan early in September in order to visit his parents in Siedliska. He made his return trip on S. S. Homeric, leaving Southampton, England, on July 30 and arriving in New York on August 6, 1924. 3 1 3 3 1 2 3 3 4 4

He was born Frederick Arthur Gumser at Montague, Michigan, to German parents on July 20, 1886, second of the seven children of August Wilhelm Friederich Gumser and Hulda Amelia (Beutling) Gumser. He became a stout man with blue eyes and brown hair. Arthur advertised in 1908: "JUST THE DAY FOR YOUR PICTURE. We are always busy. Yet we have time to make you the Best Picture you ever had. Come in and see the Photographs of your friends. Artists Supplies and Work Done for Amateurs." A postal photo of a church in Holland, Michigan, mailed in October of 1908, had "GUMSER" scribed into its negative. Another post card photograph of a snow covered homestead was dated October 28, 1910, was postmarked in Fruitport, and carried the message: "... This picture was taken by Art Gumser, the first snow of the season..." Arthur was single in 1910, when he was boarding with the family of a Holland wholesale butcher. Gumser's Art Store offered "Sheet Pictures, Picture Frames and Amateur Finishing. 232 River Avenue." In 1918 they advertised: "FILMS DEVELOPED, 5¢ a Roll. Mail Order Work a Specialty.... (Opposite the Post Office)" By 1917 Arthur had married a lady named Minnie who was born in December of 1886, but by 1920 they were divorced and he was back living with his parents. Esther was born in Wisconsin to parents from the Netherlands and Germany about 1902, and she married Arthur in 1921 or early in 1922. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Hildegard about 1923, Leola in December of 1925, and Eileen in December of 1928. Arthur died at Grand Rapids in December of 1964.

John was born in April of 1835 and emigrated from Sweden in 1865. Amanda was born in Sweden in May of 1841 and emigrated in 1869. She married John in 1871. Their children were born in Michigan: Andrew in January of 1873, Charles in November of 1875, Ellen in June of 1877, and Herman about 1882. The "View on the Ford River Road" in The City of Escanaba was reproduced from a photograph by J. Gunderson. John was a widower by 1920, and still at 95 was head of the household in 1930, when he was providing a home for his daughter and for a young female school teacher.

John was born in the village of Oeschelbronn in Wurttemberg, Germany, on February 22, 1840, the son of Michael and Christina (Gauss) Haarer. He learned photography before he left Germany. He landed at New York City in 1861, and came immediately to Ann Arbor. He spent eight days as a field hand during the harvest and three months as a section hand before he began taking ambrotypes. His first gallery was in the third story of Mack & Schmid's Block at the corner of Main and Liberty Streets. He married Miss Christina Wideman from Wurttemberg on September 11, 1871, and she died one year later. John was married again on July 15, 1875, to Miss Catherine Zimmer, a native of Canada whose parents had emigrated from Bavaria and Wurttemberg. Their children were born in Ann Arbor: John in April of 1876, Marie in January of 1878, Oscar in March of 1879, Julius in November of 1880, Eleanor in November of 1885, Ernest in November of 1887, and George in May of 1889. John moved his gallery across the street about 1876. He moved this frame building to another lot in 1888, and erected in its place an elegant three story brick building, 22 by 80 feet. His photograph gallery and bookstore were on the ground floor with living quarters for his family of seven children above. It seems that John and a friend bought a German lottery ticket, won, and John used his share for this building. By 1889, books and stationery were taking precedence over his photography. He was selling sheet music in 1897, the address of his building changed from 5 to 113 Liberty Street about 1898, and John soon entered the insurance business with his son John, who was elected Treasurer of the State of Michigan in 1912. By 1910 son Julius had become the insurance agent. John suffered a paralyzing stroke about 1911, and died in 1916. The building he erected at 113 West Liberty Street is now occupied by the West Side Book Shop staffed by owner Jay Platt and photography dealer Doug Price.

Grant was born to parents from Upper Canada in November of 1861 at Cleveland, Ohio, third of the four children of Henry A. and Ann Hackett. His older siblings were born in Canada, and he spent some of his boyhood in Amherstburg, Ontario. His father was a ship captain on the Great Lakes, and seems to have been a widower by 1870. Mary E. Fewens was born at Detroit in November of 1861, the daughter of William and Jane Fewens. She and Grant went over to Essex, Ontario, to be married on June 28, 1888. Their daughter Madeline was born in Detroit in January of 1890. Grant worked for the Ferry-Morse Seed Company from 1913 or earlier until his death on April 30, 1937.

George was born at Goderich of Scotch ancestry on May 19, 1880, the son of Archibald and Isabella (Lietch) Hadden. He became a five foot eight inch man with blue eyes and brown hair. In June of 1899 it was announced at Alvinston that "G. A. Hadden of Detroit has opened out business in the old Quatermass studio and is now prepared to make first class photos in the latest Canadian and American styles at the very lowest prices." By August he was engaged in a price war; Louis Pesha was selling cabinet photographs which were ordinarily $2.50 or $3.00 per dozen for 98 cents, and George undercut him to 97 cents per dozen. Pesha's branch studio at Alvinston was vandalized and both Pesha and Hadden received anonymous letters threatening worse damage if they did not raise their prices. George offered elegant photo buttons, increased the term on his rented gallery to three years, bought new backgrounds and scenery and a "swell" rattan studio chair, and advertised for a bright, honest boy, about 18 years old, to learn photographing. He was awarded first prize for the best collection of portraits at the Alvinston Fair. On Fair Day, October 5, 1899, he offered 15 photos for a dozen, but warned that no 97 cent photos would be taken after that date. Three months later George sold his interest in the skating rink at Alvinston. In May of 1900 he advertised for and hired a second bright, honest boy, and in June he began spending each Wednesday at his new branch gallery in Melbourne. In his first 16 months George made 1309 sittings and turned out more than 15,000 photographs. Early in December the Melbourne branch was closed for the winter. In January of 1901 he offered to make duplicate photos at a 25% discount from his own negatives as well as those of McCormick, Quatermass and Pesha, and announced his purchase of an outfit for taking interior photos by the new flashlight process. George advertised internationally early in 1903: "FOR SALE - Good paying, ground-floor brick studio in Ontario town of 1,200, with branch studio in town of 900; good prices; no opposition; well equipped; $850.00; $600.00 down, balance easy terms, if sold at once; reason for selling made known in first letter. Apply to G. A. Hadden, Alvinston, Ontario." The Thamesville and Brigden studios were branches of the business at Alvinston, where George also operated a garage. Clara Lanetta Hathaway was born on a farm in Huron County, Ontario, on November 23, 1879, the daughter of Francis and Hessie (Echlin) Hathaway. She and George were married at Kent, Ontario, on April 22, 1903. Their son was born at Alvinston on October 23, 1905, and named Lietch Echlin Hathaway Hadden. George and Grace crossed the border at Port Huron on September 23, 1926, on their way to Lakeland, where they already owned an apartment. George died in 1952 at Tampa, Florida, and Clara lived on at Lakeland until February 5, 1975.

Silas was born in Oswego County near Syracuse, New York, on September 15, 1834, eldest of the three sons of Abraham and Susan (Wood) Hadden. He was a 5 feet 6 inch tall farmer with a light complexion, brown hair and blue eyes when he enlisted at Marshall in the Sixth Michigan Heavy Artillery on February 25, 1864. On the same day he was mustered in at Jackson as a private in Company I of this regiment, which had begun in 1861 as the Sixth Michigan Infantry and for a couple of weeks in July of 1863 had been designated the First Michigan Heavy Artillery. Silas joined the veterans of the regiment at Kalamazoo as they returned from their re-enlistment furloughs and on May 11, 1864, they arrived at Port Hudson, Louisiana. After serving as engineers at Vicksburg, Mississippi, and moving to White River and then to Ashton, Arkansas, they were divided into detachments to serve as heavy artillery in the forts around Mobile Bay. The siege of Mobile, Alabama, lasted from March 20 until April 12, 1865. Silas was honorably discharged and mustered out of the army with his company at New Orleans, Louisiana, on August 20, 1865. Sarah E. Snedeker was born in New York on March 7, 1834, and she married Silas about 1862. Their sons Abraham, Frederick and Leonard were born between 1868 and 1872. During his years as a druggist he was consistently referred to as Dr. Silas W. Hadden. He began receiving an Invalid Pension of $12.00 per month in July of 1890 based upon his asthma, his rheumatism and the loss of 20 teeth. He weighed 117 pounds in September of 1894, having lost eight pounds in three years. His wife, Mrs. Sarah E. Hadden, died on June 15, 1905. His pension increased in June of 1907 from $12.00 to $15.00, in September of 1909 to $20.00, and in June of 1912 to $24.00. He spent his last years in the modest home of his son, Frederick J. Hadden, surrounded by six of his grandchildren and cared for by his son's wife and eldest daughter. Silas died from acute bronchitis and senility on February 11, 1914. Burial was in Forest Hill Cemetery at Kansas City.

He was born Hiram C. Hadstate in Michigan in 1852, seventh of the nine children of Hiram and Caroline (Alvord) 3
Hadstate. His eldest brother Virgil went down to Fort Wayne in Detroit and enlisted in Company F of the Second 3 4
Michigan Infantry on June 4, 1861. He was mustered into the Union Army on June 27, 1861, promoted to corporal on 4
August 5, 1862, and later promoted to sergeant. Virgil was killed in action at Knoxville, Tennessee, on November 24, 4
1863. Our subject was listed as Hiram through 1878, as the artist Hiram and as the photographer Hoyte in 1879, and as 4 d
Hoyte thereafter except for 1888 when he reverted to Hiram. The cited 1880 article indicated that only one H. C. d 2 Hadstate was involved with photography. "Photographic ART EMPORIUM. All Negatives retouched, and Pictures 2 t in 1878. Hoyte was single in 1880, and was sharing quarters at 227 Jefferson with Edward E. Tromblay. "... None but d 1 perfect pictures allowed to go from this Gallery." was printed on some of his card photograph mounts from 59 Monroe t d Avenue, while others identified Edward E. Tromblay as the manager. Tromblay operated the gallery at 59 Monroe t d Avenue in his own name from 1879 through 1882, and was again working as a photographer for Hoyte in 1883. The d

London Art Gallery at 153 Woodward Avenue had a handsomely furnished reception room and a well lighted 2 operating room. Apparatus, furniture and accessories were valued at $1500, and business averaged $1000 per year. He 2 had competent assistants in the printing department, so Hoyte could give his personal attention to the more intricate 2 operations of photography as well as to water color painting, Chinese coloring, Indian ink studies, and portrait work. 2
He had purchased the Michigan rights to use a peculiar formula which produced perfect photographs upon the blocks 2

Frederick was born in Wisconsin to parents from the Saxony region of Germany in August of 1852, fifth of the six children of William and Henrietta (Germand) Haefer. He was paid $35.00 per month from September of 1873 to May of 1874 by Childs, and then seems to have spent the summer of 1874 working the district from a tent. Christine (later Jennie) Halsen was born in Michigan in 1860 or earlier, and she married Frederick in Houghton County on October 6, 1876. Either Frederick or Christine had a daughter from an earlier marriage who was born in Michigan in January of 1873 and was named Milly. Their son Leonard was born in February of 1878, and their son Frank was born in November of 1879. One of Frederick's Calumet cabinet photographs reproduced an engraved bird's-eye view of Hancock dated 1881. He attended the fourth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in August of 1883. He offered to enlarge old and faded pictures to any size and finish them in water colors in Calumet, advertised that artistic portraiture was his specialty in 1886, and was succeeded in Calumet by a photographer named Wentworth. "Haefer, Photographer, Calumet, Mich." was printed on the back of some cabinet mounts, and with a second printing, "Calumet, Mich." was crossed out and "Hancock, Mich." was added. He used the instantaneous process exclusively at Hancock, and produced stereo views of Hancock and Lake Linden there. On the back of a card photograph of snow piled high on Main Street, the printed "Lake Linden" was partially erased, and "Ishpeming" was written over it, followed by "Childs Art Gallery." Picture frames and enlargements were offered from Frederick's Ishpeming gallery. Frederick was identified as the new proprietor of Childs' Art Gallery in May of 1893, associated with C. B. Brubaker in the same Marquette studio where they worked together twenty years earlier. They were turning out magnificent prints with astonishing detail and finish, even from old negatives including views of Lake Superior scenery which had been sold by the thousand in past years. Frederick advertised "The Finest Photos in the County" in 1898. The studio of photographer John E. Baker also was at 104 Quincy Street in 1903. Josephine was born in Michigan to German parents in 1874 or 1875, and she married Frederick in 1903 or early in 1904. In 1908 Frederick advertised: "... Babies Pictures a Specialty. Finishing for Amateurs. First-Class Work Guaranteed." According to the 1910 and 1920 census reports, Josephine grew 24 years older in a decade.

John was born at York on the Wabash River in Crawford County, Illinois, to Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Hager on June 26, 1840. His mother's maiden name was Long. He enlisted at St. Louis, Missouri, as a private in Company G of the Eleventh Missouri Infantry on August 10, 1861. Due to exposure during the winter of 1862-63 near Corinth, Mississippi, he contracted rheumatism affecting his right knee. In the spring of 1863 near Vicksburg, Mississippi, he was afflicted with catarrh. While marching in Louisiana on the Red River Campaign during the summer of 1864, he was tormented with scurvy. John was honorably discharged from the army at Memphis, Tennessee, on August 5, 1864. He and 17-year-old Miss Salina Sheppard were married at Marlette on May 24, 1868. She was born in England, and she gave birth to John in Kansas about 1873 and to Clara in Michigan in 1876 or 1877. John was said to have been away from Marlette from May of 1870 to December of 1872, from May of 1893 to March of 1894, and from some time in 1900 until July of 1902. During the summer of 1878 it was reported that "... John Hager has a photo gallery in Marlette. Marlette has a brass band of repute...." Hager & Son cabinet photographs are found from "Marlette and Berne Junction," from "Marlette and Brown City" and from just "Marlette." Another imprint from the same period was "J. H. HAGER, Traveling Photographer." Berne Junction became Pigeon between 1888 and 1890. John applied for an Invalid Pension in July of 1892, and seems to have qualified later in the year based upon dyspepsia, rheumatism, a diseased heart and chronic bronchitis. John and his sons William M. Hager and John H. Hager, Junior, were principals of the John Hager & Sons butter and egg business in Marlette about 1895. The younger John was Marlette's photographer by 1900. In September of 1902, John was pensioned at $10.00 per month, was five feet seven inches tall with a dark complexion and brown eyes, and weighed 146 pounds. His black hair had turned gray, he was developing cataracts, and due to the scurvy had only three teeth in his lower jaw and none in his upper jaw. By April of 1905 he had gained fifteen pounds, had the appearance of a broken down old man, and walked with the aid of two canes. He died from cancer of the jaw at Marlette on December 27, 1908. Salina applied for a Widow's Pension early in 1909.

John was born in Kansas in 1873, the son of John H. and Salina Hager. By 1900 his father had retired and left the Marlette photography business he had founded to John, Junior. John persuaded more than fifty children and their buxom teacher to hold still long enough to have a cabinet sized picture taken in his Marlette studio. He was single in 1910, and was living with his widowed mother. He still was single in 1930, and now he was providing a home for his 79-year-old mother.

He was called Edward in his younger days, and then Charles E. Hagle in 1920 and later. He was born in Michigan to Canadian parents on May 1, 1889, sixth of the nine children of Henry and Maria Hagle. He became a short slender man with brown eyes and brown hair, and he was slightly bald by 1917. "Hagle" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of several horse-drawn carriages and wagons posed on the main street of Snover in Moore Township of Sanilac County. Lucile was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on April 1, 1898. She married Charles in 1919 and their daughters were born in Michigan: June in 1920 or early in 1921, and Virginia in November of 1925. Charles died at Miami on July 28, 1975, and Lucille died there on February 27, 1985.

Edmund was born in England in July of 1844, eldest of the three children of Henry and Mary A. Hague. He came to America with his family in 1851. Ada (later Addie) was born in Canada to parents from New York in September of 1844. Their children were born in Michigan: Minnie about 1865, Harry in 1867, Maud in December of 1869, May (later Addie) about 1871, Laura about 1873, Herbert about 1875, Nina in May of 1877, and Roy in December of 1881. Patent Number 297,074 for Improvements in Paint was granted to Edmund on April 15, 1884. He applied for a patent on a Photographer's Background on December 9, 1889, and it issued as Patent Number 443,762 on December 30, 1890. Three or more backgrounds were painted on a continuous roll of canvas passing over an upper and a lower roller, so that the chosen background could be selected and adjusted to the height of the sitter by turning the rollers. Edmund and his wife (now called Adda) were providing a home for their single daughter Maud in 1910.

Victor was born on March 15, 1892, at Latchie, Ohio, the son of Rudolph J. and Mary Hahn. All of his grandparents emigrated from Germany. Victor became an average sized man with brown eyes and dark brown hair. Grace was born in Michigan early in 1890, and she married Victor about 1915. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Bertha in March of 1919, and Marian in 1920 or early in 1921. While managing his father's farm in nearby Moscow Township, Victor was served by Jonesville Rural Route Number One. Poor eyesight and his support for his wife, his mother and his father seem to have kept him out of the army. "VICTOR V. HAHN, PHOTOGRAPHING, R. No. 1, JONESVILLE, MICH." was stamped on the post card backs of photographs, including scenes at Jonesville, Manitou Beach, Milnes, Mosherville, North Adams and a farm yard view stamped: "OCT 6 - 1919." The same stamp was applied to a post card sized snap shot of a tractor towing farm machinery on a dirt road on the back of which was typed: "J. E. Powell, R#2, Tekonsha, Mich. Taken Monday A.M. Jeffrey was born in England in December of 1857, immigrated in 1874, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1887. Mabel was born in Michigan to parents from New York in November of 1873, and she married Jeffrey about 1899. He was listed as Reverend J. G. Haigh in 1899 and by two sources in 1903. "JEFFREY G. HAIGH, Pastor First Cong. Church" was printed on strip labels on lantern slides, including a nicely tinted one of the Genesee County Court House in Flint. Another lantern slide of the old Gardner Band was "MADE BY J. G. HAIGH, FLINT, MICH." On the back of an 8 1/2 by 4 1/4 photograph mount was affixed a palette shaped sticker with "J. H. HAIGH Art Studio, Ground Floor, Flint, Mich." and was penned "Oct. 4, 1902." Mabel gave birth to George in Michigan in 1902, and to Ruth (later Donnabel) in Vermont about 1904. By 1930 Mabel was a widow and matron of a residence hall connected with the New Hampshire State Normal School.

Charles was born in Michigan to a mother came from New York on March 21, 1865, the elder son of R. Bruce and Phoebe E. (Devereaux) Haight. His brother Clarence was born on January 15, 1867. His father died from typhoid fever in August of 1869. The widow Phoebe and her sons were living on the farm of her brother in 1870. She was a dress maker in 1880, providing a home in Pontiac for her sons. Harriet's father came from New York and she was born in Michigan in August of 1866. She sometimes was called Hattie, and she married Charles in 1889 or 1890. The only child to which she gave birth did not live. Charles and Clarence were partners in the Montrose printing and publishing business. The 1899 History of Montrose Township which Charles compiled and illustrated included 36 photographs adhered to heavy pages. They depicted business streets, public buildings, the depot and family groups, and a printed paragraph was associated with each photograph. Some time after 1880 Mrs. Phoebe Haight married a man named Osborn, but by 1910 she was again a widow and was living with Charles and Harriet. She still was sharing their home in 1930, when she was 91 years old.

Eugene and his twin brother Elwin were born in New York State to a mother from Vermont in March of 1847, last of the three sons of John M. and Harriet Haight. Elwin also was listed as Elvin, Edwin and Allen. Their brother James was born in Vermont about 1842. Eugene and his father were boarding in 1870 with the family of the experienced St. Charles photographer Norman Taylor. Gene was single in 1880 and was sharing his home with Elwin and their widowed father, John M. Haight, who were tinsmiths. His 19-year-old niece, Hattie M. Tucker, was keeping house for the three men. Hattie married the photographer Edward Colloff, and their daughter Florence was born in 1889. By 1900 she was a widow and a milliner, and again was sharing her home with the same three men. An advertisement for "E. M. Haight, Artistic Photographer. Stereoscopic and Out-Door Views a Specialty...." was carried by a Capac newspaper in June of 1884. Charles W. Quatermass was Gene's partner on the north side of Butler Street at Port Huron in 1888 and 1889, and then was succeeded by William M. Quatermass. Gene's studio at New Baltimore was in the second story of a barn-like structure on the northwest side of Green Street, reached by an outside stairway with a landing at the top from which he took elevated views. He had an interest in the tin and horse-shoeing shop below his gallery which was operated by Edward Colloff, his predecessor as New Baltimore's photographer and the husband of Gene's niece Hattie. Gene was remembered as a small man with a peculiar short-stepping gait due to a club foot, which was accentuated when he was scurrying to photograph a fire or other local event. He lived alone in his studio, which was a popular hang-out for the boys of the town, and his conjectured attention to the ladies on nearby farms was a favorite topic of the local gossips. Dr. La Ferte of Detroit was also popular with the children of New Baltimore, where he had a summer home, and often commissioned photographs by Haight. One staged in Gene's studio showed La Ferte posed as the pondering physician at the bedside of Burleigh Maliskey, while Sylvester Christie stands by as the anxious husband of the patient. By 1912, Gene was unable to support himself, and he lived on the charity of New Baltimore merchants for several years before moving to the county farm. He was 83 years old when he died of pneumonia in 1930. An obituary mentioned that in his younger days he had played violin at many a country dance throughout Macomb County.

Mary McEldowney was born in Pennsylvania to Irish parents in February of 1845, and she married James at Adrian on June 24, 1869. Their children were born in Michigan: Ralph in 1874 or early in 1875, and Alba in February of 1884. Number 14 was on the north side of Maumee Street west of the Masonic Temple. Two cent revenue stamps cancelled "L + H" were adhered to the paper sleeves of some tintypes, while "J. R. Haight, Photographer, Adrian, Mich." was printed on others. James' gallery and that of Marvin & Sheakley had the same address in 1874. Alba remained single and went with her parents to California, where she did private teaching.

He matured into a medium sized man with blue eyes and brown hair. Bertha was born in Michigan to Dutch parents in 1882, and she married Oscar about 1902. Their children were born in Michigan: Chester in 1903, Clarence in 1907, Gerald in 1913, and Edith in August of 1918. Oscar purchased the Dowagiac photography business of J. W. Austin early in April of 1911. "Haight" was scribed into the negatives of post card photographs, including one of Dowagiac third grade students in 1912. "HAIGHT PHOTO" was lettered on the negatives of a series of postal views of the crowd at the Dowagiac depot to see Teddy Roosevelt on March 30, 1912. A postal photo of high school students in 1914 was embossed "O. C. HAIGHT, DOWAGIAC, MICH." By 1930 Bertha was a Grand Rapids widow providing a home for Chester, Gerald and Edith. It appears that most of their income was coming from Chester's job with the fire department.

His father came from Indiana and Albert was born in Illinois in July of 1874, the younger son of Albert A. and Malinda Carherine (Onstott) Hale. His brother Earnest was born in Illinois in January of 1872. Their father died in January of 1874, and their mother married Mark O'Hoey in September of 1876. They had half-brothers born in 1877 and 1878, and a half-sister born in 1882. Albert was boarding at Kalamazoo in 1900 with the family of photographer Henry F. Sutman, and he probably was working in the Sutman studio. Christina was born in Illinois to natives of Illinois in October of 1887, fourth of the seven children of John and Nancy (Abbott) Ramsey. She married Albert in Fulton County, Illinois, on February 26, 1905. Their children were born in Illinois: Mary in 1906, and Albert about 1910. Jerome was born in Massachusetts in August of 1821 and came to Michigan in 1836 with his parents, who moved to Niles after spending a winter in Detroit. His father, Benjamin F. Hale, was a physician at Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti for many years prior to his death in 1869. Her father came from Connecticut and Lucy Wallace was born in New York about 1823. She married Jerome about 1842 and gave birth to Walter in Michigan in October of 1844, and to Wallace in Illinois in September of 1846. Jerome was a merchant at Wauconda, Illinois, until his business failed in 1857. He served as postmaster of Wauconda for six years. He returned to Michigan and later became a fairly successful carpenter. Note that both of his sons were photographers for a while. Jerome was a widower by 1900, when he was living with the family of his son Wallace. The 1865 record was for Jerome H. Hall.

His father came from Massachusetts and Walter was born to a mother from New York in Cass County, Michigan, on October 16, 1844, the elder son of Jerome H. and Lucy (Wallace) Hale. He grew up until 1857 at Wauconda, Illinois, and then returned to Michigan where he spent two years in the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He was a photographer for three years before he took up farming on shares. His first marriage about 1867 was to Kittie, who was born in Michigan in 1845 or 1846. Their son Wallace and daughter Nellie were born in Michigan between 1868 and February of 1870. This marriage did not last, and in 1880 Walter's parents were providing a home for a ten-year-old grandson named Willie. Mary J. (often Jennie) Bell was born in Michigan to parents from New York in May of 1850, third of the five children of Oliver S. and Reliance Bell. She married Walter in 1874 and he soon acquired a 56-acre farm in Clarence Township of Calhoun County, where he developed a fine peach orchard and did general farming for more than thirty years. Jennie gave birth to three children in Clarence Township: Fred in May of 1879, Nellie in June of 1882, and Maude in May of 1886. Walter and Jennie were providing a home in 1910 for two grandsons who were one and three years old. By 1920 Walter was a widower, and he still was farming with the help of his divorced son Fred. Walter seems to have sold or leased the farm by 1930, and he was living with Fred who was laboring at odd jobs.

In 1870 he was living next door to Benjamin Haley, who was born in Canada about 1824. Mary was born in Michigan about 1841, and she became Mrs. Haley about 1860. Their daughter Eva and son Albert were born in New York between 1861 and December of 1866, and their son Wesley was born in Michigan about 1868. Vineland, New Jersey, had a photographer named N. D. Haley in June of 1865. "From N. D. HALEY'S CAR" was printed on the paper sleeves of some tintypes, and "From N. D. HALEY'S CAR, Hubbardston" was printed on some cartes de visite. At the 1870 Ionia County Fair, N. D. Haley of Pewamo was awarded premiums for the best collection of photographs and for the second best India ink enlargement. Coleman PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1904-1917 m

Alfred was born in Muskoka, Ontario, to Irish parents on February 17, 1872, sixth of the seven children of George and Jane (White) Hall. He crossed the border in 1892, and as soon as possible became a naturalized citizen of the United States. Minnie was born in Michigan in April of 1875, and she married Alfred about 1896. Their children were born in Michigan: Russell in September of 1898, Alice in 1901, Elma in 1904, Aletha in 1907, and Eva Ruth in 1911. “A. J. HALL, Coleman, Mich.” was lettered on the negative from which 5½ by 8¼ inch photographs of Coleman business blocks were printed. These photos were sold on 10 by 12 inch black commercial mounts. “A. J. Hall” in script over “Coleman, Mich.” in smaller block capitals was blind stamped into a 1907 postal photograph of a Coleman business street. “Made by A. J. Hall, Coleman, Mich.” was printed on the post card backs of photographs of wreckage in the business section of Beaverton, ten miles north east of Coleman, after a fire in September of 1909. Minnie was assisting Alfred in the studio in 1910. Alfred was the mayor of Coleman in 1916. Minnie became seriously ill on Tuesday, August 1, 1916, while her husband was in Cass City visiting his brothers and sisters. Alfred got home the next morning and notified their son Russell who arrived but a few hours before his mother died on August Second. Funeral services were held both in Coleman and in Cass City, where the body was shipped for burial in Elkland Cemetery. Alfred was in poor health at the time of his wife’s death, and their children became orphans when he died in Michigan in 1917. 2

He attended Columbian University, graduated from Harvard University in 1882, and became assistant at the Naval Observatory in Washington, D. C. He earned his Ph. D. degree from Yale University while teaching at the Yale Observatory. From 1892 until 1905 Asaph was Professor of Astronomy and Director of the Observatory at the University of Michigan. He and Miss Mary Estelle Cockrell of Kay, Illinois, were married on July 14, 1897, and their daughters Katherine and Mary were born at Ann Arbor between 1898 and 1902. In August of 1900 Asaph spoke about astronomical photography to the first annual convention of the Ohio-Michigan Photographers’ Association. He returned to the Naval Observatory at Washington in 1905. He retired in 1929 and, after a brief illness, died in 1930. 2

Benjamin was born to parents from New York in February of 1842 at Guelph, Ontario, third of the five children of Hezekiah J. and Deborah (Willson) Hall. Two of his great-grandfathers were in the Revolutionary Army during the 1770s. He was attributed with years of experience in the best galleries of New York City before coming to Michigan. He advertised locally in 1867: "... Go to HALL'S New Photograph Gallery,... if you want Life Like Portraits Taken, of Any Size or Style. - Photographs, Gem Pictures, Ambrotypes, Cabinet Pictures, Ferrotypes, Porcelain Pictures, and Pictures of every other kind, taken equally well in ANY KIND OF WEATHER! All Pictures Warranted to Please, and Prices Low. A SPECIALTY IN TAKING PICTURES OF CHILDREN. Satisfaction Guaranteed in All Cases...." In the spring of 1868 he purchased all of the negatives taken in the Cheney Gallery, and was offering low cost duplicates of any picture ever taken there. Later, "B. F. Hall, Portrait & Landscape Photographer... Stereoscopic views of Lansing and vicinity on hand and taken to order." was printed on his stereographs and on some of his card photograph mounts, and a similar but abbreviated message was embossed into the paper cover of his tintypes. "PATENT MEZZO-TINT PHOTOGRAPH, by B. F. HALL, (Licensee No. 146) owner of Exclusive Right for Ingham Co., and Patentee's Agent for the State of Michigan," was printed on other card mounts. Mary was born in New York in January of 1849, and she married Benjamin in 1867 or 1868. Their sons Herbert and Benjamin were born in September of 1869 and October of 1873, and their daughter Elizabeth was born in October of 1880. Benjamin was on the first published list of members of the National Photographic Association in July of 1869, and was named vice president of the NPA for Michigan at the Philadelphia convention in June of 1871. While in the east for this convention, Benjamin visited a number of photograph galleries. The NPA monogram was incorporated into some of his imprints from the corner of Washington and Michigan Avenues. A photographic journal carried in May of 1872 his description and sketches of a universally mounted translucent white screen for modifying or reflecting light, and in January of 1874 his description and drawings of a convenient copying table for enlarging small pictures. He employed John M. Wilson as an operator and Miss M. Costelle Elgerly as an artist in 1873 when he was augmenting his photographic business by selling fine chromos, albums, picture frames, stereoscopes and views. The back half of some of the small albums he sold contained a music box. Some of his card photograph mounts were embellished with an engraving of "The Most Complete Photographic Establishment in the State. Three Galleries in One. Portraiture, Views, and Copying, In all their Branches. Oval and Square Picture Frames, Pocket and Parlor Albums, Stereoscopes and Stereoscopic Views, etc., always on hand...." The local newspapers carried: "A CARD. - Having disposed of my Art Gallery and good will of the business to G. W. Wood, I cheerfully recommend him.... I will remain at the gallery about four weeks, during which time I will be pleased to see patrons of the institution, and introduce them to the new manager.... B. F. Hall, Lansing, March 30, 1876." He offered two houses and five vacant lots for sale in the same edition, and a few months later it was reported that he was taking a four week trip to St. Paul and other portions of the "far west". Though he established business interests in St. Paul, he built up a large Lansing business in building materials, coal, storage and real estate through the 1880s and the 1890s. Benjamin was a widower by 1910, when he was sharing his home with his widowed older sister Amelia. He died in 1912.

His father came from New York and Fred was born in Michigan in July of 1866, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William 1 Hall. He was living in 1870 with his widowed father and 64-year-old Lydia Green, who may have been his maternal 1 grandmother. By 1880 he had a stepmother named Jane and a six-year-old half-brother named Frank. Louisa G. 1
Gunnison was born in Alabama to a mother from Louisiana in January of 1868, second of the seven children of Jack 1 and Laura Gunnison. She married Fred about 1891, and their children were born in Alabama: Caroline in August of 1 1892, and Andrew (later Jack) in February of 1900. Fred and his family were living in 1900 with Louisa's widowed 1 mother. By 1910 Fred was a widower, and was boarding with the family of William Force, who also was a 1 professional photographer. William was born in Michigan in October of 1866, and is not known to have had previous 1 photographic experience. It seems likely that Fred took on William as a partner. William still was proprietor in 1930 of 1 a Hattiesburg photographic studio. By 1930 Fred was married to a lady named Leone who was born in Tennessee 1

The opening of Hall's studio in Firemen's Hall was reported by a Detroit newspaper on November 22, 1851, and was advertised across the river in a Canadian newspaper earlier in the month. George was awarded the First Premium for the Best Daguerreotypes exhibited at the fourth annual Michigan State Fair held at Detroit in September of 1852, but in 1853 had to settle for the Third Premium behind Moore and Sutton. He advertised in 1853: "... Hall's Pictures of Children have been constantly pronounced the most successful. The Prices of Hall's Pictures range, according to size and style, from $1.50 to $15.00.... Crayon Daguerreotypes, or Vignette Portraits and Miniatures. This new and truly beautiful style of sun pictures, is taken only in this City by Mr. Hall. PROCESS PATENTED. Likenesses taken of all forms and sizes, and warranted in the best style of the photographic art, at all hours of the day, and without regard to weather.... Particular attention is invited to the distinct, lively and life like expression of the eye - to the beauty and perfection of the drapery - to the depth, boldness yet mellowness of the lights and shadows, and to the rich, warm tone so peculiar to the pictures taken at Hall's Premium Gallery.... Open from 8 o'clock A. M. until Sunset." On May 26, 1854, George made several daguerreotypes at different stages of the first eclipse of the sun to occur in the daguerreian era. By the following day he already had received numerous orders and was engaged in copying in order to fill them. Many other professional and amateur daguerreotypists captured the eclipse, from New York and Rochester, New York, to Mobile, Alabama. The inclusion of the CELEBRATED ECLIPSE DAGUERREOTYPE in his exhibit undoubtedly helped George to obtain the First Premium at the 1854 Michigan State Fair. In the Autumn of 1854 he spent "... a few days with Whipple, of Boston, where he has been engaged in the Photographic, or Paper Process, preparatory to introducing these pictures to the citizens of this place. Mr. H. has purchased the exclusive right to practice the Whipple, Cutting & Company's Process in Detroit. A newspaper noted in December of 1854 that Hall & St. Alary, a well known Detroit portrait painter, were taking pictures by the Mezzograph Process. George advertised early in 1855: "Important Discovery! LIFE-SIZE SUN-PICTURES, or Daguerreotypes on Paper and Canvass, taken in the west only by G. E. HALL.... Taken in all sizes. The LIFE SIZE far surpassing, in depth of tone, brilliancy, and truthfulness the most perfect painting executed by the hand. DAGUERREOTYPES OF DECEASED PERSONS received from any part of the country and Faithful Life-Size Portraits made from them by this process, and with all the colors of life. The smaller sizes in colors resemble the most delicate miniature on ivory....By means of the MEZZOGRAPH PROCESS we take Daguerreotypes on plate-glass, and then transferring them to paper, by the agency of light, in unlimited numbers, as from a copper plate, thus enabling us to publish Portraits from Life, Views of Cities, and County Residences, &c., in any number and of any size, and at a trifling expense, rivaling in beauty the finest engraving. Portraits on Glass and Paper. Also, Daguerreotypes taken in all kinds of weather,... His Gallery has recently been enlarged, refitted and refurnished throughout, and is now the finest and most extensive Gallery in the west.... All Pictures sent to be copied (with charges paid), and all enquiries (post-paid), will receive prompt attention." Despite George's claims of exclusivity, both he and Moses Sutton exhibited paper prints made from glass negatives at the Michigan State Fair in September of 1855, and Sutton walked off with the First Premium. George employed Charles H. Hastings in 1853 and 1855, and Gottshalk Grelling as a daguerreotypist in 1855. Grelling was his successor in the Firemen's Hall gallery in 1856.

Henry was born in New York to parents from Massachusetts in January of 1835. Elizabeth (often Eliza) was born in Ohio to parents from Vermont in February of 1836, and she married Henry about 1855. Their children were born in Ohio: Elizabeth (sometimes Lizzie or Eliza) in the summer of 1856, Emma in September of 1859, Roswell in May of 1864, and Gertrude in 1871 or early in 1872. Henry and Roswell were listed as portrait and landscape painters in 1884 with the same firm name and address they used as photographers. They employed Alexander L. Campbell in 1884 and John H. Bennett in 1885 as photographers. Henry formed a number of sign painting partnerships during the 1890s, and was interested in a cigar manufacturing company in 1898. Emma was a widow by 1910, when she was living in Detroit with her daughter Emma and her husband, Charles A. Major.

Ichabod was born in Canada to a mother from Massachusetts in November of 1833. The English lady that he married gave birth to a daughter named Florence in February of 1862. Printed on some cartes de visite was: "... Call and see First Prize Porcelain Pictures." On others was: "... Received Five First Prizes." and on still others was: "... Prizes awarded to I. N. Hall at Washtenaw County Fair 1867: First Prize best collection Porcelain Pictures - $5, First Prize best collection Ambrotypes - $3, First Prize best five Porcelain Pictures - $1, First Prize best ten Plain Photographs - $1, Prizes recommended for Enameled Gem on watch dial." Printed on some card photograph mounts was: "I. N. HALL, First Prize PHOTOGRAPHER, First floor over express office, Ann Arbor, Mich. Pictures Enlarged to Life Size or less, in Oil, Water Colors or India Ink, and all Work Warranted First Class." Ichabod left Ingersoll for the United States in 1886, and may have gone right to Texas. Cotulla is in La Salle County, and probably was his headquarters for a couple of decades. Ichabod was a widower by 1900, when he was living with his single school teacher daughter Florence. He was living by himself in 1910, and he died in Uvalde County, Texas, on February 6, 1915.

Lafayette was born about 1845 at Ypsilanti, Michigan. He was five feet five inches tall with a dark complexion, black eyes and black hair when he enlisted at Chelsea as a private in Company K of the 20th Michigan Infantry on August 13, 1862. He contracted typhoid fever, and after a protracted illness was discharged on a Surgeon's Certificate of Disability on February 19, 1863, at Washington, D.C. He was enrolled on December 29, 1863, and was mustered into the Eighth Michigan Infantry at Corunna on January 4, 1864. He served in Company K, and contracted varicose veins in both legs during the campaign from Brandy Station to Petersburg, Virginia. Lafayette was wounded in the left temple by a gun shot at Petersburg on June 18, 1864, for which he was treated in hospitals at City Point, Virginia, and Washington, D. C. He was mustered out of the army at Washington with his company on July 30, 1865. He worked as a laborer in Gratiot and Isabella Counties in the 1870s and 1880s.

Her father came from New York and Minnie (once Lillie) Gould was born in Michigan in April of 1875. She married the photographer Alfred J. Hall in 1896 or 1897, and their children were born in Michigan: Russell in September of 1898, Alice in 1901, Elma in 1904, Aletha in 1907, and Eva Ruth in 1911. She undoubtedly participated in her husbands photography business to a greater extent than is indicated above. Minnie became seriously ill on Tuesday, August 1, 1916, while her husband was in Cass City visiting relatives. Alfred got home the next morning and notified their son Russell who arrived but a few hours before Minnie died on August Second. Funeral services were held both in Coleman and in Cass City, where the body was shipped for burial in Elkland Cemetery. Alfred died in Michigan in 1917, leaving their children without parents.

He was born in Pennsylvania in October of 1861, and was called Merchant Hall at Ludington, W. M. Hall in the census and Merch Hall according to the gazetteers at Cadillac, and Wilbur M. Hall in local directories and the census at Scottville. Myrtle (later Aldine M.) Strong was born in Ohio in June of 1879, and she married the photographer in February of 1900. This was his second marriage. Their son Carrol was born in Michigan about 1902, and he may not have lived to maturity. "Oh, How Dry We Are. Elk Rapids, Mich." was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of three puppies looking out of the back of a buggy with their tongues hanging out. "Copyright 1911 by W. M. Hall." was press printed on the face of this card. Aldine had obtained a divorce by 1920, when she was living with her widowed mother in Kalamazoo. The gazetteers of 1915 through 1923 consistently listed the Scottville photographer as William H. Hall, while in all other sources he was listed as Wilbur M. Hall. The William M. Hall depicted below and Wilbur may be the same person.

William was born in New York State around 1832. In 1860, 30-year-old Polly Harrison was keeping house for him, her three sons and a boarder. In 1870, 64-year-old Lydia Green was keeping house for him and caring for his four-year-old son, Fred. By 1880, he had acquired a 38-year-old wife named Jane and a second son named Frank who was six years old. Frank W. Carpenter & Hall advertised as "Artists in Photography, Oil and Water Colors. India Ink and Crayon Pictures a Specialty...." The Underwood Block was on the northeast corner of Maumee and Main Streets. Hall's Portrait Gallery and the Great Western Copying Company both were listed at 36 ½ Maumee Street in 1876. William was in New York City for the second annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1881, and at Milwaukee for the fourth annual PA of A convention in August of 1883.

James was born at Whitmore Lake in Northfield Township of Washtenaw County, Michigan, on October 22, 1843, third of the four children of Nelson S. and Sarah Chapin (Carter) Halleck. His brother William and sister Lucy were twins born in May of 1842. His brother Lewis was born in April of 1849. His father was a physician. James enlisted on August 20, 1862, at Northfield as a Private in Company D of the Fifth Michigan Cavalry. His brother William enlisted on the same day at Green Oak in Livingston County as a sergeant in Company D of the Fifth Michigan Cavalry. They were mustered into the regiment on August 27, 1862. William was missing in action at Trevillian Station, Virginia, on June 11, 1864, but turned up later unharmed. James was taken prisoner on June 12 at Trevillian Station, and was confined for several months at Florence, South Carolina. He was paroled at Goldsboro, North Carolina, on February 27, 1865, and was honorably discharged from the army at Annapolis, Maryland, on June 16, 1865. William drowned on May 15, 1865, off Cape Hatteras on board the transport "General Lyon." Ella was born in New Jersey in 1847 or 1848, and she married James about 1867. Their daughter Jessie and son William were born in Michigan between 1868 and 1871. James filed from Missouri for a Civil War Invalid Pension on August 25, 1890. He was assessed $2.50 in February of 1864 as James M. Halleck for three months as a photographer. The only person in the area with a similar name was the James B. Halleck of the entry directly above. This James was in the army at the time, but may have been home on leave long enough to get in a little photography business.

John was born in Germany in June of 1860, third of the seven known children of Andy and Margaret Haller. He came to America with his parents as an infant, and his four younger siblings were born in Ohio. He was boarding with the family of a druggist in 1889, and probably he was working in the drug store. Mary was born in Ireland in June of 1864, and she immigrated in 1882. She married John about 1884, and their children were born in Michigan: John in December of 1885, Eugene in September of 1887, George in May of 1898, and Margaret in 1901 or early in 1902. John's book store in Sault Ste. Marie sold photographic supplies, sporting goods and a variety of merchandise for many years, but 1908 was the only year in which he was listed as a photographer. By 1910 Mary was a widow and all of her children were at home. John was a mining engineer, and Eugene was managing the book store.

Their son Willis was born in Michigan in January of 1857. A circular stamp with "D. W. HALLOCK, Almont, Mich. John was born in Franklin County, Indiana, probably in December of 1856. He was fifth of the seven children of Oliver and Lucinda (Alley) Halstead, and he grew up on the family farm. "Halstead & Hopkins, Perry, Bell Oak, Fitchburg and Munith." was printed below the photograph on some cabinet mounts. Luther Hopkins was John's partner in this business. John's cabinet photographs were found from Perry, from Leslie, from Albion and Leslie, and from "... Opposite Albion House, Albion, Mich." Orah was born in Michigan to a mother from Pennsylvania in August of 1879, she married John about 1895, and she was keeping house for him in 1900. John's sale of the Albion studio to his brother Taylor Halstead was reported in the summer of 1900. The 1902 and 1903 listings were for John H. Halstead. John was enumerated as divorced in 1910, and as a widower without an occupation in 1920 and 1930. He seems to have lived alone throughout these decades, and he died in 1945.

He was born in Franklin County, Indiana, on July 20, 1849, second of the seven children of Oliver and Lucinda (Alley) Halstead. He was called Zachary or Zachariah through 1870, but was known as Taylor in the Twentieth Century. He married Ella Wyant on July 5, 1878, and she died in 1879. He was working in Indiana and Michigan by 1881 as a United Brethren minister. Barbara Ellen Bechtel was born in Canada of Scotch ancestry in May of 1862, and she married Taylor at Waterloo, Ontario, on December 21, 1880. Their sons were born in Michigan: Albert (later Roy) in December of 1886, Leon Moses (later Lee) in February of 1893, and Myrle in 1905. Taylor's purchase of the Albion photography business from his brother John was reported in the summer of 1900. He died at Breckenridge, Michigan, on February 5, 1928.

Daniel was born on May 12, 1836, at Yorkshire in Cattaraugus County, New York, second of the four children of Levi and Orpah M. (Keith) Hamilton. He also had seven half-siblings born to Levi's first wife. Daniel married Elizabeth Walters on November 24, 1856, and their sons Frank and Fred were born in Michigan between 1858 and 1863. Elizabeth and her sons were living in 1870 on the farm of her uncle in Shiawassee County, Michigan. Daniel's second marriage was to Emma J. Adams in 1865, and they had no children. One D. H. Hamilton was a photographer in 1872 at Peru, Illinois. Hamilton & Maurice L. Jones had a second gallery at 44 Calhoun Street in Fort Wayne, and Maurice was the proprietor of the Hamilton Art Gallery on the southeast corner of Calhoun and Columbia Streets there in 1887. Daniel visited Detroit in April of 1881 to make arrangements for a gallery that opened a month later. He moved to Detroit with his family, and left his Fort Wayne gallery in charge of a competent artist. In Detroit, Daniel employed Rebecca McGrew as a photo printer from 1881 through 1883, and David Gilbert as a retoucher in 1882 and 1883. He advertised in 1884: "We make a specialty of fine Photographs, also portraits in Ink, Oil, Water and Crayon." Daniel was succeeded in Detroit by Arthur & Philbric. His Grand Rapids employees included Ella M. Carlton, photo printer in 1886 and clerk from 1887 to 1891; Elmer Sharpsteen, retoucher in 1886 and photo operator from 1888 through 1891; Mabel Lamphere, photo printer in 1888; William D. Bryant, retoucher in 1888 and 1890; Richard D. Brooks, photographer in 1888 and photo printer in 1890; John Reingholtz and Frank P. Towse, photo printers in 1891; and Harriet Thumler, retoucher in 1891. On the back of a 3 by 2 inch photograph mount was printed: "Compliments of HAMILTON'S Art Gallery. At this Establishment the public have the benefit of knowing they can get all kinds of Photographic Work of a superior quality at reasonable prices. OUR PORTRAITS are acknowledged by the best critics as being the finest in the land. - 436 Milwaukee St., Milwaukee, Wis, - 79 Canal St., Grand Rapids, Mich." Daniel may have been associated with T. Harold Powe in Milwaukee, and probably was succeeded by him there. After Daniel died on October 2, 1891, James Hamilton moved from St. Johns to take over the Muskegon gallery, and Daniel's widow Emma continued to operate the Grand Rapids studio for two additional decades.

Emma was born in Iowa on September 29, 1846, ninth of the ten children of Ervin and Charlotte (Murray) Adams, and a sister of the photographer Daniel E. Adams. She was raised in Detroit, and she married Daniel H. Hamilton in 1865. They never had children. In 1886 she opened the Grand Rapids gallery in the name of her husband. Before his death on October 2, 1891, Daniel had been busy establishing new galleries at Muskegon and at Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Some of her cabinet photographs from 79 Canal Street can be distinguished from earlier work by the EJH monogram below the photographic print. At the convention of the Photographers' Association of America at St. Louis in 1894, Emma was awarded two medals and a diploma. By 1897 hers was the oldest gallery in Grand Rapids, and occupied the second and third floors of a building measuring 18 by 100 feet, where she employed five experienced assistants. She had a high reputation for children's photographs and made a specialty of life size portraits made either directly or as enlargements. Three photographs from the Hamilton Art Gallery in Grand Rapids were reproduced in a photographic periodical in the fall of 1904. Some of Emma's employees were: Miss Harriet Thumler, retoucher in 1892 and 1893; John Reingholdtz, retoucher or photographer from 1892 to 1895; Miss Ella M. Carlton, clerk in 1893; Miss Clara A. Ledward, photo printer in 1910. Fred M. Van Campen and John Reingholdtz were first employees and later her partners. Hamilton & Reingholdtz employed Earl W. Clement as a photo printer.

James was born about 1858 in Grey County, Ontario, a son of John and Phoebe Hamilton. By July of 1886 he had purchased the New York Photo Gallery of A. H. Slade & Company at Collingwood. Hamilton & Company continued to use the designation "New York Gallery" on their cabinet mounts. By December of 1887 the Collingwood gallery had been sold to Charles A. Fanjoy. James advertised widely in July of 1888: "WANTED - Situation as Retoucher, Printer or Operator. Long experience in business for myself. Can take full charge if necessary. Temperate. References. J. HAMILTON, Lock Box 52, Albion, Mich." He advertised again early in 1889: "Anyone having galleries for sale should address at once, with full particulars, and lowest price asked, James Hamilton, Springfield, Mo." Isabella was born in Collingwood Township, Ontario, in June of 1862. She married James at Simcoe, Ontario, on September 11, 1889, and returned with him to the United States. Their children were born in Michigan: John in June of 1890, Elizabeth (later Bessie) in June of 1894, Charles in June of 1896, and Florence (later Agnes) in June of 1898. James never became a naturalized citizen of the United States. Albert E. Hamilton was the other brother at St. Johns. Both he and James were succeeded by Joseph L. Hamilton in 1892. One Joseph Hamilton had replaced James at Markdale in 1890 or earlier. James succeeded Daniel H. Hamilton at Muskegon in 1892, emphasizing portraits, introducing the enamel raised-work process and dealing "... in Photographic Chemicals and Supplies of every description. All of the Standard Makes of Printing Out Papers constantly on hand. Camera Boxes, Lenses, Burnishers and Accessories of any make supplied on short notice..." He advertised locally in 1893: "Hamilton's Art Gallery, for All The Latest Styles of Photos;... for Large Groups and Life Size Photos;... for the New Glace Cabinet Photos;... for the Finest Line of Pictures and Frames in the City." James advertised nationally in June of 1895: "FOR SALE - Two A1 galleries, one in a city of 25,000; another in city of 8,000. To parties with cash, this is a rare chance..." and: "WANTED - A good retoucher, lady or gentleman. Send samples, and state wages in first letter to J. Hamilton, 14 Jefferson St., Muskegon, Mich." He advertised again in the fall of 1895: "FOR SALE - Gallery. An A1 chance; fitted first-class and doing a fine business; city 25,000 pop. Reason for selling, have photo supplies and cannot look after both..." By 1897 James had established a reputation for selling "... goods cheaper than any similar firm in the country.... He quotes special prices on Seed, Hammer and Stanley plates and all other supplies. He also makes a specialty of amateur work." James advertised nationally again in the summer of 1897: "FOR SALE - Two A1 galleries; one in city of seven thousand, the other in city of twenty thousand. Also one 16 by 20 camera box, Scovill Monarch lens, gem stand, and one 8B Suter lens, one 5B Suter and one quarter size Dartot. For particulars, apply to J. Hamilton, 17 First St., Muskegon, Mich." He advertised again one year later: "FOR SALE - Two A1 galleries; one in a city of 25,000, the other in a city of 5000. For particulars address J. Hamilton, 17 First St., Muskegon, Mich." In 1901 James was a "... Dealer in Photographers' Supplies and Amateur Goods of every description. All kinds of Amateur Cameras and Kodaks on hand. Printing, Cut Papers, Dry Plates, all the leading brands constantly in stock. Camera Boxes, Burnishers, Lenses and Accessories of any make supplied on short notice..." By 1908, James and Muskegon photographer John A. LaFayette were financially associated with lumber interests at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. James had his two daughters as photographic partners at Belleville in 1920.

| James was the son of James M. and Sarah J. (Curtis) Hamilton, and was born near South Boardman in Kalkaska County. He advertised copying and enlarging from Plymouth. In 1901 he married Mrs. Ella M. Dodd, a 28-year-old widow with two young children. They spent the warmer months in Michigan and their winters at St. Petersburg, Florida, where James had a studio. He departed from Florida early in May of 1903, leaving Miss Daisy Johnson (his assistant during the winter) in charge of the gallery. He returned to St. Petersburg late in November to occupy the Bussey gallery opposite the postoffice. In July of 1906, only a few weeks after he had purchased the Coloma studio of Ezra F. Kniebes, James attended a photographers' convention at Grand Rapids. There he contracted spinal meningitis and soon was dead. His widow continued the Coloma photography business in his name. |           | 31 333 222 333 m |

| She was born Eloise May Gilson on February 13, 1873, on a farm just south of Coloma to Warren D. and Laura E. (Bragg) Gilson. Her grandfather, Squire Steven Gilson, is credited with founding Coloma. She became known as Ella and, while in her teens, married Charles S. Dodd. She soon gave birth to Laura in August of 1892 and to Kenneth in August of 1894. Then Charles took sick and died, and she found herself to be a twenty-year-old widow with two babies to raise. In 1901 she and her sister were running the Island Park Hotel on Paw Paw Lake, and there she met and married James R. Hamilton. James was a talented photographer, and Ella soon became experienced in the business under his able direction. They spent their honeymoon and subsequent trips in the wilds of Kalkaska County near James' birthplace, and their winters working in his studio at St. Petersburg, Florida, and enjoying the sunshine. Their son Edison was born about 1905. James purchased the studio of Ezra F. Kniebes over the Coloma Courier office, and died from spinal meningitis only a few weeks later, in July of 1906. Ella's 14-year-old daughter Laura died of scarlet fever one week later, and her son Kenneth was so sick that he was not told of his sister's death until he was out of danger. Once again a widow, Ella seems to have continued the Coloma studio in her husband's name for a few years. She knew the rudiments of the photography business, but still had much to learn. She attended the Eastman school for professional photographers to obtain instruction in lighting, posing, draping and darkroom techniques, and acquired the knack of posing people to bring out the best in them. She opened a branch studio at Strong's Landing on Paw Paw Lake in July of 1907, catering to the resort trade and ably assisted by her son, Kenneth Dodd, who handled framing. "Hamilton" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs along with "Coloma, Mich." and captions describing the scenes depicted. When a heavy snowfall collapsed Woodward's Pavilion on Paw Paw Lake in January of 1910, Ella and her son trudged through the snow from Coloma with her equipment to photograph the ruins. While William Grant was building a new brick block in Coloma, Ella prevailed upon him to construct the second floor so as to accommodate her studio and an apartment, into which she moved. Some time in the 1920s Ella married Edward A. Turrell, and in 1930 they were living in Charlotte County, Florida. Her son Edison had become a civil engineer and was sharing their home. |           | 333 11 333331 3333333tt 44 333 111 |

Joseph was born in Canada in 1857, and had six years of photographic experience before moving to St. Johns. He succeeded James Hamilton at Markdale about 1890, and in July of 1892 succeeded him again in the old established gallery at St. Johns. The local newspaper praised the location and facilities of the gallery as well as the abilities of Mr. Hamilton, and noted that he made all sizes of photographs from the small card to the panel cabinet and life size pictures. Joseph advertised in 1892: "Landscape and Portrait Artist. I make a Specialty of LARGE WORK. Also FINE PORTRAIT WORK. Photographic Work of All Kinds Done and Satisfaction Guaranteed...." About 1896 he was making a specialty of artistic work including the latest styles of Platino work. All of the portraits in the St. Johns issue of Headlight Flashes were reproduced from his photographs. Joseph advertised in the spring of 1899: FOR SALE - Leading gallery in town of 4000; county seat; north light, ground glass; fitted to 14 x 17; cabinets $3 to $4 per dozen. Address J. L. Hamilton, St. Johns, Mich." Joseph purchased the Marshall gallery from Fred E. Osborn and took possession in August of 1902. He was identified at Weyburn only as J. Hamilton from 1909 to 1912, but as Joseph L. Hamilton in the 1911 census and beginning in 1918 by Glen Phillips. Mrs. William S, Charnell was proprietor of the Hamilton Studio at Weyburn in 1921.

Theron was born in Michigan to parents from New York late in 1847 or in 1848, fourth of the six children of John and Ada Hamilton. He grew up on the family farm. Stanton is six miles north of Fairplain Township. Lucy Ann (sometimes Annie) Gilmore was born in Ohio to a mother from New York on March 27, 1849, second of the thirteen children of Samuel and Sarah (Johnson) Gilmore. She married Alvin S. Watson on February 17, 1867, but somehow was free to marry Theron on May 13, 1871. Theron was enumerated in 1880 as "maimed, crippled, bedridden or otherwise disabled." He and Annie were providing in 1880 for nine male boarders, two woodsmen and seven that worked in the shingle mill. Their sons were born in Michigan: Fernie John Hamilton on August 30, 1881, and Hyla Henry Hamilton on September 6, 1886. Theron died some time in the next few years, and Annie married his younger brother Dexter Hamilton on March 26, 1891. She lived until August 8, 1908.

Harry was born in Pennsylvania to a mother from Ohio on April 6, 1884, eldest of the four children of Gilbert and Belle Hamm. He became a tall man with grey eyes and brown hair. Mary E. (later Edna) was born in Ohio to Irish parents about 1886, and she married Harry in 1907. Their daughter Catherine was born in Pennsylvania in 1908, their daughter Grace was born in Ohio in 1910, and their son Gilmore was born in Pennsylvania in 1913. "© Mock / Hamm." was lettered on the negatives of 6 ½ by 45 inch panoramas of Camp Custer. "© HAMM & FUNK, BATTLE CREEK." was lettered on each of five panoramic negatives of Camp Custer used in making 5 ½ by 14 inch composite photographs. "H. H. HAMM, 19 So. Jefferson Ave., Battle Creek, Mich." was printed on the post card backs of photographs made from negatives on which captions like "Damaged Heating Plant, Storm May 9th 1918" and "Co. B 329 FIELD ART. REVIEW 6/8" were lettered. Panoramic photos of Camp Custer by T. F. Mock were press printed and published by M. E. Hamm from 19 South Jefferson Avenue in Battle Creek and then mailed in cardboard tubes labeled: "... PUBLISHED BY H. H. HAMM, TOLEDO, OHIO." The publisher M. E. Hamm was undoubtedly Harry's wife, Mrs. Mary Edna Hamm.

George was born at Vermontville, Michigan, to Myram A. and Myra C. (Burwell) Hance on May 8, 1874. That he would soon open a gallery at Grand Haven was reported early in the summer of 1898. Mooers & Hance claimed to do "Fine Work in all Styles of Photographs." George and Miss Lila May Ives were married at her home town of Olivet on November 1, 1899. Their children were born in California a few years later, Kenneth Gordon on July 6, 1903, and Mary Elizabeth on May 1, 1904. Harold W. Wilson was a principal of George W. Hance & Company. George advertised "PHOTOGRAPHS: Scenic, Architectural, Commercial" in 1915, and as a "PHOTOGRAPHER OF HOMES" in 1917. He entered the army as a captain in the Signal Reserve Corps on July 5, 1918, and was assigned as Officer in Charge of Instruction at the Signal Corps School of Photography at Columbia University in New York City. As the war ended, he was honorably discharged from the service on December 21, 1918. He copyrighted several 10 ½ by 13 ½ inch photographs of interiors at the Detroit Golf Club in 1919. George became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921, and was an honorary member by 1929. He lost his first wife after a long illness in 1930. At this time their daughter still was in Detroit and their son was a professor at Olivet College. By 1934 George was married to a lady named Edith. He was 70 years old when he died in Detroit on November 7, 1944.

Hancock, Allen

Almont PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1898-1923 m
Port Huron PHOTOGRAPHER at 201 ½ Huron av ..... 1926-1933 m P

Allen was born in Canada on December 19, 1875, crossed the border in 1888, and became a citizen of the United States when his father was naturalized while Allen was a minor. Mae Helen Starkweather, later known as Mary, was born in Michigan in November of 1873. She married Allen in 1899 or early in 1900, and apparently they never had children. She was working as a milliner in Almont in 1900 and 1910. "Hancock, Photo, Almont, Mich." was printed in gold ink on the face of a series of 5 by 7 prints on 7¼ by 9¼ inch mounts. The series depicted logging operations and the use of portable saw mills. The same gold impression was applied to many post card photographs of Almont and nearby towns, along with captions printed entirely in capital letters in the same gold ink. Other cards have the distinctive gilt captions without the Hancock inscription. Some show his studio on the second floor of a wooden building on the northeast corner of Main and St. Clair Streets. This building had a tower at the corner, and two second story bay windows facing St. Clair Street. In addition to the usual business street scenes, factories and schools, Allen's postal photographs include a fox chase through town on December 30, 1907, and the crowd at a farm machinery manufacturer's sale on April 14, 1908. He also photographed parades and picnics during Old-Home Week in July of 1909 and Home-Coming in August of 1914, estate sales and the first interurban cars into Almont on July 1, 1914. For Old Home Week in 1909, Allen reproduced a cabinet photograph showing the imprint of E. S. Hancock, Lapeer, Michigan. He added the caption: "Almont Band attending Soldier's Reunion at Lapeer, Campaign Year 1888." Hancock post card photos include scenes in Allenton, Dryden, Kingston, Lakeville, Lum, Reese, St. Clair and Smith. Allen was medium sized with blue eyes and brown hair in 1918.

Hancock, Carrie, Mrs.

Lapeer housewife ..... 1900 1
Lapeer PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1910 1

Carrie was born in Canada in March of 1858, and she was brought to this country about 1865. She married a Canadian named Cain, and she gave birth in Michigan to Nancy in December of 1881. Carrie married Edward S. Hancock in 1890 or 1891, and undoubtedly participated in his photography business. Though they remained married, she apparently did not accompany her husband when he moved to Idaho in 1903. She was operating the Lapeer studio on her own account in 1910. Edward was enumerated as a widower in 1920.

Edward was born in Canada in June of 1852, came to the United States in 1885, and became a naturalized citizen. Carrie was born in Canada in March of 1858, she married a Canadian named Cain, and their daughter was born in Michigan in December of 1881. Carrie married Edward in 1890 or 1891. "London Art Company. - Ground Floor Gallery - Lapeer, Mich. - HANCOCK, Photographer." was printed on most of Edward's cabinet mounts from Lapeer. Similar mounts omit his name and substitute: "Opposite Abram House." Some from about 1895 have "... Opposite Potter House ... Especial Attention given to Copying and Enlarging Old Pictures. Life Size Portraits and Photos Finished in Ink, Crayon, Pastel or Water Colors...." He was boarding in a hotel and was enumerated as a Cottonwood undertaker in 1910, when Carrie was back in Lapeer making photographs.

Her father came from Ohio and Ida was born in Michigan to a mother from Wisconsin in January of 1862, and she married George in 1886 or 1887. Their daughter Ella was born here in May of 1891. "GEO. H. HANLEY, PHOTOGRAPHER, Views a Specialty." was stamped on the back of a cabinet mounted bird's-eye view of the funeral procession for the firemen who lost their lives at Benton Harbor in September of 1896. "G. H. HANLEY. ART STUDIO. Negatives Preserved" was printed below the image on other cabinet mounts with pictures of some of the funeral floral arrangements, a portrait of a fireman whose brother was one of those killed, and showing a large irregular piece of glass on which was lettered: "This relic was taken from the ruins of Yore's Opera House that burned Sept. 6, 1896, in which twelve BRAVE FIREMEN lost their lives by being buried under the falling walls...." The lettering goes on to list the seven men from Benton Harbor and the five men from St. Joseph who were killed, and to state that six others were badly injured. Ella was living with her parents and working as a stenographer in 1920, but soon left to marry a man named Hench from Pennsylvania. Her father emigrated from England and Ada was born in Canada in November of 1859, eldest of the five children of Robert and Eliza Hannaford. The family immigrated in 1864, so her two youngest siblings were born in Michigan. The older children became United States citizens when their father was naturalized in 1869. All five siblings were living with their widowed mother in 1900. Ada's brother William had married and become a widower, and he came back home with his daughter Nellie born in April of 1899. The four eldest of Eliza's children accompanied her to California and were residing together in 1910. Ada finally married but was back with her mother in 1920 as the widow Mrs. Ada J. Berry. She was head of a household in 1930 that included two female boarders and one male boarder.

Her father emigrated from Ireland and became a Detroit police officer; a sergeant in 1894 and a captain by 1900. She was born Mary Caroline Hanrahan in Florida to a Welsh mother on August 9, 1878, third of the six children of Pierce and Jane (Grose) Hanrahan. She seems to have been called Carrie almost all of her adult life. Her older sister Mary did not live to maturity. Carrie remained single and lived with her parents until she married George F. Lavin about 1918. George was born in New York to Irish parents in 1871, and was a physician with the Detroit medical department. By 1930 Carrie was a widow living by herself. She died in Detroit on March 3, 1953.

Jacob's parents emigrated from the German state of Wurttemberg and he was born in Detroit on July 24, 1853, third of the six children of George and Elizabeth Hanselman. He was a Detroit newsboy at the time President Lincoln was assassinated. At fourteen he was apprenticed to a Detroit photographer, and he later worked for a photographer across the river in Windsor, Ontario. He married 16-year-old Laura at Saginaw when he was 23 years old, and became the father of a girl in 1880 and a boy named Jay two years later. He ran these advertisements in 1878: "Hanselman takes the very best photographs for the lowest price in the city." and "... Hereafter I will make photographs fifty cents a dozen cheaper than any other photographer in the city, no matter how cheap you can get them. Come and convince yourself. I guarantee satisfaction or no pay. J. HANSELMAN." Early Manistee imprints locate "Hanselman's Portrait and Photograph Gallery opposite H. B. Larsen's" or "... near the Post Office." Until his first Manistee gallery was sold to Lysander W. Miller in May of 1882, Jacob was simultaneously manufacturing furniture and photographing. He was the proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel as well as a photographer in 1886. His Manistee cabinet photographs include views of the Cushman-Calkins Lumber Mills and some great dog and puppy portraits. Jacob succeeded Marl E. Hobart as Big Rapids' photographer. A cabinet photo of a cartoon of two baseball players with photographic heads carried the message: "Happy New Year 1895" and the imprint: "Hanselman - Manistee, Big Rapids, Bear Lake." From 1894 until 1900 he added a line of drugs to his Manistee business, then dropped them in favor of bicycles, which he continued to sell until 1911. The third disastrous fire in three successive nights at Manistee was reported in March of 1899. It swept through the building owned by Jacob, who estimated his loss at more than $10,000 while he was only insured for $3500. He had just put in an independent water works system, which with windmill and plumbing cost $2000. He was married for the second time about 1901 to Miss Elizabeth Crandell of Ithaca, Michigan. Bessie was born in Canada about 1874, and she gave birth to Margaret in 1902 and to George in 1904. Jacob's post card photographs of Orchard Beach, a salt works interior and a cable operated ferry across the river are the earliest examples of this format that I have seen. "POST CARD, Authorized by Act of Congress of May 19, 1898..." was printed on them by the manufacturer of the photographic paper, while Jacob marked most of them with ink stamps but others with a blind stamp. Late in 1910 he sold the River Street studio to Ernest John, but a few months later he bought it back. "From Hanselman's Photo Studio, Maple Street Opposite Post Office, Manistee, Mich." was printed on the post card backs of photographs, including one of an interurban wreck mailed in July of 1917. In 1921 Jacob bought a house in Ann Arbor and his wife moved there so that their children could attend the university. Jacob stayed in Manistee, but by the fall of 1922 he became so lonesome that he sold the studio at 69 Maple Street to the McGregors. For a couple of years it was the business of Mrs. Nellie McGregor and Clarence G. McGregor. He found little to do in Ann Arbor and he missed his Manistee friends, so he bought the studio back from the McGregors and lived alone in Manistee for much of a decade. Jacob suffered a period of illness about 1930, and the studio was managed for a short while by his friend Arthur Dawson, an Englishman who was an official at the iron works. Jacob died at Ann Arbor in July of 1948, just two weeks short of his 95th birthday. Five years later his Manistee negatives were donated by his daughter to the Manistee County Historical Society, where they were cataloged and printed, and the prints were mounted in albums.

Laura was born in Michigan to parents from New York in July of 1862. She married 23-year-old Jacob Hanselman at Saginaw about 1877, and gave birth to a daughter named Winnogene in 1880 and to a son named Jay on September 26, 1882. Laura and Jay were living in Big Rapids in 1900. She and Jacob seem to have divorced before he married for the second time about 1901. Laura made several trips to the West Indies. She arrived at New York from Cuba with Jay on August 23, 1917. She arrived at New York traveling alone from the Dominican Republic on February 17, 1924, April 20, 1925, and April 19, 1927. Laura was sharing her Newark home with her daughter and her granddaughter Alice in 1920, and she was lodging in Manhattan with a widow and the lady's son in 1930.

| Hans was born at Vragen, Norway, on March 4, 1849, he immigrated in 1875, and he became a naturalized citizen of the United States. By January of 1887 Hans had established at Iron Mountain one of the best photographic galleries north of Milwaukee, and had hired Sophus H. Mortenson, a fine Chicago artist. They were giving a panel picture with each dozen photographs. Mortenson & Hansen advertised life size pictures, and made a photographic specialty of children in their gallery opposite the Milwaukee & Northern Railroad depot. Mortenson was an Iron Mountain photographer until 1911. Hans' first marriage produced two daughters that were born in Wisconsin: Bertha in August of 1886 and Etta in October of 1887. Nicolene Christina Nelson was born to Norwegian parents at Fort Howard, Wisconsin, on September 11, 1863, the daughter of Halvor and Gornborg T. (Clemmetsen) Nelson. She married Hans at Florence on January 3, 1894, and proceeded to add six more children to his family: Ann in September of 1896, Helen in July of 1898, Edith in May of 1900, Willard about 1902, Harold about 1903, and Howard about 1906. |           |     |

Henry was born at Big Patch, Wisconsin, on February 23, 1889, last of the eight children of Henry and Melvina (Todd) Harbican. He became a medium sized man with blue eyes and brown hair. Minnie was born in Canada on July 11, 1892, and she married Henry about 1911. Their daughter Alma was born in 1912. The change from 882 to 4504 Fourteenth Avenue during 1920 was due to revisions in the numbering system, rather than to relocation. Henry was 80 years old when he died in Detroit on September 24, 1969. Minnie died in February of 1971 at Saginaw, Michigan.

Myron was born at Montreal, Canada, on July 27, 1846. He entered the service as a substitute for Henry Hewett, who had been drafted from Cambria, Michigan. Myron was a 5 foot 4 ½ inch farmer with a light complexion, brown eyes and light hair when he was mustered into the army at Detroit as a private in Company A of the Fourteenth Michigan Infantry on September 29, 1864. Atlanta had fallen before Myron joined his regiment, and the Fourteenth was on the march with General Sherman to the sea. They reached Savannah, Georgia, on December 16 and were in action there on the following five days. Savannah surrendered and Sherman marched north through South Carolina and into North Carolina, only occasionally meeting strong resistance. From early February until July of 1865, Myron was on detached duty with General Thomas. The Fourteenth had many casualties when their brigade charged the enemy works at Averysboro, and they were in the thick of the fighting at Bentonville on March 19 and 20. This was the last severe engagement of General Sherman's army. They marched on through North Carolina and Virginia, and reached Washington in time to take part in the grand review on May 24. They were sent to Louisville, Kentucky, where Myron was mustered out of the army with his regiment on July 18, and then to Detroit where they were paid off and disbanded. Myron never married. He lived for a while at Detroit, Saline and Eureka before he moved to Baldwin. He qualified for an Invalid Pension in the early 1890s, and was receiving $19.00 per month when he died at Kalkaska on April 26, 1918.

Chester was born at Mount Shasta, California, to William H. and Lydia R. (Wells) Hardy on June 22, 1889, according to his draft registration. Census records list his birth between 1891 and June of 1893. He, his mother, his five-year-old sister Bessie, and his one-year-old brother Myron were living in 1900 on the farm of his uncle Elmer S. Wells. Chester and Miss Essie J. Curtiss were married in her home town of Traverse City on September 9, 1912, and most of their children were born in Michigan: Walter in January of 1915, Newell in July of 1917, Dorothy in September of 1919, Carl about 1921, and Dale about 1925. Their daughter Lucille was born in Illinois about 1928. "HARDY" along with captions such as "THE LEELANAU AT LELAND MICH" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs. Some of the cards were mailed in October of 1916. Chester was tall and slim with gray eyes and brown hair, and was troubled with sore feet. Despite his dependents and physical disability, he was inducted into the army at Leland on March 7, 1918, and was sent to the United States School of Aerial Photography in Kodak Park at Rochester, New York. There from May 3 until December 17, 1918, he was an instructor in the Lantern Slide Department. The school was closed, and he was honorably discharged from the service on December 18, 1918.

| Charles was born at Mason City, Iowa, to Canadian parents on December 22, 1881, second of the three children of John Lounderry Harkinson and Agnes Gray (Fulton) Harkinson. His sister Maude was born in Wisconsin in May of 1879, and his brother Laun was born in Iowa in November of 1882. Charles became a tall man with grey eyes and auburn hair. He moved to Minnesota about 1899, and he was registered as Clare Harkinson in the 1905 Minnesota Census and for the World War I Draft. He was listed as Clarence D. Harkinson in all of the pertinent Michigan State Gazetteers. Eva was born in Michigan to a Canadian father and a mother from New York about 1888. She married Charles in 1907 or early in 1908, but the marriage did not last. Lucille Bradley was born in Ohio in 1892 or early in 1893, and she married Charles at Houghton, Michigan, on September 25, 1919. Their sons were born in Michigan: Marvin on May 10, 1921, and Leon in 1925 or early in 1926. | Manistee lawyer .....                          | 1873-1899 | 5 m |

David was born at Franconia, Pennsylvania, on March 10, 1834, third of the seven children of Jack and Sarah Harley and their eldest son. He entered the state normal school when he was twenty. After graduating, he taught school for several terms at Marietta, Pennsylvania, and then came to Michigan to engage in surveying and in publishing maps of the southern parts of the state. He and Miss Jennie Phelps were married at Detroit in March of 1861. Their daughter Flora was born in 1864 or 1865, and their son Herbert was born about 1871. David graduated from the law school of the University of Michigan in 1867, was admitted to the bar by the supreme court of Michigan, and opened an office at Lincoln, then the county seat of Mason County. He served as prosecuting attorney of Mason County for several years. At Manistee he formed a partnership with S. W. Fowler that was dissolved by mutual consent in 1878. David was circuit court commissioner for six years at Manistee, and justice of the peace from 1890 through 1895. Owing to a nervous affliction, by 1895 he had nearly lost the use of his eyes and his legs, but not that of his keen mind, and was in his office daily. David died at Manistee on June 6, 1900.

George was born in England in April of 1854, immigrated in 1871, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States. Ida was born in Illinois to English parents in March of 1860, and she married George about 1881. Their son Lloyd (later George L.) was born in October of 1882. "Established 1875" was printed on several different Harman & Verner cabinet mounts. On some stereo views a Harman & Verner sticker covered the name of J. J. Gibson, who left Bay City about 1877. At this time Harman & Verner were offering to copy pictures from Miniatures to Life Size Heads. Some gazetteers of the 1880s placed the gallery at 908 or 910 North Water Street, but 914 North Water Street was printed consistently on their photograph mounts of this period, along with such phrases as: "We are making the finest $3.00 CABINETS in the City.... Instantaneous Portraits of Children a successful specialty.... Old Pictures Copied and Enlarged." Some card mounts from the corner of 4th & Washington Avenue carry outdoor scenes. George was elected second vice president of the Michigan Photographers' Association when it was organized on January 15, 1895. Harman & Verner were awarded a diploma for photographs exhibited in Class D at the 1895 convention of the Photographers' Association of America in Detroit. They were selling photographic supplies by 1897. Early round Kodak prints were mounted on 5¼ by 4¼ inch cards with the Harman & Verner logo printed on the back along with "You press the button, and we do the rest." Kodaks, Kamarets and Premiers for sale. Spools of Film of all sizes kept in stock. Send us your Kodak, and we will put in new Film, finish your Pictures, and return on shortest notice."

Arthur was born in England in September of 1850, and was raised in Canada along with his brother William and ten other siblings. He moved to the United States in 1887, and later became a naturalized citizen. Margaret was born in Canada to Irish parents in December of 1866, and she married Arthur in 1892 or 1893. It was his second marriage. Their son Harold was born in Canada in October of 1894. "A. V. Harmer, Photographer, Copemish, Mich." was printed beneath the photographs of some cabinet mounts, while "From A. V. HARMER, Photographer, Bellaire, Mich." was stamped on the backs of the same mounts. "Harmer Brothers, Cadillac, Mich. - Lake City, Copemish and Bellaire" was printed on some cabinet mounts, and "Harmer Brothers, Cadillac and Lake City, Mich" was printed on others. The Harmer Brothers used a 4 by 8 ¼ mount for a photograph of a Cadillac butcher shop with an extensive exterior display of venison, poultry and other meats, and one of their Cadillac cabinet mounts was for a photo of a large brick building under construction. Arthur's sale of the Lake City gallery to A. W. Wilson was reported in the spring of 1900. Margaret was living in Cadillac as a widow by 1920.

William was born in Canada in 1859, and came to Michigan in the early 1880s in hopes of making money in lumbering. "Will M. Harmer, Successor to Harmer Bros., Artistic PHOTOGRAPHER, Cadillac and Lake City, Mich. Aristo Process used Exclusively. Copying and Picture Framing. Negatives kept and reprints can be had any time at $2.00 per dozen. Old and faded pictures copied to any size." was printed on the backs of some cabinet mounts. The backs of other mounts featured concentric rings of children's portraits with "W. M. Harmer, Artistic Photographer, Cadillac, Mich. Instantaneous and Aristo Processes. Viewing; Copying; Enlarging; Framing. Duplicates can be had any time at reduced rates." An advertisement about 1892 utilized the same cut and added the words: "The oldest in the city and centrally located. Over 7,000 registered and well preserved negatives on hand, of which duplicates can be had any time at reduced rates." The Cadillac studio was sold about 1896 to Alfred E. Boardman, who advertised in the fall of 1897 as successor to the Harmer Brothers in Lake City, Cadillac and Manton. From Sparks Street in Ottawa William advertised as a View Photographer selling Ottawa views, winter scenes, lumbering in the woods, etc. He specialized in commercial and illustrative work, did finishing for amateurs and made picture frames to order. Britannia Heights, Ontario, had a photographer named W. M. Harmer from 1923 through 1925. William lived until 1949. His work, along with that of eleven other Ottawa photographers, was featured in the 1970 Ottawa exhibit "Reflections on a Capital." Examples are held by the National Photography Collection of the Public Archives of Canada, and the Library of Congress has a 3 by 10 inch panorama of Cadillac copyrighted by Will in 1892.

He was listed as Eastman Harper in the gazetteers and in the 1870 census, as Eastman R. Harper in the 1900 census, and as Robert Harper in the 1880 census. He was born in Michigan to Canadian parents on August 8, 1866, second of the three children of Charles and Elizabeth (sometimes Betsy) Harper. Julia was born in Canada in 1873, she was brought to the United States in 1878, and she married Eastman in 1894 or 1895. Their children were born in Michigan: Thurlow on May 6, 1896, Thelma on April 16, 1898, Otto in 1902, Theta in 1905, and Lela in 1908. "Harper" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs along with such legends as "Hotel Alden" and "Alden Depot" and "Taking Pictures at Rapid City." The backs of some of the post cards were divided, while others were not. "Rapid City, 1906. E.B.H." was lettered on the negative of a postal bird's-eye view. Rapid City is three miles south of Alden, and was the next stop on the Pere Marquette Railroad. Julia was working from her home as an Alden laundress in 1910, while providing a home for all of her children. At this time she was enumerated as married, though Eastman was not to be found. Julia married Herbert Gun and then gave birth to Delta and Arden between 1915 and 1918. Otto, Theta and Lela still were living with their mother in 1920

Albert was born in New York State in May of 1839, eldest of the three sons of Daniel E. and Phidelia Harris. His brothers Chaney and George were born between 1841 and 1844, and George did not live to maturity. Her father came from Massachusetts and Sarah was born in Ohio to a mother from New York in October of 1845. She married Albert in 1864 or 1865, and they never had children. Before he established his own business in 1882, Albert had been in charge of the wholesale department of George R. Angell's photo supply house for twelve years, giving him experience as a buyer and manager and contacts with many photographers. During the summer of 1882 he advertised as far away as Cheboygan and Sturgis: "PHOTOGRAPHERS' SUPPLIES. Frames, Velvets, Mats, Glass, American Optical Co's Boxes. Dry Plate Outfits $10, $12, $18.50, $41 a specialty." He advertised Scovill amateur outfits in a guidebook to the pleasure resorts of Northern Michigan distributed by a railroad. "... Harris & Kittle. Cabinet Proof, untouched. Will make good pictures." was written on the back of a cabinet photograph of a well dressed young man posed outdoors with one hand on the back of a straight chair and with a stream in the background; indicating that Harris & Kittle may have done printing and mounting for people who purchased dry plate outfits from them. H. Maurice Kittle became Albert's partner on July 1, 1885, and was vice president of the Harris Photographic Supply Company two years later when they occupied a building of four stories and a basement, and employed ten clerks and assistants plus a large force of traveling agents covering Michigan, Indiana and Ohio. Albern K. Sweet was secretary of the company from 1887 through 1890, and Albert Ives was vice president from 1888 until 1890. Albert M. Harris was a widower by 1900, and was 72 years old when he died in Detroit on January 3, 1912.

Augustus was born in England to Augustus J. and Louisa T. (Selves) Harris in February of 1864, was brought across the Atlantic about 1867, and lived in Chicago, Illinois, and Linden, Kansas, before moving to Essexville about 1878. He became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1889. Jane Grace Black was born at Lambton, Ontario on December 25, 1870, the daughter of Andrew and Sarah (Lucas) Black. She came across the border with her parents in 1876, and she married Augustus at Essexville on July 5, 1890. Their children were born in Bay County: Edward on September 1, 1891, Ernest on June 22, 1893, Louisa on September 26, 1894, Lillian on January 2, 1898, Augustus on September 11, 1904, and Jane on August 21, 1916. Both galleries seem to have been closed for a while in the spring of 1898, for in June the Bay City gallery was expected to open soon, and the opening of the Essexville gallery was announced in August of 1898. A post card photograph of the launching party for the steamer Hawgood in 1908 was produced by Harris & Latham, and "Harris & Latham, Bay City, W.S., Mich." was blind stamped into the 7 by 9 inch black mounts of 4¼ by 6¾ photographs, including one of a decorated parade wagon full of costumed children. "GRADUATES AND FACULTY, WESTERN HIGH SCHOOL '08. HARRIS & LATHAM, 506 E. Midland St." was printed on the 16 by 20 inch mounts used for 35 individual portraits of the graduates and a 4 by 7 photo of the nine faculty members. The "HARRIS - BAY CITY, MICHIGAN" blind stamp was used on both studio portraits and scenic views in the post card format, some mailed in 1915. Mrs. Jane G. Harris, the widow of Augustus, was a Bay City photographer at 58 East Midland Street in 1926, and was proprietor of the Harris Studio at 406 East Midland Street from 1929 through 1938. She advertised in 1929: "Portrait Photography, Enlarging & Framing, Amateur Finishing. We Solicit the Drug Store Trade for Finishing Kodak Work." Jane lived until October 24, 1960.

One E. P. Harris produced stereo views during the 1870s at Skaneateles, New York. Ephraim was born at Erie, Pennsylvania, on July 26, 1837, third of the four sons of Elijah W. and Alma Harris. He was the brother of the Henry H. Harris profiled below, and became a five foot ten inch man with a light complexion, grey eyes and light hair. On April 1, 1862, he enlisted as a sergeant in Company K of the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry at Conneautville, Pennsylvania. He was honorably discharged and mustered out of the army at Petersburg, Virginia, on April 2, 1865. Ephraim produced an extensive series of stereo views, mostly cabinet size, of Pontiac and Oakland County. "E. P. Harris, Artist, Pontiac, Mich. Gems of Oakland County Scenery." was printed on the back of some of the views along with a list of 83 titles. Views 1 through 41 were of "PONTIAC AND ENVIRONS" and included "1 - D. G. H. & M. R. R. Depot." Views 42 through 59 were of Oak Hill Cemetery. Views 60 through 83 were of Orchard, Cass, Sylan, Pine and Dollar Lakes. A label partially covered this list on some views with: "Oakland County Cyclone - Views of the wreck" plus a list of 18 views at Oakwood and Thomas numbered between 104 and 124. Views numbered from 128 to 134 along with several unnumbered views covered a deer hunting trip, including a view of two hunters in front of a tent labeled "Camp Harris." Apparently Ephraim never married, and he applied for a Civil War Veterans Pension on June 1, 1891. He was receiving a pension of $30 per month when he died on February 22, 1914. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery at Pontiac, Michigan.

Henry was born at Girard, Pennsylvania, on April 3, 1832, eldest of the four sons of Elijah W. and Alma Harris. Eliza was born in New York State about 1840, and their sons George, Willard and Herbert were born in Pennsylvania between 1855 and 1861. Henry succeeded D. Ginter at Conneautville, and during part of his time there did business as Harris & Roddy. Harris painted portraits and landscapes to order in oil or India ink at Pontiac, and colored photographs. A cupid and a fruit piece from his skillful pencil were on exhibit at the First National Bank in March of 1869, when he had just completed a life size oil portrait of Colonel R. W. Davis. He had "A Magnificent Specimen Room" and made a specialty of "Art Product in Every Style...." At the Oakland County Fair in September of 1870, he was awarded a Second Premium of $1.00 for his exhibit of photographs. His wife was identified as R. Louise (Norton) Harris in 1880, and a son called Louis born in Michigan about 1872 had been added to their family. Henry was 60 years old when he died at Chicago on March 24, 1893. His grave in Pontiac's Oak Hill Cemetery has a GAR marker.

Norman was born in Ohio to a mother from Pennsylvania in March of 1845, eldest of the five children of Aaron and Rachel (Hill) Harris. Catherine was born in New York State on June 27, 1851, first of the four known children of Benjamin and Amelia Sawyer. She married Norman about 1867, and she died childless on March 30, 1878. Rebecca was born in Canada on November 23, 1847, last of the five children of Isaac W. and Chloe (Tracy) Stanley. She married Norman early in 1879. Their son Elliott was born on January 15, 1880, and their daughter Elva was born on June 14, 1883. That Norman would soon open a gallery at Conklin was reported late in 1898. Conklin is in Chester Township less than a mile north of Wright Township. Rebecca lived until March 27, 1922, and Norman died at Sparta in Kent County on May 7, 1925.

Richard was born in Ireland in May of 1859. He immigrated in 1880 and became a naturalized citizen of the United States. In the early 1880s, Richard was corresponding from Detroit with a young photographer in London, Ontario, suggesting a partnership to buy out the interest of portrait painter M. H. Kerr in a Detroit photo enlarging business. Apparently Harrison and Walker never got together the required $300.00. Richard’s Ottawa gallery was called the Royal Photographic Studio and Art Rooms. He first married a woman from Michigan. Their son Ray was born in Canada in November of 1886, and he was brought to the United States a year later. Her father emigrated from Germany and Florence was born in Nova Scotia in December of 1865. She moved to the United States in 1881, and she married Richard in 1893 or 1894. Their children were born in Alabama: William in September of 1897, Carl in 1902, and Florence in 1904. Richard was employing in 1900 a 22-year-old nephew, Nat O. Harrison, who had emigrated from Canada in 1899. Florence undoubtedly played a significant part in the business, for she was identified as a photographer in 1900 and again in 1920. 3

Charles was born to a mother from Michigan at North Baltimore, Ohio, on July 13, 1888, the only child of Henry J. and Myrtle E. (Norton) Harshberger. He was medium sized with brown eyes and black hair, and was enumerated in 1910 as a single view photographer on the road. He used a postal photo of himself standing beside his 5-by-7 camera preparing to photograph a group of forty people to send this message: "Nashville, M. Mr. Fisher. You may show this at the next meeting and take orders. Post cards sell a 5¢ or 60¢ per dz. 5 by 7 pictures sell for 25¢ apiece. You can order any time. It is best for you to collect at the time they order, and then you can send it all at once to me. Chas. Harshberger, Box 188." Other photographs had "CHAS. HARSHBERGER, NASHVILLE, MICH." or "PHOTO BY CHAS. HARSHBARGER, NASHVILLE, MICH." printed on their post card backs. They included snapshot-like pictures of children and adults, singly and in groups, mostly taken in front of or beside their home, a family plot in the graveyard, small crews of men at their work place or with the tools of their trade, a horse drawn parade float and a bird's-eye view of a street fair. Some of these cards were mailed in 1910. "S.D.A. Class of E.M.C. Photo at Hastings, Mich. by C. Harshberger, Aug 29, 1913" was lettered on the negative of another post card photo. Her father came from Ohio and Eva was born in Michigan in 1872. She married Fred Eaton about 1896, and their daughter Winifred was born in Michigan in 1897. Something happened to this marriage, and Eva brought along Winifred when she married Charles in 1912. She gave birth to their daughter Julia in April of 1914. Eva became known as Elfa by the 1930s. Charles lived until December of 1967.

Chauncey was born in New York to parents from Connecticut in the summer of 1831, second of the five known children of Roswell and Eliza Hart. In 1850 he was following the trade of his father. His sister Henrietta seems to have taken over his photographic business when he entered the army. Chauncey enlisted at Plymouth as a private in Company K of the First Michigan Engineers and Mechanics on December 10 and was mustered into the Union Army on December 23, 1861. Late in December of 1862 the regiment constructed a light barricade of brush and wagons at Lavergne on the supply and communication route between Nashville and the battleground at Stone River. Three or four thousand Confederate cavalymen and a section of light artillery under General Wheeler attacked the position on New Years Day. The 391 Engineers and Mechanics repulsed seven separate charges before night fell and the enemy withdrew. In July of 1863 Companies D and K in seven hours constructed 52 pontoon boats and formed them into a serviceable bridge across the Tennessee River at Brown's Ferry while the site was contested. Movement of Union troops over this bridge opened the supply line to Chattanooga so that the half-starved forces could be served full rations. Late in 1863 and early in 1864 the regiment was engaged in construction of the railroad from Nashville to the Tennessee River. Chauncey re-enlisted at Chattanooga, Tennessee, on February 16, 1864, and was mustered in when he returned from leave on March 26, 1864. The regiment took part in the siege of Atlanta from July to September of 1864, and then accompanied Sherman's march to Savannah. Many bridges were built, roads were repaired and built through marshes to keep the army traveling over twenty miles a day. Chauncey was promoted from artificer to corporal on January 8, 1865. After the regiment took part in the Grand Review in Washington on May 24 it was sent to work on the defenses at Nashville until the men were mustered out of the army on September 22. They were paid off and disbanded at Jackson on October 1, 1865. Adelaide was born in Michigan in 1850 or early in 1851, and she married Chauncey about 1868. Their son Herbert was born a year later.

Lyman was born in Michigan in June of 1892. Something happened to his father, and about 1896 his mother married Emerson Benedict. In August of 1899 he gained a half-brother named Ray. Their mother, Hannah, somehow found herself marriageable again, and in October of 1909 she married Thomas L. Clanger who had a thirteen-year-old son. Lyman and Ray became members of this household. "LOVERS LANE PENTWATER, MICH. (Pub. by L. B. HART)" was lettered on the negative from which two apparently identical images were printed and mounted in the format of a stereograph. "SNOWPLOW AT SHELBY, MICH. Pub. by L. B. HART." was lettered on the negative from which a similar view was printed. Lyman produced several other views of Shelby in the same format. By 1920, Lyman was enumerated as married but was living alone.

Preston was born in Michigan in January of 1868, third of the six children of Jasper and Harriet E. Hart. The opening of a Port Huron gallery by Preston was announced three times between January and July of 1898. A sign on his Huron Avenue gallery offered "Copying and Enlarging, ... Amateur Work Finished at Reasonable Prices." In 1899 at Port Huron he made a specialty of children's photos. The first photograph in an album of fifty four 7½ by 9½ sepia "Views of Maccabee Temple and Offices, Headquarters of the Knights and Ladies, of the Maccabees of the World, Port Huron, Michigan, U. S. A., March, 1900." shows the four story Temple two doors away from Preston's one story building. Mrs. Martha F. McLennon and Preston purchased the Elite Studio in Salem from Miss Myra E. Sperry in 1899, and sold it to Tom Cronise in 1902. Her father emigrated from England and Macey was born in Nebraska to a German mother in 1881. She married Preston around 1903, and their son Edward was born in California in 1905. Their daughters were born in Oregon: Frances in 1908, Arlene in 1911, and Vivian in 1914. Preston was divorced and living alone in 1930.

His father came from New York and William was born in Detroit to a Scotch mother on July 18, 1860, fifth of the six children of Dewitt Clinton Hart and Margaret (Briggs) Hart. Mathilda Zimmerman was born in New York to German parents in June of 1859, and she married William about 1886. Their children were born in Detroit: Charles in April of 1888, Edith in February of 1891, Frank in March of 1893, and Clara in March of 1894. Clara did not live to maturity. William worked for Parke Davis & Company from 1897 through 1914, and perhaps longer. He lived at 361 Meldrum Avenue from 1895 until 1912. "Wm. H. Hart, 361 MELDRUM AVE., DETROIT." was printed on the face of 7¼ by 5 inch commercial mounts, including one carrying a photo taken about 1905 of a hard-hat diver and several others standing beside a huge boulder suspended in a chain sling from a crane hook.

Herbert was born in Jefferson County, New York, on December 18, 1877, first of the five children of Daniel and Nellie C. Harter. He matured into a 5 foot 6½ inch man with blue eyes, dark brown hair and a fair complexion. That John M. Cadzow and Herbert were opening a gallery at Reed City was reported in the summer of 1899. At Manistee on August 10, 1901, Herbert enlisted as a private in the Coast Artillery. He had earned an “Excellent” rating by the time he was discharged at Fort Schuyler in New York on September 11, 1902. Fire caused by a defective chimney flue in November of 1907 caused one thousand dollars worth of damage to Herbert’s photograph gallery in one of Ludington’s principal business blocks, and much more damage to the adjacent drug store. Herbert and his wife, Millie E. Harter, were living in 1918 at Cloverdale in Sonoma County, California. 3 6

His father came from New York and Charles was born in Canada West (now Ontario) in January of 1828, second of the five children of Morace and Eleanor Hartwick. Except when photographing, Charles followed his father's vocation as a tailor. Rebecca was born in New York State in 1829 or early in 1830. When she married Charles about 1858 she brought along three-year-old Adelbert Barry, a child from her first marriage. She gave birth to Pauline Hartwick in January of 1860. "Chas. Hartwick,... Artist." was printed on the backs of carte de visite sized paper sleeves of tintypes found in Michigan. Charles was living alone in 1880 and in 1900, when he was enumerated as a widower. Earl was born on April 25, 1892, at Garrettsville, Ohio, and his middle name was the same as his mother's maiden name. He was in the Cadet Corps at Michigan Agricultural College for three years, and became a tall slender man with brown eyes and dark hair. "Harvey" was lettered artistically on the negatives of post card photographs of a 1913 football game between the University of Michigan and Michigan Agricultural College. "Harv" was lettered on the negatives of postal views of the flag rush and the canvas pull in 1914, and on some of the cards with "KOLLEGE KODAK SHOP...." printed on their backs. "SIAS & HARVEY, EAST LANSING, MICH." was printed on the backs of some of these cards, as well as on similar views of R.O.T.C. Companies D, G and M in 1914, and of the M.A.C. botanical gardens, women's building and library postmarked in 1916. "S+H" was marked on the negative of a postal portrait of the coach J. F. Macklin. "Harv" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of the engineering building in flames on March 5, 1916. Earl was single in 1917. James H. Pratt was manager of the Harvey Photo Shop at East Lansing from 1920 to 1923, and was proprietor of the shop from 1924 until 1927. Earl died in Orange County, California, on April 11, 1962.

Frank was born in Ontario in the summer of 1870, the son of D. B. and Anna (Tuck) Harvey. He moved to the United States in 1896. Selena was born in Michigan on January 16, 1879, the daughter of August and Matilda (Lawson) Anderson. She married Frank at Sandwich, Ontario, on November 8, 1906, and they never had children. They lived at 73 Adams Avenue West from 1907 through 1911, and Frank probably did photographic work there during most of those years. Frank finally became a naturalized citizen of the United States some time in the 1920s. He died in Detroit on March 4, 1939. Selena was living at Romulus, Michigan, when she died in January of 1967.

| Frances (sometimes Frank or Frankie) was born in New York State in November of 1857, the younger daughter of Manassah and Ann M. Hatmaker. Her sister Barbara was three years older. She may have moved to Detroit because she was employed for only half of the year at Gloversville. Frances was one bride that did not need to change her surname, for she married Mathew Hatmaker about 1890. The surname was less appropriate than the name of the New York town, for her husband, father and paternal grandfather all were glove cutters and her mother was a glove maker in 1860 and a glove furrier in 1880. |           | 1 d1 d1111 |

| Millard was born in Bath County, Kentucky, on May 7, 1858, eighth of the eleven children of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Hasty) Hatton. He grew up on the family farms. Katherine was born in New York State to Irish parents in July of 1861, and she married Millard in 1884 or 1885. Their daughter Mildred was born in Illinois in November of 1887, and their son Robert was born in Indiana in August of 1890. Millard employed Louise M. Eichler as a retoucher in 1898, and "M. F. HATTON, the Photographic Artist of the Oracle of '98" was printed under his portrait in a Lansing High School publication. He applied for a patent on a Medallion Picture and Frame on October 6, 1899, with claims covering a central screw fastening the picture to the frame, and Patent Number 652,675 was granted to him on June 26, 1900. His sale of the Lansing gallery to Lewis E. Imes and his likely departure for Detroit were reported late in 1899. Millard died in Cook County, Illinois on January 22, 1920, just two weeks after he and Katherine and their son had been enumerated for the census. |           | 1111 LL 44 ppp 33 51 |

His father came from New York and Charles was born to an English mother at Vernon, Michigan, on July 26, 1850, second of the five children of William Alexander Havens and Sarah Harrison (Reason) Havens that lived to maturity. After his father died in 1855, his mother married Charles Arnold and gave birth to two girls. Another Charles Havens was in the 13th Independent Battery of the First Michigan Light Artillery during the Civil War. Her father came from New York and Eliza Jane Ewers was born in Michigan on September 5, 1852, eldest of the seven children of J. C. and Adelia L. Ewers. She married Charles at Williamston, Michigan, on January 1, 1872. Their son Floyd was born at Dansville, Michigan, on April 22, 1874, and their son Clyde was born there on March 27, 1876. Their son Ralph was born at Sterling, Kansas, on April 11, 1878. Eliza died in September of 1889. Susan was born in Iowa in May of 1853, married Perry L. Shaffer, and had three children. When she married Charles at Lyons, Kansas, on May 20, 1894, she brought along her son Ernest, who took the surname Havens. Charles and Susan seem to have divorced prior to 1910. He and his son Ralph were living and working the farm together in 1910 and 1920. Charles died at Hutchinson, Kansas, on December 26, 1928.

His father emigrated from England and Franklin (often Frank) was born in New York in April of 1849. He was eldest of the six children that were living with Catherine Hawkins in 1870. His brothers Albert and Charles followed him into the photography business. Two sizes of stickers were used to hold tintypes into their paper frames. Both sizes had the same message printed in red ink: "Hawkins & Cole's IMPROVED FERROTYPES, THE CHEAPEST AND BEST, By Patent Camera. Over A. Andrews' Grocery, HILLSDALE, MICH." The Photograph and Ferrotypes Art Studio of the Hawkins Brothers was over DeFoe's dry goods store in Adrian. They employed George T. Donaldson as a photographer, were prepared to do first class work at the lowest rates, and kept a large assortment of frames constantly on hand. Emma was born in Ohio in February of 1850, and she married Frank in 1882 or 1883. Their sons were born in Ohio: Dion in January of 1884, Ned in December of 1885, and Earl in August of 1891. Frank and Emma were sharing their home in 1920 with his sister Ida and their son Earl. Frank was a widower by 1930, when he still was providing a home for his sister Ida who never had married. 2 2 2 t t A A 2 2 2 2

His father emigrated from England and George was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in 1858 or 1859, last of the seven children of Joseph and Orrilla Hawley. The Joseph Hawley described below was the oldest of these children, more than twenty years older than George, and had left the family farm by the time George was born. George was living in 1880 with his widowed mother and three older siblings. During 1883 Earle & Hawley produced stereographs of the Detroit Art Loan Exhibition in a changing series of 39 views. Charles W. Earle and George shared the 18 Clifford Street business address in 1885, though their partnership had been dissolved. George died in Detroit on November 14, 1886.

Joseph was born at Elyria, Ohio, on March 27, 1837, first of the seven children of Joseph and Orrilla (Barr) Hawley. He was living in the household of ambrotype artist Alonzo M. Cheney in 1860. Alonzo probably was his employer, and recently had married Mary E. Hawley. The original Third Michigan Infantry was mustered out of service in June of 1864. Joseph was a five foot ten and a half inch man with a light complexion, blue eyes and light hair when he enlisted at Pontiac as a private in the reorganized Third Michigan Infantry on September 20, 1864. He was mustered into Company G on September 21, and was promoted to corporal on September 23, 1864. Organization was completed at Grand Rapids and the regiment left on October 20 for Nashville, Tennessee. During the winter the Third saw some action at Decatur, Alabama, before moving to Murfreesboro, Tennessee, and then to Huntsville, Alabama. They started a march on March 16, 1865, to New Market, Tennessee. Operating from New Market, Bulls Gap, and Jonesboro, the Third efficiently drove bands of guerillas from eastern Tennessee. Following the Confederate surrender the regiment was transported across the Gulf of Mexico from New Orleans to Texas, and then marched fourteen days to arrive at San Antonio on November 6, 1865. Joseph was transferred to Company C on November 10, and then promoted from first sergeant to Second Lieutenant on November 28, 1865. Joseph often was assigned detached service, from April 11, 1866, this was at Gonzales, Texas. The Third performed provost duty at San Antonio until May, when they moved to Victoria, Texas, to be mustered out of the army on May 25, 1866. Joseph probably inherited the family farm in the late 1860s, for in 1870 he owned real estate valued at thirty thousand dollars. Her father came from New York and Elizabeth Justicia Adams was born at Providence, Illinois, to a mother from Connecticut in August of 1844. She married Joseph at Rochester on November 18, 1869, and they had five children. Elizabeth was born at Detroit on October 26, 1870, and Joseph was born at Detroit on November 10, 1872. Their other children were born at Tampa, Florida, Charles on December 10, 1875, Herbert on December 24, 1878, and Mary on November 1, 1882. Joseph was receiving a Veteran Pension of twelve dollars per month when he died at Ann Arbor from pneumonia on June 13, 1899. Elizabeth lived on in Ann Arbor, where Charles and Herbert were attending the University of Michigan.

Judson was born at London in Ontario on December 20, 1887, the son of George and Jennie (Douglas) Hawthorne. He became a tall slender man with hazel eyes and dark hair, and he spent one year as an infantryman in the Canadian Militia. Louise was born in Indiana in 1889, the daughter of Frederick and Louise (Langlois) Morneau. She and Judson both were living in Windsor when they married there on February 25, 1908. They never had children. Judson took the ferry from Windsor to Detroit in May of 1911 and again in November, when he seems to have stayed. By 1918 he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Judson became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers' Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921. He died in Los Angeles County on July 23, 1963.

Grace Spencer was born in Michigan to parents from New York in December of 1860, second of the three children of John C. and Caroline Spencer. She married A. G. Hayden from Michigan and gave birth to Myrtle in the Dakota Territory in April of 1885 and to Spencer in Illinois in March of 1897. The formation of a photographic partnership by Mrs. Dey and Mrs. Hayden was reported late in 1899. Grace was a widow by 1900, when she was sharing her home with her children and her widowed mother. She was listed as an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905, when she advertised: “For Artistic Photographs We lead in STYLE, Quality and FINISH. For nearly a year Hayden continued to “... announce to the public his intention of continuing business in Pontiac permanently, health permitting. LIKENESSES TAKEN in cloudy as well as clear weather. Almost all kinds of mechanical work or Store Goods will be received in payment. No pains will be spared to make every patron satisfied....” Later he deleted the invitation to barter and added: “... N.B. Apparatus and stock for sale and instructions given in the art.” He exhibited what was judged to be the second best daguerreotype at the Oakland County Fair in the fall of 1852. Martin Hayden was born in New York State about 1817, and he was farming in Avon Township directly east of Pontiac in 1850. Sarah was born in New York about 1820, married Martin, and gave birth to Martin about 1839, to Lott about 1842, and to Martha about 1851. She was a widow by 1860, when Lott was working her Avon Township farm with the help of a hired hand. The reference to health in the daguerreotypist's advertising and the early death of the farmer suggest that they were the same person. 1 2 1 2 1 2 1 2 2 3 4 3 3 2 3 2

Clarence was the son of Enos A. and Emma L. (Griffith) Hayes and was born on March 31, 1862, at Chardon in Geauga County, Ohio. He attended the public schools and studied music before finding employment with the local photographer when he was 18 years old. He helped Horace W. Tibbals win a national contest for the best photograph of a public man. Emma L. Tibbals was the daughter of his employer. She was born in Ohio in March of 1867, and she married Clarence on October 13, 1885. Their daughter, Alberta Ellen, was born in Michigan in June of 1888. C. M. Hayes & Company was formed with $5000 in capital. Clarence was president from the founding of the company until his death in 1927, and also was identified as the manager during the early years. Edward J. Warren was a principal of the company for the first year or two, and Frederick A. Goodrich was vice president and/or treasurer from 1892 until 1926, although he had other business interests and moved about 1903 to St. Louis, Missouri. Frederick H. Holt was secretary of the company from 1892 until 1927. Some employees of the company were: photo finisher Miss Flora E. Smith in 1892; retoucher Miss Helen Alton and photo printer Frank S. Wheeler in 1893; bookkeeper or clerk Ora B. Hatch from 1893 to 1904; retoucher George B. Ladd from 1893 to 1897; clerk Mary or Mamie Morse in 1893 and 1894; photo printer Robert L. Barbeau from 1894 to 1900; clerk Ross Conway, photo printer George I. Hedges, retoucher Austin F. Mann, photo finisher Mary Riggs, and retouchers Ora Riggs, Hugh Stotz and Judson L. Tunison in 1894; assistant operator or photo operator Leslie R. Gault, Junior, from 1894 to 1896; photo printer Dorr Curtis, artist Mrs. Anna S. Hickock and retouchers Miss Hettie L. Anthony, Cora Beam, Anselm L. Gault and Louella Sherman in 1895; retoucher Marietta Riggs in 1895 and 1896; retoucher O. E. Fraser, photo finisher Carrie Hanrahan, stenographer Sadie B. Mathewson and photo printer Charles J. Merz in 1896; retoucher Frances Austin in 1896 and 1897; as well as stenographer Shirley White and photo finisher Miss Sadie Becker in 1897. When veteran photographer Jex Bardwell wanted a portrait for use in an 1893 photographic magazine, he called upon Clarence Hayes. He was seated before the camera and his head was turned by Clarence with intuitive perception so as to present the most desirable view of his face. The shutter was set, the slide was pulled out, and Clarence held the bulb in his hand while he looked at Jex and asked an engaging question. Just as the sitter's eyes sparkled with awakened interest and intelligence, and as his lips were about to part in answer to the query, the shutter clicked and an excellent picture was taken. After Perie McDonald of Albany resigned as secretary of the Photographers' Association of America, Clarence was appointed to the position early in 1895. The local photographers organized to provide entertainment for those attending the P A of A convention at Detroit in August of 1895, and Clarence was secretary and treasurer of this organization. During the convention he exhibited photographs, served on a committee considering changes to the constitution of the P A of A, and was elected treasurer of the P A of A. Five months later he was elected president of the Michigan Photographers' Association. Many patrons received very artistic invitations to a reception at the Hayes gallery in the afternoons and evenings of April 27 and 28, 1896. A musical programme was provided and the gallery was lavishly decorated to display portraits by Hayes and other noted photographers, examples showing the history of photography from the beginning, Dresden china portrait work, portraits of New York society personages and photographs of a wedding emphasizing the decorations of the home and the church. Clarence was asked in the spring of 1898 to furnish 400 portraits of prominent Detroiters to the Detroit Museum of Art, and the complete request is included in the entry for Armond H. Griffith. Clarence served as president of the P A of A in 1897, and was again elected president of the M P A in 1899 and of the new Ohio-Michigan Photographers' Association in 1900. By this time commercial photography was being emphasized by C. M. Hayes & Company, and they had annual photo exhibits in the gallery. In November of 1901 this featured the electrograph machine for telegraphing pictures, a room devoted to brides photographed during the last year, a panel of the recent governors of Michigan, another of popular Detroit bachelors and yet another of Detroit society women in colored photographs after celebrated paintings. Clarence was the third person in Detroit to own an automobile. During the P A of A convention at Dayton in August of 1907, he was among the illustrious few who had pictures selected for salon honors. About 1911 he was adding a very stylized signature to his portrait work. One of the pictures selected by Sadakichi Hartman as the ten best exhibited at the Philadelphia convention of the P A of A in 1912 was a photograph of a bride by C. M. Hayes. Even more than the several medals and other national honors, Clarence prized an international trophy awarded to his work in 1896 at Trier, Germany. Golf and fishing were his pastimes, his motto was "Do common things uncommonly well," and his ambition was "To be in the front row when the call comes." He died suddenly in Detroit with a heart attack at the age of 61 on September 22, 1927, and was survived by a married daughter. The company continued with Frederick H. Holt as president, Mrs. F. A. Goodrich as vice president and Mabel Quatermass as secretary. Lillian S. Holt became president in 1929, and there were no further changes in organization through 1935. Hazel M. Powell was the manager of C. M. Hayes & Company from 1936 through 1941.

 John was born into a Yiddish-speaking family about 1881 and emigrated in 1906 from Odessa, Russia. Dora was born into another Yiddish-speaking family about 1886, and she married John when she was fifteen and he was twenty. Their daughter Rebecca was born in Odessa in 1904. Dora brought Rebecca to join John in Detroit in 1907. The rest of their children were born in Detroit: Sadie in 1908, Lillie (later Susan) in 1911, Louis in 1914, Gertrude in 1915, and Jennett in 1916. John retired from a wholesale and retail grocery business and died in Detroit on September 28, 1954. He was survived by his widow, all of his children, sixteen grandchildren and three great grandchildren. Burial was in Machpelah Cemetery.

 Frank was born in New York to a mother from Connecticut in August of 1854. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Ada was born in Ohio in October of 1859. She married Frank about 1878 and their daughters were born in Michigan: Effie in January of 1880, Bertha in November of 1882, and Marie in December of 1897. The surname was HAYNES in the gazetteers, but it was HAYNER in most of the census records and in four different cabinet imprints. One of these mounts was used for a photograph of two men on a horse drawn wagon load of lumber with other horses and men in its industrial background. Ada was a widow living alone in Woodbridge Township in 1930.

Anson was born in New York State in 1851 or early in 1852. Susanna Haynes was living by herself in a Nunda boarding house in 1850, and may have become a single mother. She was working as a tailoress in 1860 and 1870, and was providing a home for Anson. Jennie (later Jessie) was born in New York in 1855, and she married Anson in 1879. Their son Adelbert was born in Michigan in March of 1880, and by 1910 was no longer alive. Jessie was offering palmistry from their home in 1910. She was a widow by 1920, when she was providing for a 73-year-old female friend and three young male boarders. She also was involved with amateur photography from her home.

F. Jay Haynes was born at Saline, Michigan, on October 20, 1853. He attended school and began his photographic apprenticeship there. Since Miss Lucretia A. Gillett was Saline's only professional photographer from 1862 through 1883, she must have been his employer and instructor. Miss Lily V. Snyder became Mrs. F. Jay Haynes in Minnesota before they moved to the Dakota Territory, and the Haynes later had at least two sons. In 1878 Haynes took a photographic journey to the Pacific coast and a three thousand mile round trip along the Missouri River. His first photographs in Yellowstone Park were made in 1881, and he photographed President Chester A. Arthur's trip through the park in August of 1883. His camera captured the last spike being driven on the Northern Pacific Railroad later in 1883, and he was the official photographer of the railroad for the following two decades. By 1885 his Palace Car Studio had been built to his design for $13,000 as a traveling studio and darkroom. He gained fame as a photographer of western life and particularly of Yellowstone Park. His stereo views were very popular, he published many tourist view books, and his work was often reproduced in photogravure portfolios, newspapers and magazines. He built Haynes' Log Cabin Studio at the Old Faithful geyser in 1897, and with a partner founded the Yellowstone Stage Company in 1898. He retired from business in favor of his second son in 1916, and lived on at St. Paul until his death on March 10, 1921. At least three books and a dozen articles have been devoted to his life and work.

Samuel's career began with a theft and reached a climax in murder. During his 39 years in a Maine prison he made three attempts to escape and had seven petitions for clemency refused. After he was pardoned in 1913 he became one of the ex-convict "boys" that Henry Ford employed in order to give them a new start in life. Samuel saved enough in two years from his earnings at Ford to make a down payment on a two family flat. He was walking up Woodward Avenue between his shop and his flat on the evening of November 6, 1923, when he dropped dead.

Charles was born in Massachusetts in August of 1872, the son of William H. and Harriett E. Eltz, and the elder brother of Harry P. Eltz. His parents divorced, Charles was adopted by Massena M. and Mary A. Heath some time after 1884, and he became Charles Eltz Heath. He was elected first vice president of the Michigan Photographers' Association early in 1896. His views about the best colors for mounts, larger mounts for cabinet photos, showcase backgrounds and contents, effective advertising, photographing babies, Sunday work and the value of photographic journals were published a few months later. Later in 1896 he advertised as "The leading photographer. The finest and most completely equipped studio in Kent County. Equaled by none for excellence of work. First Premium at Mich. State Fair in 1895 and 1896. Gold and Silver medals at Detroit, Jan. 1896...." From 1896 to 1898 he employed Miss Ella M. Carlton as a retoucher and his brother Harry P. Eltz as a photographer. Early in 1898 Charles was elected secretary of the Michigan Photographers' Association, but he resigned in the fall of 1898, apparently because he was moving to Massachusetts. Charles was succeeded by Samuel L. Sharpsteen in Grand Rapids, and Harry P. Eltz was his associate at Athol, where they succeeded A. E. Albee. Charles was back in the Monroe Street gallery in 1900, and in 1901 employed Mrs. Ella M. Caverly as a retoucher and William E. Arthur as a photo printer. The W. K. Schmidt Company was an established firm dealing in drugs and photographic supplies. Ida A. Van Dughteren was born in Michigan to Dutch parents in July of 1883, and she married Charles about 1909. By 1920 Charles had a wife named Anna born in Missouri to German parents in 1881 and a nine-year-old son named David. Anna was enumerated in 1920 as a photographer doing general work, as was Charles.

Fred was born at Crown Point, New York, on September 26, 1831, second of the seven children of George and Olive A. (Byam) Heath. His five younger siblings were born in Michigan, and they included George who is the subject of the following entry. Ann L. Steele was born in Michigan in 1831 or early in 1832, and she married Fred about 1856. Their children (Hattie, Joseph, Jennie and George) were born in Grand Rapids between 1857 and 1864. Their daughter Cora was born in May of 1860 but did not survive. Ann was gone by the mid-1860s. Merica Evans Ewing was born in Michigan about 1842, and she married Elijah D. Waters about 1862. Their son Herbert and daughter Lucretia were born in Michigan between 1863 and 1867. Elijah enlisted as a Major in the Sixth Michigan Cavalry on September 9, 1862, and was commissioned on October 13, 1862. He resigned on account of disability on May 7, 1863. Merica became a widow and was free to marry Fred on December 17, 1868. By 1880 Merica had gone back to the surname Waters, she and Fred were divorced, and each of them was providing a home in Grand Rapids for their respective children. Fred's gallery seems to have been in the same location in Lovett's Block from 1859 through 1863, and then in the same place on Monroe Street from 1864 until 1872. He was the only photographer from the interior of the state that exhibited at the 1860 Michigan State Fair in Detroit. Though Detroit photographers were awarded the first and second premiums in the class, the judges recommended a special diploma for his entry of twenty photographs, which included ten views of Grand Rapids and cabinet size portraits of Daniel Ball and Senator Porter. In 1870 Fred claimed to have "... the best-arranged Gallery in the City. Well lighted and elegantly furnished. Pictures colored in Ink, Oil and Water Colors." The studio of portrait and landscape painter R. S. Merrill was in Heath's photograph gallery at this time.

George was born in Michigan to parents from New York on April 4, 1842, fifth of the seven children of George and Olive A. (Byam) Heath and a brother of the Frederick G. Heath mentioned above. He enlisted under the alias Harry G. Van Rensalaer as a private in Company G of the 69th Indiana Infantry on August 4, 1862, was transferred to Company C on February 23, 1865, and served until he was honorably discharged at Mobile, Alabama, on July 5, 1865. He and 25-year-old Miss Melissa A. Clark were married at Ionia on September 14, 1868. Their daughter Olive was born at Sparta on June 3, 1870, their daughter Georgia was born at Hastings on January 11, 1874, and their son Frank was born at Hastings in May of 1876. George applied for a veteran's pension in September of 1895 and was receiving $8.00 per month at the time of his death from heart disease at Hastings on July 24, 1910. Melissa was receiving a widow's pension of $36.00 per month and was ninety years old when she died of chronic myocarditis in Detroit on July 28, 1934.

Luman was born in Penfield Township of Monroe County, New York, in August of 1837, eldest of the five children of Almon and Catherine Ann (Fuller) Heath. He came to Michigan with his family about 1844, and took up photography about 1859. There was a shortage of pennies in 1863, so many merchants filled a need by having penny-sized copper tokens coined which carried their name. One example had “L. F. HEATH, WATCH MAKER AND PHOTOGRAPHER, LYONS, MICH.” on one side, with a watch encircled by “WATCHES & JEWELRY REPAIRED” on the other. Susan was born in Michigan of New York parentage in November of 1838, and became his wife about 1857. They had no children. His brother Jason J. Heath was his apprentice in 1870 and an employee in 1873. Luman advertised in 1874: “Photography in all its branches executed with Artistic skill. Stereoscopic and Landscape Pictures made to order on short notice.” Jason returned to work for Luman as a watch maker from 1883 to 1885, and Joseph N. Sweet was employed as a photographer in 1885. Luman was described in 1886 as getting bald and having a large round face, a long beard and a complexion rosy as a gull’s. In 1887 he employed B. J. Sweet as a photographer and was a watchmaker, jeweler, picture framer and photographer who kept in stock everything pertaining to the trade, did repairing and engraving on short notice, and warranted all of his work. In 1895 he was making first-class cabinets using either Aristo or albumen paper for only $2.00 per dozen, and making life size portraits in crayons, oils, water colors, bromides, and India inks. Interior and exterior views of residences and other buildings were among his specialties. His widow, Mrs. Susan A. Heath, was living in Lansing in 1904 and was continuing the jewelry business in North Lansing in 1906.

Massena was born at Milford, New Hampshire, on April 22, 1843, first of the six children of Morris M. and Sarah R. Heath. He was enumerated twice in the 1870 census; on June 9 at his parents' home and on July 11 at a hotel in Peterborough, New Hampshire. Mary was born in Massachusetts in May of 1847, and she married Massena about 1878. He applied for a passport at Boston in September of 1880, but it was September of 1884 when he and Mrs. M. M. Heath arrived in New York on S. S. Anchoria from Glasgow, Scotland. He and Mary seem to have adopted Charles H. Eltz, who became Charles Eltz Heath. Massena probably was working in his adopted son's gallery in 1900, and he was a widower living with Charles and his wife at Riverside in 1910.

Walter was the younger son of William C. and Lucinda (Roof) Heck, and was born in Indiana on September 21, 1865. His father came from Pennsylvania, as did his mother's parents. He had two younger sisters that were born in Indiana between 1866 and 1874. Frank Brooks was Walter's partner in 1884, and Heck & Gibson were successors to F. H. Steger a few years later. Walter advertised: "GIVEN AWAY! FOR 60 DAYS - I will give away One Beautiful 16x20 CRAYON PORTRAIT with every dozen of my best Cab. Portraits for next 60 days. BE SURE TO SECURE ONE! Come Early and avoid delay. HECK, Photographer, Over Wright's Drug Store, Tecumseh." The backs of some cabinet mounts were rubber stamped: "HECK'S GROUND FLOOR STUDIO, W. L. Heck, Prop'r, successor to M. P. Brown. Photographer & Artist. Copying, Enlarging and Frames. Negatives preserved. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Tecumseh, Mich." These probably date from late in 1891. In November of 1892 Walter published a "Notice to my former friends and patrons: Having again opened up the Photo Gallery formerly occupied by me, I am now ready to furnish the people here a better and higher grade of work than has ever been executed in this city. Call and see me and your work will be finished with neatness and dispatch. Yours Truly, W. L. Heck." The Heck gallery over Wright's store was rented by A. B. Sovereign in May of 1893. Jennie was born in Indiana to parents from Ohio in October of 1870, and she married Walter about 1892. Their daughters were born in Indiana: Helen in September of 1893, and Magdalene in June of 1895. Walter and Jennie were living in 1930 with the family of their daughter Helen and her husband, Charles A. Anderson. Walter died in Los Angeles County on March 25, 1946.

His father emigrated from England and George was born in Detroit to a Canadian mother on January 2, 1870, first of the three children of John and Elizabeth (Herdman) Hedges. One source stated that he spent ten years following 1885 traveling all over the world for the Eastman Kodak Company as a demonstrator, and that he resided for three years in London, England. George was a member of the National Photographers Association. The Hedges-Sarjeant Studio was continued until 1925 by Edward J. Arthur and Isaac D. Jackson. George remained single until he married Miss Eva Cameron in 1921. Her father emigrated from Scotland and Eva was born in Canada in 1897 or early in 1898. She was brought to the United States in 1900, and had worked for George's photographic companies since 1914. Their sons were born in Detroit: George about 1923, and Sheldon in October of 1925.

Murray was born in May of 1863 at Clyde, New York. His mother was Catherine Brooks Bocker Hendrick. Lillian was born in Michigan in May of 1876, and she married Murray about 1894. They had no children by 1900, and in a few years he was free to marry again. Florence was born in Michigan to a German mother in 1889, the daughter of David and Sarah Duby. She became Mrs. Murray L. Hendrick in 1906 or early in 1907. Their children were born in Michigan: Vera about 1908, and a boy named Murell in July of 1909. "M. L. Hendrick, View & Landscape PHOTOGRAPHER, Hastings, Mich." was stamped on the back of 8 by 10 inch mounts carrying 5 by 8 prints of groups of students beside their schools. On slates in the photos were such statements as: "Big Rapids, Oct. 29, 1891. no. 97" or "Luther, Nov. 5, 1891." Luther and Big Rapids were 80 to 100 miles north of Hastings on the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad. "MICHIGAN VIEW CO., 708 State Street, W.S., Saginaw, Mich." was stamped on the mounts of similar photographs, and the Michigan View Company produced stereoscopic views. M. L. Hendrick was credited for two and the Michigan View Company was credited for four of the 32 photographs reproduced in the commemorative booklet "Souvenir of SAGINAW'S GREATEST FLOOD, March - April, 1904." Either "Hendrick Picture Co. Merrill, Mich." or "HENDRICK'S PICTURE CO., MERRILL, MICHIGAN" was printed on the post card backs of photographs of churches and homes and groups of students, including one showing "Swimm's School, Apr. 22, 1910" on a slate. At this time, Murray and his wife and children were living a few miles south of Merrill on the farm of his in-laws, David and Sarah Duby. Dates in the fall of 1911 were written on slates or lettered on the negatives of postal photographs of school groups with "Hendrick Picture Co., Sault Ste. Marie, Mich." printed on their backs. School names and dates in 1913 and 1914 were written on slates, lettered on negatives or stamped on the back of photos with "Hendrick Picture Co., Saginaw West Side, Mich." printed on their post card backs. Postal views of neighborhood flood scenes carried the same printing. "HENDRICK PICTURE Company., 913 Porter St., SAGINAW, W.S. MICH." was stamped inside the flap of 4 1/2 by 13 inch paper accordion folders with diagonal corner slits to hold sixteen post card photographs. During the flood on March 31, 1916, Murray took photographs of at least 26 scenes in Saginaw, 4 in Carrollton and 2 in Zilwaukee, and sold them in such folders.

His father emigrated from Prussia and John was born in Detroit on March 5, 1873, first of the six children of John and Johanna (Hellwig) Henk. His maternal grandparents were Bavarian. He attended parochial schools in Detroit, and went to work as an office boy when he was thirteen. John first invested in a photographic outfit and did amateur work while employed by the Fulton Iron & Engine Works. After working for Clarence H. Smith he spent a few months at Ann Arbor, and then began doing view work. He spent the summer of 1897 in making views of the hotels and other attractions at Mount Clemens, and then proceeded to do the same in other towns until he reached Cincinnati. He gained valuable experience in enlarging portraits while working for Maxwell at Springfield. He bought the Mount Clemens studio of Otto Schultz on January 29, 1899, and married Emma L. Keller of Detroit on October 10, 1900. Their children were born at Mount Clemens: Marcella in 1903, Frederick in 1905, George in 1907, and John in June of 1914. John moved in April of 1902 into the second floor studio in the Roskopp Building at 20 Macomb Street, where he did portrait photography and general viewing as well as finishing and reloading Kodaks. By 1905 he was calling himself a "Fotografer" and selling "Fotografic" supplies, and was the only Mount Clemens member of the Photographers' Association of America. "FOTO BY HENK" was included in views reproduced in the 1904 and many subsequent issues of Cutter's Guide to Mount Clemens. Around 1908 John purchased the A. F. Mann & Son Studio over the Nellis Newspaper plant at 79 North Gratiot Avenue. This was a much larger studio with a huge skylight, so that large wedding or confirmation groups could be posed. He began developing and printing film for amateurs, and eventually did such work for every drug store near Mount Clemens. In September of 1908 a local patron received a postal photograph of the Mount Clemens fire hall with the message: "Dear Madam - The Fotografs of your daughter are finished. Henk." Some Mount Clemens post card photographs postmarked from 1910 to 1912 had "Copyright 1911 by Thrasher & Henk" or "Thrasher & Henk Photo" lettered on their negatives. John employed Willard H. Moore in 1911, used him as an assistant photographer in 1913, as an assistant in 1915 and as a photographer in 1921. He spoke to the Professional Photographers Society of Michigan convention at Saginaw on March 19, 1912, on "Is there any Coupon which an Ethical Photographer can Introduce without Experiencing Bad After-effects?" He served as vice president of this society in 1914 and 1915. A 1916 advertisement listed "The Three Prime Virtues in a photograph - Artistic Quality, Permanency and Likeness. Ours have all three. HENK STUDIOS, Maker of Quality Photographs, Near Bijou Theatre, Mt. Clemens. Sundays by Appointment Only." In 1924 John moved his studio into the ground floor of the old Clifton House at Market and Gratiot. It had a hallway from front to back with the reception and camera rooms on one side and the dark and finishing rooms on the other. In 1928 John purchased a lot on Market Street across from the fire hall on which to build a photographic studio. The building was planned by his son George, who had just graduated as an architectural engineer from the University of Detroit, and it opened in October of 1930. It had stucco walls and a tiled roof, and was considered to be a fine example of the Mediterranean style of Hollywood pizzazz. John's daughter, Marcella C. Henk, was an assistant in the studio from 1925 through 1942. His son, Fred C. Henk, was an assistant there from 1927 through 1942 and then was proprietor of the Henk Studio in 1944, when they advertised: "The Best in Photography. Photographic Supplies, Picture Framing, &c." John's younger son, John C. (Jack) Henk, was an assistant from 1937 through 1942 and was in the air force in 1944. The Henk Studio continued with portrait, commercial, wedding and high school photography and photo finishing with Marcella, Fred and Jack participating. John A. Henk died in 1955. When Mrs. Emma L. Henk died on March 19, 1968, burial was in St. Peter Cemetery at Mount Clemens. The doors of the Henk Studio were closed for the last time on November 30, 1979.

- D. Farrand Henry was born in Detroit on May 27, 1833, about a year prior to the death of his father, Dr. Stephen Chambers Henry. He was a rather sickly child who was educated at home by his mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pamela (Farrand) Henry, and became an avid reader. He graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College in 1853, and was an engineer on the Great Lakes Survey from 1854 until 1871. Much of his time with the Survey was spent in Michigan's upper peninsula. He was a partner in a Chicago seed company, but his holdings were wiped out in the great fire in October of 1871. From 1872 through 1878 he was chief engineer of the Detroit water works, designing and building the new water works and standpipe which were prominent landmarks for many years. His designs for the flexible inlet pipe used in the Detroit River intake to the water works and a telegraphic meter for measuring the velocity of flow in rivers were awarded medals at the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia. He developed a plan for tunneling under the Detroit River in 1876, and was a consulting engineer to railroads and to the promoters of canals. During the last twenty years of his life, D. Farrand lived alone in a one room den and workshop on the third floor above a Woodward Avenue printing shop. The room was full of models of his inventions, one wall was lined with books, his workbench was along another wall, and he slept and read in a pull-down hammock. He became one of Detroit's memorable characters, for he wore his hair and beard long and once allowed the little finger nail on his left hand to grow and grow. He was a frequent contributor to scientific journals, and was often quoted on a variety of issues in the local newspapers. He was not a recluse, but belonged to several clubs in Detroit, and presented a paper before one of them only a week before his death. He used a large and varied collection of pipes, though the portrait painted in 1898 by Percy Ives shows him with a cigarette. D. Farrand died quietly in his hammock while reading a newspaper on May 15, 1907. 4 5 4 4 4 6 7 4 4 4 4 4 4 4

His father emigrated from Canada and Lewis was born in Detroit to a mother from New York on December 5, 1844, second of the eight children of John E. and Jane E. (Bird) Henry. He was a 5 foot 6½ inch printer with a light complexion, blue eyes and light hair when he was enrolled at Kenosha, Wisconsin, as a private in Company D of the First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery on July 18, 1863. He suffered a broken thigh when he was run over by a wagon, recovered, and was honorably discharged on August 18, 1865, at Washington, D.C. He and 17-year-old Miss Allena C. Potter were married at Davison on June 29, 1867, and they later had five children born alternately at Flint and Davison. John was born on October 21, 1870, Abigail (later Abbie) on May 18, 1872, Leroy (later Roy) on December 11, 1874, Horace (later Guy) on August 9, 1877, and Floyd on March 1, 1881. Erastus Dodge was associated with Lewis in Henry & Company. 60 Saginaw Street was on the southwest corner of Saginaw and Kearsley Streets, over the Savings Bank, where Henry & Company had their Sun Beam Gallery in 1876. "Henry & Company, Over Savings Bank, Flint, Mich." or "Henry & Company, Opposite Fenton Hall, Flint, Mich." or "Henry & Company, Opposite Post Office, Flint, Mich." was written by hand on the backs of card photographs. Lewis qualified for a veteran's pension by 1898. Allena may have been hospitalized by 1900, and she died at Ann Arbor on February 7, 1904. Lewis was living with the family of his mother-in-law in 1900 and on the farm of his youngest son in 1910, and was receiving a pension of $24.00 per month when he died on June 12, 1918.

Charles was born in Michigan on April 19, 1884, the son of James and Eliza (Lardie) Herbert. He seems to have had an older brother who died as an infant and two sisters who survived and married. Something happened to his mother and about 1893 his father married Kate who was born in Michigan in February of 1861. Kate gave birth to Clara in December of 1895. Charles became an average sized man with blue eyes and dark hair. He and his sister Lillian were rooming with the family of a Traverse City couple in 1910. Her father came from Illinois and Lottie was born in Michigan to a mother from the Bohemian region of Austria on July 16, 1892, fourth of the five children of John and Frances Kyselka. She married Charles on September 5, 1912. Their children were born in Michigan: Francis on May 12, 1914, Barbara in 1922 or early in 1923, and Ellen in February of 1928. "CHARLES J. HERBERT, Commercial Photographer, Traverse City, Mich." was stamped in an oval on the back of the 8 by 10 inch mount of a 5 by 7 photo of a school room with 32 pupils at their desks and their teacher at one side. "PHOTO BY CHARLES J. HERBERT, Traverse City, Mich." was stamped on the post card backs of photos, including two different Nessen City multi-view cards, St. Michaels Church, School and Parsonage at Suttons Bay, farm buildings near Grawn, harvesting the fields of A. J. Umler near Elk Rapids, pupils at their desks in Maple Leaf School, picking and packing fruit, ducks on the Boardman River, a log school house and a peach orchard in Leelanau County, and multi-views of the officers of the Michigan Grange and of the Grand Traverse Grange Halls. Some of these cards were used to advertise a Traverse City manufacturer of fruit packages. Around 1918, Charles worked from his home on West Ninth Street and from Scott's Drug Store in Traverse City in the summertime, and at St. Petersburg during the winter. In 1930 he was employing his wife as an assistant photographer and a next-door neighbor, Mrs. Mertie M. Curtiss, as a photographic printer. He was a printer as well as a photographer in 1935. About this time he was using a post card with a black background, a white border and white lettering filling the photo: "Photo POST CARDS 5¢ 3 for 10¢. Charles J. Herbert, Traverse City, Mich." On later cards, including several of Clinch Park, "Charles J. Herbert, Traverse City, Michigan" was printed vertically between the spaces for the message and for the address. Charles died at Manton, Michigan, on February 2, 1948. Lottie lived another thirty years and died at Traverse City on June 24, 1982.

Jacob was born in Denmark on December 17, 1878, came to the United States in 1909, and by 1918 had declared his intention of qualifying for United States citizenship. He was medium sized with brown eyes and hair, and had a wife named Mabel who was born in Indiana to an Irish mother in 1890. Jacob had George S. Lance for a partner in 1918 and 1919, and was sole proprietor of Herbert & Lance in 1920, 1921 and 1923. During 1920 the number on the Herbert & Lance studio changed along with most other Detroit addresses. Mrs. Mabel Herbert was the proprietor of Herbert & Lance in 1922 at 3433 Woodward Avenue.

Victor was born in Germany in June of 1861, immigrated some time between 1873 and 1882, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States. "Herman & Kopp, FROM CHICAGO." was stamped on the back of some card photograph mounts. Ed Burroughs worked in the Herman gallery as a photographer early in 1899. Victor attended the photographers' convention at Milwaukee in March of 1901, and his election as second vice president of the Photographers' Association of Wisconsin was reported in the summer of 1903. V. H. Hermann of Calumet was listed as an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. Her father emigrated from Norway and Florence was born in Michigan in 1884. She married Victor about 1917, and their daughter Elizabeth was born here early in 1919.

Earl (sometimes Earle) was born in Campbell Township of Ionia County, Michigan, to parents from Ohio on June 14, 1887, sixth of the seven children of Stephen (sometimes Dennis) and Abigail Herron. Mabel E. Reed was born in Michigan in 1889, the daughter of Albert and Mary E. Reed. Her brother Arthur was four years younger. Mabel married Earl about 1912, and their children were born at Lakeview: Barbara Jean on August 6, 1918, and Arthur about 1924. "Herron Photo" along with captions like "Lincoln Ave., Lakeview, Mich." and "Congregational Church, Lakeview, Mich." and "M. E. His father emigrated from England and Phillip was born on the family farm in Northumberland County, Ontario, on July 12, 1869, the son of Robert and Eliza Jane (Bellamy) Heseltine. His surname was spelled Haseltine in some records, but it was spelled Heseltine in the most authoritative ones. Phillip immigrated in 1896, and by 1920 he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Mattie M. Woolever was born in New York State in July of 1878, the daughter of Oliver and Ann E. Woolever. She married Phillip about 1897, and their son Maurice was born in Michigan in February of 1900. They had no other children.

Harry was born in Michigan to Dutch parents on November 13, 1884, and he became a tall man with brown eyes and black hair. Elsie was born in Michigan to Dutch parents in 1892, and she married Harry about 1912. They never had children. “Post cards, Hesselinks, 126 Canal” was stamped on the post card backs of some studio portraits, while “HESSELLINK STUDIO, 126 CANAL ST., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.” was printed on the backs of others. The portraits were printed using masks in oval and other more unusual shapes. Harry employed William C. G. Hubert as a photographer in 1910. From 1915 through 1921 he was identified as Harry Kleinhesselink, though Hesselink was used in the titles of his businesses in 1919 and later years.

Henry was born in Michigan to German parents on June 28, 1864, sixth of the seven children of Gottlieb H. and Barbara Margaret (Zimmerman) Hessler. Henry and his younger brother Wesley F. Hessler operated the drug business from 1888 until 1893 and later the opera house and the furniture business as Hessler Brothers. Wesley continued the drug store in his own name until his death about 1908, and the furniture business still was called Hessler Brothers in 1915. “H. C. HESSLER, Rockford, Mich.” was stamped about 1905 on the buff backs of 5½ by 6½ gray mounts carrying 3¾ by 4¾ photographs of a railroad wreck which demolished a locomotive. Caroline was born in Canada to an English mother on September 5, 1862, and she was the daughter of William H. and Caroline (Moore) McAuley. When she and Henry married in 1906 or early in 1907 it was the first time for each of them. Henry died in Rockford on November 28, 1934, and Caroline died at Grand Rapids on January 16, 1936.

Lizzie's father emigrated from England and she was born in Michigan in August of 1876. She married Robert about 1893, and their sons were born in Michigan: Joseph in September of 1895, and Harold in March of 1898. Ortonville is in Brandon Township. "HEWITT, Ortonville, Mich." was blind stamped at the lower right corner of 8 by 10 and 11 by 14 inch mounts of photographs of three-generation families and of groups of pupils. "Hewitt" was lettered on the negatives of postal photographs of scenes in Maple Rapids, some postmarked in August of 1910. "Hewitt Photo Company, Lansing" was lettered on numbered negatives of post card photos of business streets, depots and bridges in Dewitt and Owosso, some postmarked in 1914 and 1915. "Hewitt Lansing" was written in script on numbered negatives of postal views of business streets and schools in Owosso and St. Johns, some postmarked in 1920. Robert was president of the Robert Hewitt Photographic Company, offering Art Commercial Work and specializing in Catalogue Work and Agent Photo Sample Books. Robert seems to have died in 1917 or 1918, for by 1920 Lizzie was married to Wesley O. Buchner and was known as Elizabeth. Joseph Hewitt was listed as a stepson in the Buchner household. | 1112 tttttt mm 111 |   |

Henry was born in the Prussian region of Germany in April of 1841. He sailed from Bremen on the S. S. Harvest and arrived at Baltimore, Maryland, on December 14, 1852. Amelia was born in Illinois in 1847 or early in 1848, and she married Henry about 1867. Their daughter Kittie was born a year later and their son William was born in May of 1874, both in Illinois. The photographer was known as Henry everywhere else, but as Harry in Chicago where he was in business before the fire of October 9, 1871. He was boarding alone in 1880 and was enumerated as married, though his family could not be found. William was a professional photographer by 1900, and seems to have been employing his father as a photo printer. He and his wife were sharing their home with Henry, who was a widower. Ten years later in Tacoma their positions were reversed, and Henry was proprietor of the photograph gallery where William worked as a photographer. By 1920 Henry was gone and William was proprietor of a photographic studio in Seattle. 1 3

| Louis was born at Hanover in the German state of Prussia in November of 1859. He immigrated about 1872, and within ten years he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Louis was boarding with, and probably working for, photographer Heinrich Schaefer in 1880, when both were identified as artists. L. Heyn was proprietor of the U. P. R. R. Photo Car in the early 1880s, and had galleries around 1887 at Rawlins, Wyoming Territory, and about 1890 on Third Street in Laramie, Wyoming. Louis visited Europe and returned from Hamburg, Germany, on the S. S. California, arriving at New York on October 13, 1887. It is not clear whether he was an employee or the proprietor of a Great Falls photographic business in 1900. Emma Burman was born in Germany to Prussian parents in 1875, and she immigrated in 1893. She married Louis about 1901, and their children were born in Montana: Lolita in 1902, Harry about 1904, and Oscar in 1907. Emma and her children were living at one place in Great Falls in 1910, while Louis was boarding at a different location in the same ward. Harry may not have lived to maturity. Louis and Emma were sharing their home with Lolita and Oscar in 1920, and with Lolita in 1930. With two studios more than one thousand miles apart, Louis was a busy man in 1920, when he was enumerated at Los Angeles on January 2 and at Great Falls on January 22. Louis obtained a passport in March of 1927 in order to visit Europe. This time he returned from Bremen, Germany, on the S. S. Bremen, and arrived at New York on October 9, 1927. Apparently Louis died in California prior to 1940. Emma died in Los Angeles County on March 18, 1945. |      |   |

Orin was born at Orleans, New York, on September 4, 1873, the younger son of Erastus and Armena (Wood) Hibbard. He became an average sized man with brown eyes and dark brown hair. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Lillian A. Newman was born at Vassar, Michigan, on September 12, 1875, the daughter of Elisha A. and Helen Amanda (Alden) Newman. She married Orin at Lafayette, Indiana, on her eighteenth birthday, September 12, 1893. Their daughter Mildred was born on November 25, 1896, and may not have lived to maturity. Their son Dallas was born in Michigan on December 9, 1903. Their son Leslie and daughter Lorena, twins, were born at Carland on August 11, 1907. "O. J. Her father emigrated from Canada and Anna Sarah Harrett was born in Prairie Ronde Township of Kalamazoo County, Michigan, to a mother from New York on January 11, 1862, fourth of the six children of Azaliah and Sarah Helen (McNett) Harrett. The Thirteenth Michigan Infantry veteranized in January of 1864 and, though many soldiers re-enlisted, the officers began recruiting to fill the ranks. Anna's father heard the call and at Kalamazoo on February 23, 1864, enlisted as a private in Company C. He was mustered into the army on the same day, and he traveled in April with the regiment to Chattanooga, Tennessee. The Thirteenth soon was engaged in constructing military hospitals on Lookout Mountain and in the pursuit of General Forrest. In November it was assigned to the army under General Sherman for the march to the sea. The regiment reached Savannah on December 16, and was engaged for several days before the city surrendered. During the subsequent march through South and North Carolina, the Thirteenth sustained heavy losses in a pitched battle on March 19, 1865, at Bentonville, North Carolina. Following the Confederate surrender it marched to Richmond, Virginia, and then to Washington to take part in the grand review. The regiment then proceeded to Louisville, Kentucky, where Azaliah and his comrades were mustered out of service on July 25, and on to Jackson, Michigan, where they were paid off and disbanded on July 27, 1865. Frank B. Hickok was born in Michigan in May of 1858, and he had been a photographer for a year or two when he married Anna in 1884. Anna gave birth to Beatrice in July of 1885, and seven years later she succeeded her husband as Wayne's photographer. Mrs. Mamie Corlett became Anna's partner, and then succeeded the partnership. Anna was listed as Frank's widow in Detroit directories from 1895 to 1898, though Frank had a gallery in Ionia during that period. She was enumerated as divorced in the 1900 census report. Anna had lived only 41 years when she died in Detroit on May 19, 1903.

Frank was born in Lyon Township of Oakland County, Michigan, to parents from New York on May 12, 1858, the eldest child of Roswell Barnes Hickok and Sarah Antoinette (Parker) Hickok. He entered the photographic profession in 1883, he studied at one time with Chicago photographer O. P. Scott, and he was said to have been the proprietor of a Grand Rapids photograph gallery. He often was listed as Hickock, but his imprints consistently omitted the second C. "HICKOK, 1891, Plymouth and Wayne, Mich." was printed on some cabinet mounts. Frank married Anna Sarah Harrett in 1884, and their daughter Beatrice was born in July of 1885. Anna succeeded him as photographer in Wayne, and she took along Beatrice when they went their separate ways. Alice Fish was born at Fort Wayne, Indiana, to parents from Vermont and New Jersey on January 15, 1869. When she married Frank at Grand Rapids in 1893 she brought along from a previous marriage her daughter Margaret, who was born in Ohio in July of 1890. Frank purchased the Ionia studio of George W. Clark in 1893. Alice gave birth to Roswell at Ionia on January 2, 1894. According to a report in the spring of 1898, Frank took possession of an Ionia gallery from William R. Baker. Frank died at Indianapolis in May of 1924. Alice lived on for more than forty years and died at Ventura, California, on May 27, 1968. Note that Frank was the brother of the William H. Hickok profiled below.

Guy was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio on January 11, 1886, first of the three sons of William C. and Emma J. Hickok. He grew up on the family farms. "Guy R. Hickok post cards & views, SearS Mich. R F D.1 BOX, 49*" was stamped on the back of a post card photograph of a horse race. "Clare Co. Fair 1908" was lettered on the negative from which this photo was printed. Part of the message on the card was: "... This picture is one I took at the Harrison fair..." Freeman Township in Clare County is about six miles east of Sears in Osceola County, and probably was served by rural postal routes out of Sears. Guy and his brother Everett still were single in 1920, when they were living with their mother adjacent to their father's farm. Leah was born in Ohio to parents from Pennsylvania in December of 1871, and she married Charles Adams about 1894. They were farming in Sylvan Township just north of Sears in 1900, and their son Warren was born in New Mexico in November of 1913. Leah was a widow by 1920, and she brought Warren along when she married Guy about 1921.

Both 51 Monroe Street and 115 West Bridge Street were printed on some of his mounts. William and his family were living in East Grand Rapids in 1900, and in suburban Paris Township in 1910. His father came from Illinois and Walter was born in Wisconsin to a mother from Michigan in 1889 or 1890. He was living in 1910 on the farm of his mother, Myrtey, and her second husband, Roy Bailey. "Hicks" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of business streets and factories at Coloma, and of paper mills and a railroad washout at Watervliet, three miles east of Coloma. Some of these cards were postmarked in 1906, 1907 and 1908. "WALTER W. HICKS, PHOTOGRAPHER, COLOMA, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of photos of Coloma business streets postmarked in the summer of 1909. In one of these, "COLOMA ART STUDIO, Pictures Enlarged, Frames made to order" shows on the side of a two story brick building above a showcase of photographs, and a sign with "PHOTOGRAPH Gallery Up Stairs" projects from the front of the building. In the same hand as on Coloma and Watervliet cards, "Hicks" was lettered on a postal negative along with "Pole Vault M.I.A.A. Track Meet, Albion, 1912." This card was also blind stamped "Tweedie" by the Crowell photographer. "Camping at Paw Paw Lake GERBER & HICKS" and "The Triangle Club, Paw Paw Lake GERBER & HICKS" and "Leaving for Home, Island Park, Paw Paw Lake GERBER & HICKS" were lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of young people having a good time. D. S. Gerber was the senior member of this partnership. Bremen, Indiana, had a photographer named W. W. Hicks in 1916. 2

Benjamin was born in Maine to a mother from Massachusetts in May of 1836, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Higgins. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Jane was born in Connecticut in August of 1839. She married Benjamin about 1866 and their sons were born in Illinois: Orville in March of 1870, Frank about 1872, Willie about 1874, and George in March of 1876. Benjamin lost $1200.00 and more than 8000 negatives in the Chicago fire of October 9, 1871. Since his $850.00 of insurance was all with Chicago companies, he had little hope of collecting much, and could not resume business without help. H. E. Hulings had been working for Benjamin, and lost $300.00 as well as his job. "B. P. HIGGINS, Photographer, [Late of Chicago.] Holland City, Mich...." was printed on the backs of card photographs, including one of the harbor at Kobe, Japan. Benjamin copied and enlarged old and faded pictures, produced stereo views of Holland and vicinity, and did work in crayon, India ink or water colors. In 1877 his Holland gallery measured 20 by 72 feet. He was enumerated as a photo artist in 1880. Their son George lived with Benjamin and Jane through 1910. Jane was a widow by 1920, when she had the company of her widowed son Orville.

John was born in Michigan to an Irish father and a mother from Pennsylvania in March of 1866, a son of George and Susanna Higgins. He was convicted of murder at Adrian in 1898. Not long after he was imprisoned, he purchased a pair of canaries. By 1902 he had established a song bird raising business, and during the next eighteen years he sold six thousand birds to every section of the country and shipped some overseas. He was enumerated as a storeroom clerk in 1910. John also became an expert photographer and for ten years was in charge of the prison gallery. He had always claimed that he was innocent of the crime of which he was convicted, and he was pardoned late in 1919. Apparently John was not comfortable outside the walls, for soon he was back in prison working as a florist.

Lewis was born in Ohio in 1824 or 1825, and his wife Elizabeth was born there three years later. Their sons Edgar and Ashbury were born in Michigan between 1854 and 1859, and their son Marion was born in Ohio about 1863. Lew advertised Ivorytypes, Albatypes and Melainotypes from his Sunbeam Picture Gallery in 1864, when he employed Mr. Adam Springfield as his coloring artist. He later added Ferrotypes, Ambrotypes, Daguerreotypes and Photographs. He claimed to have the largest solar camera ever manufactured, enabling him to make life size enlargements. "HIGGINS & TERRILL, Elyria, Ohio, & Jackson, Mich." and "HIGGINS & TURILL,... Jackson, Mich., and ... Elyria, Ohio." were printed on the backs of cartes de visite found with and without revenue stamps. A. B. Terrill had a gallery in the Union Block at Elyria in 1865, and seems to have been the partner of Lewis. By May of 1866 Lewis had bought out Jackson photographer J. Wesley Excell and was advertising both his Sunbeam Gallery in the Durand Block and Higgins New Picture Rooms in the Empire Block. He employed Robert F. Lattimer as a photographer and James M. LeClear as a coloring artist. Much of his business seems to have been lost by fire in 1867. Those of his negatives which were not damaged were maintained by photographer Hugh A. Steele.

Conrad was born in the German province of Bavaria in 1823 or 1824, and was awarded a silver medal at the school of art in Munich, the capital of Bavaria. In the autumn of 1855 Moses Sutton produced a life size portrait of Captain E. B. Ward and his two sons which was eight feet by six and was composed and colored in oil by Conrad. This was larger than anything produced photographically in New York at this time. During the winter Sutton was paid $600.00 for another large work, and $800.00 for one containing twenty five full length figures. Conrad and 21-year-old Miss Laura Schober were married on June 26, 1856, and their son Celcius was born in Michigan a year later. Conrad was recognized at the Michigan State Fair in 1856 as the painter of the best portrait in water colors, though the painting was part of Sutton's exhibit and the premium went to Sutton. At the same time Conrad received premiums of five dollars each for the best miniature painting and for a painting of Christ's sermon on the mount, which had been entered in his own name. In the spring of 1857 Conrad was working on a portrait of a father and mother and their six children that was six feet high and eight feet wide. He was sometimes called Carlos, and his last name was spelled Harwood, Haywood and Hywood. Conrad entered the service on August 28, 1861, as a Second Lieutenant of Company H of the Third Michigan Cavalry at the organization of the regiment. He was commissioned Captain of Company H on September 7 and was mustered into the army on October 12, 1861. The regiment left Grand Rapids for St. Louis, Missouri, on November 28 and by March of 1862 was located at New Madrid, Missouri, where they were constantly under fire for several days. The water was extremely bad, and caused the most sickness that the Third experienced during the war. At New Madrid about April 15, 1862, Conrad's head was injured when his horse rolled over him. This resulted in recurrent severe pains in his head and eyes for the rest of his life. He resigned his commission and was honorably discharged during the siege of Corinth, Mississippi, on May 11, 1862. He returned to Detroit and then went to Canada for a few months for his health before settling in Detroit for a year or so. He then moved to Chicago. On October 31, 1872, Conrad became a naturalized citizen of the United States. He and Laura were living in New York City in 1880, where he was listed as a Manhattan portrait painter. He traveled to Europe several times seeking relief from his headaches, at one time staying there for 18 months. Though the pains periodically interfered with his concentration, his disposition and his memory, and wholly incapacitated him from painting, Conrad worked as an artist most of the time. For a few years he felt unable to paint and resorted to importing and dealing in paintings. He applied for a disability pension in August of 1890, and received payments until his death on December 29, 1893. Laura left Detroit in July of 1894 to live with her sister in Germany, and her efforts to get a widow's pension seem to have been in vain, though they continued until 1901.

Milo was born in Ohio to parents from New Jersey in July of 1830. Julia M. Potter was born in Illinois to parents from New York on May 16, 1840, first of the six children of William Thatcher Potter and Calista (Flint) Potter. She married Milo at Greenville, Michigan, on November 2, 1861. Julia maintained a millinery business on Bridge Street in Lowell from 1864 through 1901. "... Additional copies of this picture can be had if desired, without further sitting." was printed on some of Milo's cartes de visite. "M. HILER'S ART GALLERY, Photography in all its branches." was printed on the backs of some later card photographs. "The Best Finish On All Our Work. Sit Until Suited." was printed on the backs of many of his cabinet mounts. He advertised "Private and Public Views" about 1873. Milo exhibited a collection of outdoor photographs and stereoscopic views at the Ionia County Fair in the fall of 1874, and had an exhibit at the State Fair in East Saginaw in either 1874 or 1875. "Milo Hiler, PHOTOGRAPHER, East Side, Lowell, Mich. Stereo Views of the Great Lumbering Business of Michigan on sale, cheap. The greatest variety in the State." was printed on the backs of some cabinet mounts. He advertised in 1885 as a "Stereoscopic, Landscape and Portrait Photographer. First Premium at Michigan State Fairs; twice at Grand Rapids, and once at Saginaw." His lumbering stereo views included scenes in the Grand Rapids mills and yards of the Wonderly Lumber Company and others, as well as scenes at the logging camps, in the woods and at the banking grounds. He worked mostly north of Grand Rapids, and published views of many different locations in Montcalm County and some in Ionia and Isabella Counties. Milo also published a series of "Stereoscopic Views of Lowell, with an Early History and things which many will like to remember." The history was continued the mounts in the series, beginning with the first white settlers in the 1820s on the back of the first view and ending with factory and railroad construction in 1887 on the twelfth view. One M. Hiler was a photographer about 1878 in Woodland, California. Milo was a widower by 1910.

His father came from New York and Charles was born in July of 1858 at Acton, Ontario, the son of Charles T. and Jane (Graham) Hill and the brother of James G., Chester T. and Henry F. Hill. Emma Jane McGarvin was born at Acton about 1858, the daughter of Nelson and Mary (Freeman) McGarvin. She married Charles at Georgetown, Ontario, on October 26, 1881. Their son William was born in Canada in December of 1883. They immigrated to the United States in 1885 and became citizens by naturalization. Their daughter Ethel was born in Michigan in November of 1892. Charles entered the photographic field about 1873, probably was associated with James G. Hill in Acton, and definitely succeeded him at Monroe in 1886. At this time Charles was a landscape and commercial photographer who produced stereoscopic views of Monroe and vicinity, made India ink portraits and specialized in enlarging and in photos of patents. One of his cabinet photographs depicted a rack with a washtub on the right and a contraption on the left for agitating the load of washing, and another was of a Chinese gentleman in a hat and a quilted sleeveless jacket. Charles utilized representatives to distribute tickets entitling the purchaser to "...One Dozen Cabinets and One Mounted on GALE'S GLASS MOUNT" at a bargain price. The glass mount was covered by patents issued in 1889 and 1890. Early in the fall of 1891 Charles "... moved into a new and elegant ground floor gallery. The third floor is used for printing; all the rest of the business is conducted on the ground floor. The windows are handsomely decorated with pictures, and fine drapings and curtains adorn the reception room." This building was 25 feet wide and 70 feet deep. Charles sold frames, pictures, mouldings and easels from this gallery on Front Street, as well as a complete line of artists' materials and Waverly bicycles. He was still selling frames in 1906. He later produced post card photographs including a bird's-eye view of Front Street and views of the River Raisin, the yacht club, summer fun at Monroe Piers, residential neighborhoods, the Custer monument and a World War I army recruit in his stiff new uniform. Many of these cards were postmarked between 1917 and 1920.

His father came from New York and James was born in June of 1850 at Acton, Ontario, the son of Charles T. and Jane (Graham) Hill and the brother of Charles W., Chester T. and Henry F. Hill. Her parents emigrated from Scotland and Catherine (sometimes Katie or Katherine) was born in Canada in October of 1856, the daughter of James and Catherine Reid. She married James in Erin Township of Wellington County, Ontario, on January 3, 1876. They had two sons born in Canada: Charles in 1877 or early in 1878, and William in July of 1879. Then they had two children born in Michigan: Edith in October of 1882, and James in June of 1886. Their son Eugene was born in Ohio in January of 1894. Most of James' Monroe imprints identified him as a portrait and landscape photographer and carried no street address, but a few were from 23 Front Street or from 26 Front Street. He attended the annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in August of 1883. He was succeeded in Monroe by Charles W. Hill, and succeeded S. W. Campbell on Monroe Avenue, assuring his early Detroit patrons that "... duplicates from all Mr. Campbell's negatives can be obtained." His cabinet photographs included multiple views of Detroit streets and buildings as well as studio portraits and groups. James' Monroe Avenue gallery was burglarized on the night of June 5, 1887. The stolen property included a camera box and case valued at $80.00, a Dallmeyer lens valued at $164.00, a cornet worth $15.00 and photographs valued at $7.30. It was found in the Toledo, Ohio, room of William F. Horning, who was accused of committing similar burglaries at Toledo and Cincinnati, Ohio, and at Paducah, Kentucky. Horning had been arrested at Cleveland and returned to Toledo in custody. 274 Woodward Avenue was at the corner of Grand Circus Park. J. G. Hill & Company called themselves Portrait and Commercial Photographers in 1889. James was simultaneously interested in studios on both Woodward and Monroe Avenues in 1889, 1891 and 1892. Henry F. Hill was a principal of Hill Brothers in 1891, but James was the sole proprietor in 1892. The Monroe Avenue studio occupied the entire second floor of a 22 by 100 foot building, and James was succeeded there by the photographer Herman Baron. Some of James' Detroit employees were: photographer Chester T. Hill in 1887; photographer Miss Minnie A. Stacy in 1887 and 1888; photo printer Joseph F. Knight in 1889; photographer Charles G. Eddington in 1889 and 1890; Henry F. Hill, photo printer in 1889 and photographer in 1890; Miss Nellie Taber, bookkeeper in 1889 and clerk in 1890; Charles J. Merz, photographer in 1890, photo printer in 1891 and clerk in 1892; John Wesley Morden, retoucher in 1890 and artist in 1891 and 1892; retoucher Thomas William Carswell in 1891; and retoucher Mattie Taber in 1892. The Summit Street address in Toledo was printed over the Monroe Avenue address in Detroit on some cabinet mounts. Charles H. Hill was the junior partner in J. G. Hill & Son, and by 1900 had been succeeded as such by his brother, William H. Hill. Edith became a librarian, and she still was living with James and Catherine in 1930.

John was born in Ohio to a mother from New York in November of 1861, the son of Albert R. and Sarah Hill. His sister Sarah was born two years later. Ellen (later Ella) was born in Michigan to English parents in November of 1872. She married John about 1886, and they never had children. One report late in 1898 noted that Hill had gone from Bridgewater to Coral where he had rented a gallery for the winter, and another two pages later stated that he had gone from St. Louis to Coral. His cabinet photographs look earlier than the dates listed above, include an outdoor photo of the local baseball team, and carry imprints such as "J. E. Hill, Coral, Mich." and "... Home Address, Breckenridge, Mich." and "Hill - Breckenridge and Merrill." John was living on his father's Bethany Township farm in 1910, and commuting to his studio in Breckenridge which was immediately to the east of the Township. Some postal photographs had "Hill" lettered on the negative along with such legends as "Breckenridge School." William E. Judd was proprietor of Hill's Studio at St. Joseph in 1915 and 1916. Ella was a widow by 1920, when she was living in New Jersey with the family of her sister Mary.

Seymour was born in New York State in the summer of 1846, second of the three children of Myron S. and Sally M. Hill. He claimed to be 18 years old when he enlisted at Bridgewater in Company B of the Seventeenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry on July 20, 1862. Leaving Detroit for Washington on August 27, the regiment was charging rebels waiting behind stone walls only three weeks later. Five hundred men charged on September 14 and 140 of them were killed or wounded, but they drove the enemy from his defenses and down the mountain. Three days later they were desperately engaged at Antietam, Maryland. The 17th stayed in Maryland and Virginia until March of 1863 when they were transported to Louisville, Kentucky. They took part in the siege of Vicksburg from June 22 to July 4, fought from July 11 to 18 at Jackson, Mississippi, and returned late in August to Crab Orchard, Kentucky. They crossed the Cumberland Mountains on foot to Knoxville, Tennessee, campaigned with inadequate clothing and rations in East Tennessee, and then were sent to Lenoir to contest the Confederate advance upon Knoxville. The 17th acted as rear guard as the Union army fell back slowly to Knoxville, with fights on September 14 and 15, and a severe engagement at Campbell's Station on September 16, when Seymour was reported missing in action. Occupying Fort Saunders, the regiment helped to repel furious charges while Knoxville was under siege from November 17 to December 5, 1863. When the Confederates moved on into East Tennessee, the 17th was part of the Union forces which followed despite scanty rations, poor clothing and cold weather. Starting March 22, 1864, they marched two hundred miles across mountains to Nicholasville, Kentucky, and then proceeded to Annapolis, Maryland. They were engaged in the desperate battle of the Wilderness on May 6, and then fought at Spottsylvania, Virginia, on May 10, 11 and 12, 1864. The 17th charged the enemy's works on May 12, only to be surrounded in dense woods by heavy lines of Confederates and practically annihilated. They had nearly 100 men killed or wounded, and the same number captured. Seymour was one of those taken prisoner. The 17th effectively lost its identity as a regiment, and the survivors were assigned to various organizations besieging Petersburg. Seymour was confined in the stockade at Andersonville, Georgia, where he contracted scurvy and other diseases which affected his heart and his limbs. He was hospitalized at Andersonville from October to December of 1864, and was released near Jacksonville, Florida, in an exchange of prisoners on April 28, 1865. He was honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, on June 10, 1865. He and 30-year-old Mrs. Sarah A. Millspaugh were married on December 26, 1865. Their children were born in Michigan: Eugene in 1867, and William and Kittie between 1873 and 1876. When Seymour applied for a pension in February of 1888 he was five feet eight inches tall with a dark complexion, dark hair and blue eyes, and was afflicted with a sore mouth, a diseased heart, rheumatism and chronic diarrhea all of which had troubled him since the war. He died from the heart disease at Knoxville on October 14, 1891.

| Harry was born in England on April 16, 1888, the son of Henry and Kate (Barry) Hillier. He immigrated and arrived at Spring Lake in November of 1907. Her father came from Michigan and Genevieve (sometimes Viva) A. Gatfield was born in South Dakota to a mother from Iowa in 1889 or early in 1890, first of the two children of John E. and Mary L. Gatfield. She was living with her family in Grand Haven when she and Harry crossed the state to get married in Windsor, Ontario, on October 27, 1912. Harry was hired by the Ford Motor Company at Highland Park as a machine repairman on December 9, 1916, and was transferred to the Photographic Department on March 2, 1917. There he worked under Ambrose B. Jewett as a motion picture printer and camera man, and was classified as a cinematographer when he quit on April 26, 1919. He was occasionally listed as a projectionist or cinematographer for the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company. Genevieve was listed as Harry's wife through 1929, but something happened and by 1934 Harry had a wife named Beula. They were living in Royal Oak in 1937, and in Berkley in 1940. They divorced in 1951 in Brevard County, Florida. Harry died in California in January of 1970 |           | 1 52 111 22 3333 ddd6 5 |

Arthur was born in North Dakota to Irish parents in 1882. He was lodging with the family of a widow in 1910. Edna's father emigrated from Denmark and she was born in Illinois early in 1882, the elder daughter of Peter and Minnie Rasmussen. She was working as a stenographer and living in Chicago with her parents in 1910, and she married Arthur a couple of years later. Three of their children were born in Illinois: Robert in 1914, John in July of 1916, and Edward about 1925. Their daughter Thelma was born in Michigan in July of 1919, but she failed to live to maturity. Edna was a widow by 1930, when she was providing a home in Chicago for her sons.

Davis was born in Plymouth, Michigan, on October 4, 1896, fourth of the five children of Louis W. and Mary K. Hillmer. He finally learned to read with tutoring from his grandmother Starkweather when he was in the third grade, but soon caught up with the others in his class. He had wanted a camera for several years, but had spent his money on a rifle and on boxing gloves before trading some toys for a 4 by 5 box plate camera about 1910. In 1912 he was permitted to use his brother's fine 4 by 5 Pony Premo Number 6 folding camera which originally had been purchased by a Plymouth barber in 1902. By 1913 Davis had subscribed to three photographic magazines and was overwhelmed by photography. He soon became one of Plymouth's leading post card photographers. "HILLMER PHOTO" or "PHOTO BY DAVIS B. HILLMER" was neatly lettered on the negatives of postal views of Plymouth business streets, public buildings, the depot and a parade and balloon ascension on a Gala Day in 1915. He signed the negatives of some of his more artistic views "D. B. Hillmer" in script. The composition, exposure and printing of his cards compared very favorably with his more mature contemporaries. He soon determined that selling post cards for one dollar per dozen would not lead to wealth and found photographic work in Detroit. Davis became a medium sized man with grey eyes and dark brown hair. He was drafted into the army in August of 1918, and sent to Fort Custer where he set up a photo lab for the Fourteenth Division Engineers. There he used a Celor lens in making 11 by 14 inch copies of maps. Late in January of 1919 he was discharged from the army. He was commuting in 1920 from his parents' home in Plymouth to his job in Detroit. The Curtis Company was in the advertising business and all of his other Detroit employers were commercial photographers. Davis opened his own studio on March 1, 1922, and was soon using photographic post cards to advertise: "... We give quick, dependable service on the following classes of photographic work: Machinery, Tools, Mechanical Equipment, Etc.; Manufactured Products of all Kinds; Buildings, Interior and Exterior; Homes, Estates and Landscapes; Automobiles, Trucks, Parts and Accessories; Engineering and Construction Projects; Advertising Illustrations; Copies, Reductions and Enlargements of Drawings, Paintings, Maps, Blue Prints, Typewritten or Printed Matter; High Speed Photographs, such as Races, Riding Contests, Games, Animals or Birds in Action. Traffic and Street Views and Press Work, Club, Civic, Church and School Groups..." Davis was enumerated as an architectural photographer in 1930, when his residential address was identical to his business address. He did work for the J. L. Hudson Company, Detroit's principal department store, during every one of the fifty years he was in business. Other department stores and major retailers of clothing, jewelry and shoes in Detroit were regular customers. His industrial accounts included the Allis-Chalmers Corporation, the Hoskins Manufacturing Company, the R. C. Mahon Company and the Wyandotte Chemical Company. Conscious that he was beginning to fumble jobs, Davis decided to retire in 1972. He sold most of his equipment and moved to Plymouth on August 1. He had always used his cameras for pleasure as well as in business. As a boy he was impressed by a ten cent booklet on composition and pattern in the final print published by F. Dundas Todd of the Photo Beacon magazine. Davis tried to follow these principles based upon Japanese art and eventually came to use them rather automatically. Birds and other aspects of nature accounted for much of his spare time and film while he wandered around with a light camera expecting to be rewarded pictorially. He enjoyed taking natural and uncompromising candid photographs of people in his later years. Some of his prints were exhibited at national and state photographic shows, the Plymouth Historical Museum has a few of his photographs, and a significant body of his work is in the State Archives of Michigan. Davis died on August 28, 1979.

Richard was born in Ohio on January 11, 1870, last of the seven children of F. W. and Susan Himes. Nellie (sometimes Helen) was born in Michigan to English parents in April of 1871, and she married Richard in 1891 or 1892. Their daughter Maud was born in Michigan in July of 1894. Richard advertised in 1896: "THE HIMES STUDIO, R. B. Himes, proprietor. The Finest Equipped Establishment in Southern Michigan. Complete in Every Respect. Enlarging in Crayon, Pastel and India Ink a Specialty, THREE RIVERS, MICHIGAN." He had a two-year lease on the property on the northeast corner of Front and Park Streets where his Traverse City gallery stood and where a man wanted to erect a brick building. Richard demanded and received a bonus for vacating the site in July of 1897. His opening of a photograph gallery at Sherman was noted in May of 1900. Richard had a photographic associate at Farwell named Henry Marcott who lived with an elderly aunt. The widow died suddenly and Richard helped Marcott take her body to Alma for a private funeral. Then Marcott asked to be appointed administrator, representing an estate of $28 cash and personal effects. In response to queries instituted by other relatives, Marcott confessed to appropriating $500 left by the widow and dividing it with Richard, and returned $400 of the amount. Relatives claimed that $1000 more was missing. Marcott and Himes were arrested for conspiracy in April of 1902, but the Weidman newspaper announced in May of 1902 that "The photographer, Mr. Himes, of Farwell, is in town ready to take all kinds of pictures for the next thirty days." so the charges against him seem to have been dropped. In June it was noted that Mr. Himes was entertaining friends from Farwell, and in August the paper mentioned that "Mr. Himes, the photographer, who has been with us the past three months, returned to his home in Farwell last Friday." Richard seems to have been employing 36-year-old Francis H. Sargent as a photographer in 1910, and 42-year-old Franklin G. Harris as a photographer in 1920. He died at Sandpoint on March 13, 1931. 1 5

Otis was born in Michigan to parents from New York in August of 1873, youngest of the six children of Abel R. and Mary M. Hincher. William Deno was the original photographic partner of Otis, and he was succeeded by his brother Frank Deno. None of the three men seem to have had professional photographic experience. The sale by Hincher & Deno of their photograph gallery to a Mr. Miller of Coldwater was reported early in 1899. Otis and an his sister Merta were living in 1900 with their widowed mother. Mary (later Minnie) was born in Canada about 1887 and was brought to the United States a year later. She became the first and only wife of Otis in 1908 or 1909. Their son Ernest was born at Seattle on February 4, 1918. Otis seems to have died prior to 1940, but Minnie lived until October 16, 1950.

Hull was born in Pennsylvania in April of 1866, fourth of the five known children of Andrew and Anna (Hull) Hiner. 1

Though he was usually listed as shown, his first name was sometimes given as Gabriel, Gabril, Gabel, George or Gustavus. Her father came from New York and Margaret Ida Clarke was born at Woodstock, Ontario, to an English mother in March of 1868, the daughter of William and Emma (Appleton) Clarke. She immigrated in 1887, and she came from Mansfield, Ohio, to marry Hull at Windsor, Ontario, on September 5, 1894. Their children were born in Michigan: Russell in July of 1895, Margaret and Florence between 1900 and 1904, and Charles in November of 1909. 1 d

The Kirby Avenue photographer was listed as Gabriel H. Himel. From Marine City Hull advertised his "... Marine Studio, Portraiture, Commercial Work for Lithographing, Viewing, Finishing for Amateurs, &c." The change in address during 1920 was due to revisions in the numbering system. Margaret was a widow providing a Detroit home for her younger son in 1930.

Roy, as he was usually listed, was born on April 9, 1881, at Fenton, Michigan. He was eldest of the four children of Jennie L. (Galusha) and D. Eugene Hinkley, a long time Fenton jeweler. Catherine Barnum Curtis was born in Michigan on April 30, 1884, elder of the two children of Will A. and Ellenor Curtis. She married Roy about 1905. Their children were born in Michigan: Curtis in 1907 or early in 1908, Margaret in 1910 or early in 1911, and Willah on November 1, 1912. Roy became a prolific producer of post card photographs. In Holly, he made postal views of the main and residential streets, factories, the depot, the river and lake, schools, churches, the cemetery and blossoming shrubs. He made similar views in Genesee County of Fenton, Flushing, Grand Blanc, Linden and Long Lake; in Oakland County of Clarkston, Davisburg, Waterford, Watkins Lake and White Lake; in Saginaw County of Frankenmuth; in Shiawassee County of Bancroft; and in Wayne County of Eloise, Northville and Plymouth. The provenance of many of his post card photographs was established only with the initials "R.G.H." lettered on the negatives. Catherine was his photographic helper in 1930. Royal died in 1935 in Polk County, Florida. 1 4

| Frank was born to parents from Ohio in Travis County, Illinois, on April 14, 1880, the younger son of Harmon and Alvira Hinkston. His brother Creighton was seven years older. Frank became a slender man with brown eyes and hair.  |           | 1 3  |
| He attended the Illinois College of Photography and then gained practical experience in a number of eastern studios before coming to work in Detroit. He married, but by 1910 he was divorced and was sharing his home with his widowed mother, who still was with him in 1920. In 1921 he advertised "Portraits in The Studio or The Home, Illustrations for Advertising..." For five years Frank was the delegate for Michigan to the National Council of the Photographers' Association of America, and for five years he was treasurer and Michigan vice president of the Ohio-Michigan-Indiana Photographers' Association. He served as president of the Michigan Photographers' Association and of the Photographers' Association of Detroit. He was a member of the Scarab Club and participated in many of the Club exhibitions, and his artistic efforts and studies contributed to his success as a photographic portraitist. Frank was often a demonstrator at photographic conventions, and was an inveterate gadgeteer. His studio was always open to those who wanted to see his latest contrivance for making better portraits. Frank died in Manatee County, Florida, in 1950. |           | 1 31 322 11 dd 222222 44 |

Julius was born in Germany on September 27, 1872, and was the son of Leopold and Louise (Peters) Hinz. He attended a military academy from his ninth to his fourteenth year, and then became associated with his stepfather in the china decorating business. He immigrated to North America in 1893 and later became a naturalized citizen of the United States. Augusta Shrock was born in April of 1873, and she emigrated from Germany in 1891. She married Julius in Detroit on May 19, 1895. Their children were born in Detroit: Gertrude in March of 1896, Walter in December of 1897, Edwin (who did not live to maturity) in August of 1899, Erich in 1901, and Clara in 1904. Harry Kemp was a principal of the Hinz Ceramic Photo Company in 1903, but Julius was the sole proprietor in 1904 and 1905. The company advertised: "... We Reproduce on China PHOTOGRAPHS or PICTURES, Fraternal Emblems and Sceneries of any kind, as clear and distinct as the original, and thoroughly and properly burned in so that they will not fade, wash or rub off. We also do china decorating and firing, and hold ourselves responsible for breakage of any pieces entrusted to us to be fired. Colors For China Decorating Kept On Hand For Sale..." Julius perfected and patented the process for photographing on china which was generally adopted throughout the world, though I have not been able to find the patent. He applied for patents on China Kilns on May 17, 1905 and November 2, 1906, and Patent Numbers 825,651 and 875,350 were granted to him on July 10, 1906, and December 31, 1907. He filed another application on an Oil Burner on May 27, 1908, and his Patent Number 920,572 issued on May 4, 1909. Julius established a business to manufacture industrial kilns and furnaces based upon his inventions. At the time of his death on July 23, 1920, the furnace company had fifty employees. His sons, Walter E. and Erich Hinz, continued the business.

Waino was born in Finland on October 8, 1879, and he immigrated to Chicago in 1902. From Chicago he went to Rock Springs, Wyoming, where he worked in the mines and in a store. Then he went to Idaho Falls, Idaho, where he began to learn photography. He worked in photography studios at St. Paul and Virginia, Minnesota, before he went into business for himself in Chisholm. When a 1908 fire destroyed Chisholm, he moved to Ironwood. Nelma Heikka was born in Michigan of Finnish parentage in December of 1891, second of the six children of Isaac and Mary Heikka, and she grew up in Laurium. She married Waino on June 24, 1913, and their children were born in Ironwood, John in 1916, Helen in 1918, Jean about 1924, and William in December of 1926. Waino became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1917, when he was a short man with gray eyes and dark hair. He advertised in October of 1915: "WE HAVE A fine special line of Photos at $3.50 per Dozen, Very attractive refined finish. We give a Handsome Enlarging FREE! With each order of photos amounting to $3.50 or over.... Finest Photograph Studio on the Range." In December of 1919 it was: "A Photograph of the Child Never Grows Up." In February of 1920 he claimed that "Hirvela photographs are 'standards' of this community. Exceptional ability in the making has made them so. Let your next photograph be from this store. W. HIRVELA, Photographer, Next to City Library, Ironwood, Mich." In September of 1922 his studio was open from 9 to 6 o'clock every day except Sunday, when he was open from 9 until 4 o'clock. At this time Waino was offering to sell a house and lot next to the Carnegie Library, and he announced that "Beginning the first of October, Photographer E. Matera will have charge of the studio during my absence...." This advertisement appeared in March of 1923: "For Your Photographs TRY Hirvela Studio, Ironwood, Mich. E. Matera, Photographer." Eero Matera was born in Finland about 1890, emigrated from there in 1906, and was a Bessemer carpenter in 1930. Waino advertised in October of 1925: "Your friends can buy anything but your photograph. Nothing will so thoroughly satisfy as your photograph. It is the Christmas gift that lives. It will be cherished long after the day's pleasures have been forgotten. Send your photo as a new kind of Christmas card. We have special styles that we feel will meet the demand of your taste. Why not arrange for a sitting...." His ad in 1928 was: "Photographs of the children never grow up. Kodak finishing. Films for sale." The post card stock of some studio portraits of this era was embossed "HIRVELA STUDIO, IRONWOOD, MICH."

Sturgis is about ten miles north of La Grange. His father came from Pennsylvania, George was born at North Liberty, Ohio, on March 9, 1840, first of the five children of Martin and Elizabeth Hissong. His family moved to northern Indiana in 1846. At Warsaw on May 6, 1861, he enlisted as a corporal in Company E of the Twelfth Indiana Infantry. At this time he was almost 5 feet 10 inches tall with a fair complexion, hazel eyes and dark hair. Discharged from the infantry at Washington on May 12, 1862, George enlisted as a sergeant in Company C of the Fourth Indiana Cavalry on August 2, 1862. The regiment was engaged primarily in Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky. Despite suffering severely from rheumatism in his back from his neck and shoulders to his hips for two years beginning early in 1863, George resolutely remained on duty except when prostrated with fever. From August until December of 1864 he was effectively the only officer in command of Company C. At Edgefield, Tennessee, on June 29, 1865, he was honorably discharged as First Lieutenant of his company. He moved from Warsaw to La Grange only two days before he and 23-year-old Miss Mary J. Cline were married there on January 21, 1866. Their children were born in Indiana, Charles in March of 1867 and Lulu five years later. George produced stereo views of La Grange during the 1880s. Charles M. Hissong began his photographic training in 1886 and subsequently became his father's partner. During George's protracted service-connected illness, Charles maintained the business and his family. George died at La Grange on April 1, 1923, and his widow Mary died there on March 3, 1928.

James was born in New York State in 1839, sixth of the seven known children of Joseph and Laura Hoag. His father and the father of the Abner Jay Hoag profiled above were brothers. James came with his family in 1846 to Lenawee County, Michigan. Emma was born in England about 1841, and she married James about 1863. Their children were born in Adrian: Carrie in 1864 or early in 1865, Nora about 1870, Fred about 1875, and George in 1877 or early in 1878. "... Opposite Lawrence Hotel, Maumee Street, ... Photographs nicely finished in India Ink" or "... Over Confectionery, Maumee Street, ..." was printed on some of his early card photograph mounts. "Taken at Adrian, Mich., by J. M. Hoag, 1869" was written on the back of the carte de visite sized paper sleeve of a tintype of an eighteen-year-old tinsmith. James produced stereo views of Adrian, and advertised: "Pictures taken in all the Modern Styles of the Art. Copying neatly done." He employed Frederick M. Meyerhuber in 1876, and was succeeded by Fred in 1879. James had spent twenty of his forty years in photography when he died at Adrian on May 13, 1879, from scarlet fever and blood poisoning. His wife and four children were also afflicted with the disease, but not fatally. He was remembered as kind, generous, genial and manly, with integrity and singleness of purpose; a good man, a good citizen, a good husband and a good father. The Adrian Social Club formally expressed sympathy to his bereaved family and resolved to hang a portrait of James in the club parlors.

The new gallery of Hobart & Lafayette at Hart was reported to be ready for business in October of 1898. Pictures sent to a photographic magazine from this gallery received favorable comment early in 1899: "... There is a variety in pose and execution that seems suitable to each and every sitter. It is good work." Mrs. Lucy E. Hobart and John A. Lafayette probably were the principals of Hobart & Lafayette.

Lucy was born to parents from New York in July of 1848 at Chicago, Illinois, third of the five children of Stephen and Amelia (Barker) Bronson. She also had two half-sisters who were daughters of her father's second wife, Kate. Her father entered the Union army as a private in the fall of 1861, and was mustered out in October of 1865 as a Brevet Brigadier General. He was elected Mayor of Big Rapids in 1883. Lucy married Big Rapids photographer Marl E. Hobart on July 12, 1882, and they never had children. She probably took part in Marl's photographic business during the later 1880s. Her rental of the Big Rapids gallery to William E. Marshall was reported in June of 1898. She presumably was associated with John A. Lafayette in the Hobart & Lafayette galleries in Big Rapids, Howard City and Hart before they formed Lafayette & Company on May 22, 1900, and purchased the Bell Photograph Gallery on Jefferson Street in Muskegon. Lucy was living on her own by 1900, and was identified as a widow in 1910. She lived a few doors down Amity Avenue from the Lafayettes, and accompanied the family on western trips. She succeeded Lafayette & Company about 1918 when John Lafayette went into the moving picture theater business.

Marl was born on July 27, 1845, at Ann Arbor in Washtenaw County, Michigan, the son of Horace O. and Frances A. (Monroe) Hobart. He studied medicine in the office of Dr. Breakey and then in the Medical Department of the University of Michigan, graduating in 1871. Frank W. Carpenter was boarding with Marl's family in 1870, and both young men told the census enumerator that what they did was "work at photography." Marl moved to Mecosta County with his parents in 1871, and they bought the stock and interest of Big Rapids photographer Wesley F. Louckes. Marl was in business for nine months at San Marcos and only briefly at Longview. He advertised as an "Artistic and Practical Photographer" in 1879. He was on the first list of members of the Photographers' Association of America published in the spring of 1881. He and Miss Lucy E. Bronson were married at Big Rapids on July 12, 1882. "M. E. HOBART, Publisher, Big Rapids, Mich." was printed on the face of mounts carrying stereo views such as a floral cross and a pirated copy of "The Rapids Pilot" by B. F. Childs. His card photographs included street scenes and his cabinet photographs included views of men handling logs on the river as well as the usual portraits. He also produced an 8¼ by 4 inch panel photograph of a tombstone dated early in 1883. His successor in Big Rapids was a branch of the Manistee gallery of Jacob Hanselman. Lucy, Mrs. Marl E. Hobart, became a Big Rapids photographer in 1896.

Joseph was born in Michigan to parents from New York in November of 1857, third of the four children of Joseph P. and Ann Hodgeman. In 1880 he was living on the farm of his widowed father. Her father emigrated from England and Carrie was born in Michigan to a mother from Massachusetts in April of 1864. She married Joseph in 1888 or 1889, and she gave birth to George in August of 1893. One of Joseph's South Lyon cabinet photographs was a full-length self-portrait with his camera on a tripod. "J. H. HODGEMAN, PHOTOGRAPHER, SOUTH LYONS, MICH Copying & Enlarging. Satisfaction Guaranteed." was stamped very faintly on the back of the 7 1/2 by 10 inch mount of a 6 by 8 sepia photograph depicting four young couples in front of their tents. They were picnicking on the shore of a lake with their dog, a guitar, a horse and a hammock, with a crude dock and several rowboats in the foreground.

John was born in March of 1830 in Hereford, England, and he gained some photographic experience before he immigrated to America in 1852. Amanda Malvina Robbins was born to parents from New York at Marion, Ohio, on April 9, 1840, seventh of the nine children of Jonathan N. and Parmelia (Sutliff) Robbins. She married John on August 20, 1862, and she usually was listed as Malvina or Melvina Hodges. Their only child, Minerva May Hodges, was born at White Pigeon on May 11, 1863, and usually was called Minnie. John's announcement of the opening of his rooms at Constantine was dated November 25, 1861, and promised perfect satisfaction given or no charge. In March of 1869, he had "... commenced business over Murray's Grocery, Kalamazoo Street, and is prepared to do all kinds of work in the business, from the smallest locket to life size. Having had many years experience, both in this country and England, he feels confident that he can please the most fastidious. Particular attention given to copying and finishing in oil, water colors and India ink." He became a member of the National Photographic Association in its second year, between July of 1869 and June of 1870. At the St. Joseph County Fair in the fall of 1870, "Hodges, of White Pigeon, had probably some of the best examples of photography ever on exhibition at a fair in this county." John was awarded premiums for the Second Best Oil Painting, the Best Exhibition of Ambrotypes and Photographs, the Best Ambrotypes and the Best Photographs. One of his White Pigeon card photographs was of a handsome brick church. He attended the inaugural convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880, was on the initial list of PA of A members published in May of 1881, and attended the second annual PA of A convention at New York City in August of 1881. Card and cabinet imprints placed his galleries opposite the court house in Paw Paw and opposite the bank in Sturgis. His Sturgis cabinet photographs included a photograph of a costumed man standing in front of a poster with "Prof. C. Bartholomew - BALLOON ASCENSION.... A LEAP FROM THE CLOUDS" and pictures of balloons and parachutes. Malvina was a widow by 1920.

Francis was born to parents from New Hampshire at Climax, Michigan, on November 18, 1839, second of the three sons of Moses and Frances H. (Bellows) Hodgman. From the time he was ten years old he worked on a farm in the summer and attended school in the winter. He began teaching school in the winter of 1857-58, and in this way worked his way through Michigan Agricultural College, entering in the spring of 1858. In November of 1862 he was one of the five young men in the second class graduated from MAC. Master of Science degrees were awarded to all five in 1865. Francis produced some outstanding stereo views of nearby Battle Creek as well as a great stereo series of Galesburg that included a view of the building that housed his gallery above the street level shops. In 1868 he was appointed county surveyor of Kalamazoo County, and was later elected to this office which he held for twenty five years. He and Florence Betsy Comings were married at Galesburg on November 14, 1870, and later had three children. Harry was born at Galesburg on August 12, 1871, Fanny was born at Galesburg on October 11, 1872, and Lucy was born at Climax on November 18, 1876. Francis surveyed the Coldwater & Marshall Railroad in 1871 and 1872. As county surveyor he relocated and permanently marked about 2000 corners of sections and quarter sections in Kalamazoo County. He was chief of location and construction for the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad through one hundred miles of mountainous eastern Utah in 1881 and 1882. He became a charter member of the Michigan Engineering Society in 1880, served as secretary from 1886 and as treasurer as well from 1889, until he was elected president of the society in 1906. Florence died in May of 1888, and Francis married Emma Frances Smith at Chicago on October 16, 1888. Due to failing health, Francis turned from engineering to writing and publishing in 1891. He was editor of the "Michigan Engineers' Annual" and a regular contributor to agricultural and engineering journals. His Manual of Land Surveying went through eleven editions between 1886 and 1904. The F. Hodgeman Company also published Surveyors' Tables, a Surveyors' Field Book, The Wandering Singer and His Songs, Homes Sweet Harmonies and Early Days in Climax, all written by Francis. His interests and talents included poetry, music, painting and history as well as engineering and farming. He was such a figure in his day that he used a wheelbarrow to pick up his daily mail. Emma died in August of 1898, and Francis married Jennie A. Dickie at Charleston, Michigan, on October 15, 1902. Francis died at Climax on November 20, 1907. There is a memorial to him in front of the Men's Union Building at Michigan State University, and fifty years after his death the townspeople of Climax installed a bronze plaque on the large granite boulder that serves as his tombstone in Prairie Home Cemetery.

Samuel was born on February 14, 1831, at Charlestown, New Hampshire, eldest of the three sons of Moses and Frances H. (Bellows) Hodgman. Her father came from New York and Ella M. Weeks was born in Ohio to a mother from Pennsylvania in 1839, first of the five children of Robert E. and Matilda Weeks. Her father was a daguerreotypist at Sandusky from 1855 through 1860. Ella married Samuel in 1864 at Sandusky, Ohio, and they had four children. Charles was born at Sandusky, Ohio, on July 31, 1865, Robert was born at Sandusky on February 3, 1869, Willard was born at Cleveland, Ohio, on September 30, 1870, and Winifred was born at Traverse City, Michigan, on February 16, 1879. S. C. & F. Hodgman produced a fine carte de visite bird's-eye view of Galesburg stores with many teams and wagons at the hitching rails along their frontage. No revenue stamp was affixed to the mount of this photograph, and Samuel's cartes de visite from Mendon are found with and without two cent revenue stamps. "S. C. Hodgman, Artist" was written large on the back of stereographs, including one of the Hussey residence in Battle Creek. "Hodgman Bros., Artists" was penned on the face of stereo mounts along with captions such as "Jefferson St., Battle Creek, Mich." Samuel was working in 1870 with his father in law, Robert E. Weeks, in his Cleveland photograph gallery at 233 Superior Street. Samuel died at Haines City on April 1, 1900.

John was born in Michigan to Dutch parents in February of 1859, third of the four children of John and Anna Hoedemaker. With George W. O'Harra, John invented a photographic shutter upon which they applied for a patent on August 10, 1885, with veteran photographer Cullen C. Packard as one of their witnesses. Patent No. 340,213 was granted to them on April 20, 1886, with one-half assigned to Daniel O. Roberts and Frank S. Hillhouse of Kalamazoo. Her father came from New York and Emma was born in Michigan to a mother from Vermont in November of 1860. She married John late in 1862 or early in 1863. Their daughter Marie was born in September of 1896. John and Emma were sharing their home in 1920 and in 1930 with their daughter and her husband, Carl W. Haven.

Lambertus was born at Grijpskerk in the Netherlands on February 3, 1854, third of the four sons of Douwe Ubels Hoeksema and Anje Eppes (Kremer) Hoeksema. Henrietta Goossen was born in the Netherlands in 1856, third of the seven known children of Henry and Joanna Goossen. She immigrated in 1868, and she married Lambertus about 1878. She gave birth to six children in Michigan, including John on May 18, 1880, Carl about 1892, Bertha about 1894, and Edward about 1897. John B. Goossen had photographic experience before he became the partner of Lambertus in 1883, and he went on to a long career as a photographer. He was the brother, or possibly the cousin, of Mrs. Henrietta Hoeksema. Lambertus died on October 21, 1898, and his widow continued the wall paper business for a few years. Henrietta lived on in Grand Rapids until her death on August 8, 1932.

His mother emigrated from Canada and Clarence was born in Michigan on December 22, 1878, the son of Herman H. and Sarah J. (Long) Hoffman. His father was a tinsmith, and Clarence became a tall man with brown eyes and black hair. Her father emigrated from Ireland and Marie was born in New York about 1878, fourth of the six children of Michael and Bridget Breen. She married Clarence about 1902. "C L HOFFMAN BROWN CITY" was stamped on the back of 3½ by 4¼ inch plain buff mounts with rounded corners. One of his photos is of a person (probably Marie) standing in a tub and peeking with a big grin on her face from behind the shower curtain. Marie gave birth in Michigan to Gladys on August 12, 1908, and to Geraldine on April 8, 1910. Both of the girls were employed and living with their parents in 1930, when Clarence's widowed father also was a member of the household. Gladys was back with them in 1940, along with her eight-year-old Beverly and her three-year-old Ann Marie. Apparently Marie looked after the children while Gladys worked as a saleslady in a department store. Clarence died in August of 1972 at Grosse Pointe, Michigan.

Cornelius was born to Dutch parents at Holland, Michigan, on February 22, 1879, eighth of the nine children of Jacob Lammert Hoffman and Pieternella (Steketee) Hoffman. He and his younger brother Jacob were living in 1900 with their widowed mother, now known as Mrs. Helen Hoffman. Rose Delia Glielman was born in Michigan on July 24, 1878, and she married Cornelius on June 23, 1902. Their children were born at Holland: Gladys on April 15, 1904, Neil on April 5, 1906, Ellen on July 11, 1908, Rozella on February 21, 1911, and Dorothy on February 18, 1912. Rozella and Dorothy may not have lived to maturity. Nicholas Hoffman was enumerated as manager of the restaurant in 1910, while Cornelius was identified as proprietor of the photograph gallery. Rose and her husband, now called Neil, both were enumerated in 1920 as proprietors of the photograph studio. Cornelius died in Oklahoma on December 17, 1928, and Rose lived until January 11, 1956.

Thomas was born in Poland, then part of Russia, to John and Sophia (Mikowfski) Hoffman on May 28, 1892. He became a tall slender man with blue eyes and brown hair, came to America in 1910, and by 1917 was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Stanley W. Babiarz was associated with Thomas from 1916 until 1918, and then succeeded their partnership at 935 Chene Street. Thomas was single when he was inducted into the army at Detroit on May 28, 1918, and was sent to Camp Stewart in Virginia. He became a private in Company E of the 106th Engineers, and sailed for France on September 17, 1918. He was promoted to private first class on February 1, and to corporal on June 4, 1919. He was back in the United States by July 5, and was honorably discharged at Camp Custer on July 12, 1919. Sophie was born in the Polish section of Russia in 1902, was brought to the United States in 1905, became a naturalized citizen in 1919, and married Thomas later in the same year. She gave birth to Henrietta about 1923. In 1928 Thomas characterized the Hoffman Photo Studios as the two largest and well established studios in Detroit. 1466 East Canfield Avenue was between Russell and Riopelle, and 5456 Chene was between Kirby and Ferry Avenue. He seems to have become the semi-official photographer of the Rumanian Orthodox Church in Detroit and of its congregation.

Lula Minerva (usually Lulu) Cutler was born at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, to parents from New York, the daughter of James B. and Sarah Cutler. She married Dennis at Escanaba on July 19, 1889. " Hogan, Escanaba, Mich. " was printed below the images on cabinet photographs: one of two men and a boy driving a horse drawn wagon on a rough rocky road adjacent to a rail line, and another of four men with a horse drawn wagon and two bicycles on a smooth road beside a pile of large chunks of fire wood. Dennis enlisted at Escanaba on May 17, 1898, as a private in Company L of the 34th Michigan Infantry. He was discharged from the army at Marquette on November 24, 1898. Lulu gave birth to Violet May Hogan in Wisconsin on April 9, 1901, and to Dennis John Hogan in California on January 17, 1916. The elder Dennis was drawing a disability pension of fifty dollars per month when he was admitted to the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Sawtelle, California, on July 27, 1931. Lulu died in Los Angeles on November 3, 1947. Dennis died at Long Beach, California, on May 7, 1963. |         | 2 31 44 14 ttt 222 44 222 33 |

Frederick was born at Granby, Connecticut, on April 26, 1843, youngest of the four children of Lewis and Abigail Lovinia (Galpin) Holcomb. Eliza was born in New York State about 1850. She was married to Frederick by 1870, when they were living with his parents. Frederick's partner in 1872 was the experienced photographer, Lyman G. Bigelow. Bigelow & Holcomb produced a series of at least sixteen stereo views of the Great Union Fair in Grand Rapids, including views of the crowd in the grand stand and around the race track, and one with canning jars in the foreground and a seven tiered table of apples in the background. Eliza was left a widow when Fred died at Grand Rapids on January 18, 1890.

His parents came from New York, and George was born in Michigan in 1834, last of the three sons of Alanson and Nancy Holcomb. He may have married a young lady named Cornelia who was born in Michigan about 1843, and tried farming for a while about 1870 down in Livingston County, Illinois. He simultaneously maintained his own gallery in Union City and the partnership with Dwight I. Corwin in Vicksburg. He was divorced by 1880, and was boarding in Union City with 30-year-old Mrs. Luellah Robinson and her two daughters. He had two galleries at Union City in 1882, one on the east side of Broadway five doors north of Hammond Street, and the other in his home at the northwest corner of Ellen Street and Broadway. The George W. Holcomb that served in Company E of the First Michigan Engineers & Mechanics during the Civil War was not the photographer.

Ralph was born in Michigan to a mother from Vermont on January 12, 1879. Her father came from Connecticut and Florence E. (sometimes Etta) was born in Michigan to a mother from Pennsylvania in 1881. She married Ralph about 1901 and their children were born in Michigan: Kenneth in 1902 and Marian in 1913. Ralph's sale of the St. Louis gallery to Leonard G. Whittaker was reported in the spring of 1904. The gazetteer listings for 1907, 1909, 1911, 1913 and 1915 were for R. C. Halcomb, but "HOLCOMB STUDIO" was lettered on a sign in a 1907 photograph of Sumner and the surname was Holcomb in all other records. Note that Florence was enumerated as the photographer in 1910.

Census records tended to favor the surname Holcomb, but Holcombe appears on all Detroit records and photo mounts. Burton was born in New York State in November of 1856, second of the four children of James E. and Emily (Shultz) Holcomb. His younger brother failed to survive, leaving Burton with two sisters. His father was a merchant in New York State and a realtor at Cleveland, Ohio, until he moved in 1884 to Wolverine, Michigan, where he acquired substantial property and was elected to the Michigan Senate. Sophia was born in Michigan to parents from New York in November of 1874, and she married Burton in 1890 or 1891. Their daughter Doris was born here in February of 1897. The opening of the Holcombe & Alvord gallery was reported in February of 1884, and by July they were advertising nationally for a good printer and toner. The annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America was held at Cincinnati in August of 1884, and "Two Detroit photographers, Mr. B. J. Holcomb and Mr. C. H. Smith, made the journey of about 260 miles from that city to Cincinnati on their bicycles, in three days. Part of the route they found picturesque but quite hilly. Their return trip was mapped out by a different route from the one traversed to the convention. These gentlemen gave some clever exhibitions in front of the Music Hall of fancy riding...." In June of 1885, Burton was reportedly planning to make the journey from Detroit to the PA of A convention at Buffalo, New York, on his trusty bicycle. Holcombe & Alvord advertised widely in July of 1885 for "A first-class printer and retoucher; one that can operate, if required, preferred. Must be steady and reliable. To a good man we will give permanent employment and a good salary. Send samples of work with photograph of self. State salary wanted and full particulars. Don't answer unless you can do first-class printing and retouching...." Some of the employees of Holcombe & Alvord were: clerk Miss Ina S. Cowan in 1884; photo printer or art printer Edward J. Metzen in 1884 and 1885; photo printers W. Henry Boylan and George I. Hedges in 1886; clerk Miss Frances A. Hatmaker and retoucher Miss Jessie M. Withers in 1886. Burton retained photographer Jessie Withers in 1887; clerk Frances Hatmaker and photographer George Hedges in 1887 and 1888, and added photo printer Frederick Kogelschatz in 1888. Holcombe & Metzen retained photo printer George Hedges in 1889 and 1890, and employed Miss Myrtle Dubbs as a retoucher in 1889 and as a clerk in 1890, as well as clerk Miss Nellie Hedges, photo printer William Manning and photographer Clarence L. Weed in 1890. From 222 Woodward Avenue, Holcombe & Metzen produced a series of views of Belle Isle numbered in the negatives from 1 to at least 16 and mounted on specially printed 5 ¼ by 8 ½ inch cards. They advertised: "Everything in the line of modern photography. Duplicates and enlargements from this negative at reduced rates." Burton employed clerk Mrs. Edna C. Hall and photo printer Charles J. H. Muhme in 1891. B. J. Holcombe & Company employed John A. Henk as a photographer in 1894 and as a photo printer in 1895, and photo printer Chester W. Peddie and clerk Katie Wittingham in 1895. Burton was identified as a Velox demonstrator in 1901. On February 9, 1903, he filed for a patent on a Photographic Developing Machine. His invention consisted of a revolving cylinder turned by a hand crank within a suitable case, both cylinder and case having a number of patentable features. Patent Number 746,632 was granted to him on December 8, 1903. He was a traveling salesman for the Eastman Kodak Company in 1905. Burton was enumerated as single in the 1910 and 1920 census records. He was boarding in 1920 with the family of Frank W. Smith, and probably was Frank's partner in a photographic studio.

Clem Clarence Holden was born at Strathroy, Ontario, on January 31, 1875, the son of Henry H. and Roxana (Haight) Holden. He was called Clem while living in 1880 with his grandparents, James and Sarah Holden, but was known as Clarence for most of the rest of his life. He became an average sized man with blue eyes and dark hair. Bertha was born in Michigan in November of 1877, she married Clarence in 1897, and they had no children. Clarence was a naturalized citizen of the United States by 1910. Something happened to Bertha, and Clarence moved to Texas. Her father came from Kentucky and Lillian was born in Texas to a mother from Arkansas in 1891. She married Clarence about 1911 and their sons were born in Texas: Lee in 1912, and Clarence in 1916.

Joseph Holgate emigrated from England and his wife, Ellen, was born in Pennsylvania. Fred was one of their five children, and he was born in Michigan on October 3, 1884. He became a tall man with brown eyes and black hair. Agnes Evans was born in Ohio in 1889, she married Fred, and their daughter Margaret and son Edwin were born in Michigan between March of 1917 and 1921. Fred was the sole proprietor of both the Johnston Studio and the Holgate Studio. Portrait and commercial photography of automobiles, machinery and furniture was offered from both studios. He advertised locally in 1919 and 1920: "Sell Your Products by PHOTOGRAPHS. Keep Your Records by PHOTOGRAPHS. Portraits by Photography made in your home. F. HOLGATE - Commercial Studio, 1544 Russell St.; Portrait Studio, 2894 E. Grand Blvd. Member Photographers' Association of America." In 1921 he advertised factory work as a specialty. The change in the Russell Street address during 1920 was due to an overall revision in the Detroit numbering system, and not to relocation. In 1927 Fred was a member of the Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit, and in 1928 he was advertising Industrial and Portrait Photos. Fred died in Michigan in January of 1964.

Francis, later called Frank, was born in Ohio about 1847, eldest of the seven or more children of William and Caroline Holly. He was a resident of Ingham County and claimed to be nineteen years old when he enlisted at Lansing in Company D of the Fourteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry on January 13, 1862. The regiment was organized at Ypsilanti and left on April 17 for St. Louis, Missouri. They joined General Grant's army at Pittsburg Landing and from May 10 to 31, 1862, took part in the siege of Corinth, Mississippi. Francis was transferred to the brigade band on September 1, 1862. The 14th captured a fort and took a large number of prisoners on November 1 at Lavergne, Tennessee, and fought on January 3, 1863, at Stone River, Tennessee. In the spring of 1863 the regiment was mounted and proceeded to kill or capture most of the guerillas that infested Tennessee, and drove the rest out of the state. Dismounted again in the spring of 1864, the 14th took part in the Atlanta campaign and made a brilliant charge on September 1 at Jonesboro, Georgia, which broke the enemy line and captured a general and his staff, four artillery pieces and 300 men. After Atlanta fell the regiment marched with Sherman to the sea, reaching Savannah on November 16, 1864. When Savannah surrendered late in December, the 14th marched through South Carolina into North Carolina and fought at Fayetteville on March 12. Francis remained with the brigade band until shortly before he was discharged at the expiration of his three year term of service at Fayetteville, North Carolina, on March 14, 1865. When he returned to Lansing from the army, he went from the train directly to the residence of Alonzo M. Cheney, which became his home until he left for Denver in 1868. Cheney regarded him as an employee for this entire period. Francis was first assessed as a Lansing photographer during June of 1865. "Photographed by Cheney & Holly, over City Book Store, Lansing, Mich." was printed on some cartes de visite. The first Mrs. Francis M. Holly gave birth to a son named Frank in 1871 or early in 1872, and she died in 1873. Twenty-year-old Miss Mary E. Cornell, known as Mollie, became the second Mrs. Holly at Denver on March 21, 1877, and gave birth to Stella at Denver on November 10, 1879. Francis led an orchestra during some of his years in Denver. When he applied for an Invalid Pension on July 21, 1890, he was 47 years old and five feet seven inches tall with a light complexion, dark hair and dark eyes, totally deaf in his left ear and with consumption resulting from the catarrh he had contracted in the army. He died from a hemorrhage at Denver on January 18, 1891. Mary died there on October 13, 1922.

Caroline was born in the state of New York about 1832. Myron Robinson Holmes was born in Michigan on April 3, 1830, fifth of the six children of Isaac C. and Dimaris (Morton) Holmes. Myron and Caroline were married about 1856, and their daughters Rosa and Violet were born in Michigan between 1857 and 1863. At North Star on August 14, 1862, Myron enlisted as a corporal in Company D of the 26th Michigan Infantry. He was mustered into the army on September 15, 1862. The regiment left Jackson the next day for Washington, D. C., where it was assigned to provost duty in Alexandria, Virginia. From April 22 to May 14, 1863, the 26th took part in the siege of Suffolk, Virginia. In several expeditions from Suffolk against the Confederates the regiment began building its splendid record. It returned to Yorktown on July 11, and then was ordered to New York City to quell the riots against the draft. The 26th joined the Army of the Potomac in October and quickly gained the reputation of being the best skirmish regiment in the army. As such, it often was selected for the hazardous position of preceding the division when contact with the Confederates was imminent. After an engagement at Mine Run, Virginia, on November 29 the regiment returned to Stevensburg. Myron died of disease at Brandy Station, Virginia, on December 10, 1863, just as the 26th was going into winter quarters. Caroline does not seem to have applied for a widow's pension, so she probably married again fairly soon.

Joseph was born at Clemont in Ohio to parents from New Jersey on April 14, 1845. He was a five foot ten inch farmer with a light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair when he enlisted at Detroit as a private in Company D of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry on July 14, 1863. The regiment took part in more than forty engagements in Tennessee and Georgia, including the Battle of Chickamauga in September of 1863 and Kilpatrick’s Raid around Atlanta in August of 1864, before Joseph was transferred to the 187th Company of the First Battalion of the Veteran Reserve Corps on March 10, 1865. He was honorably discharged at Washington, D. C., on July 31, 1865. Printed on the backs of some stereo views was: “Views of GRAND LEDGE and Vicinity. VIEWS OF EXCURSION PARTIES made on the Islands when desired. Made by the Grand Ledge Art Gallery, CARLISLE HOLMES, Photographer.” along with a flowery description of “GRAND LEDGE, The site of these romantic views...” which ended: “... Luther was born at Northfield in Washtenaw County, Michigan, on June 23, 1843, last of the nine children of Calvin and Sylvia (Maltby) Holmes. His mother and father were both natives of New York State. He was 5 feet 9½ inches tall with a light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair when he enlisted at Detroit as a private in Company A of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry on July 26, 1862. While the regiment was still in Detroit he was stricken with bilious fever on September 8. A month later at Crab Orchard, Kentucky, he was sent to a hospital at Danville, Kentucky, with chronic diarrhea. After a month in the hospital, he was able to rejoin his regiment at Nashville, Tennessee, for only two weeks before the same illness sent him to a Nashville hospital. This time, it was not until May 3, 1863, that Luther could rejoin the regiment at Murfreesboro, Tennessee. Early in October of 1863 he was sent from Chattanooga to a Nashville hospital with the same complaint. He was moved to a hospital at Louisville, Kentucky, and by March 15, 1864, his illness had progressed to pneumonia and then to tuberculosis. On April 10, 1864, he was transferred from the Fourth Cavalry to Company H of the 16th Regiment of the Veteran Relief Corps, also known as the Invalid Corps. By June he was in a hospital at Cincinnati where he stayed for a year until his discharge for disability on June 21, 1865. Mary M. Clayton was born on March 25, 1844, she married Luther on July 4, 1865, and their daughter Bina was born on August 22, 1866. They spent the rest of their lives in Grand Ledge, where five more children were born: Ben on May 14, 1875, Jay on August 10, 1877, Dot on June 24, 1882, Ray on June 9, 1884, and Veronica on November 16, 1888. Mary died on July 27, 1896. Luther and Mrs. Luella E. (Cronkite) Taylor were married on December 26, 1897, and were divorced about two years later. On August 1, 1900, Luther married 48-year-old Miss Eliza Eleanor Scott of Grand Ledge, who was born in New York about 1851. He became subject to dizzy spells due to his long-standing lung disease, and during one of these spells about 1914 he fell and fractured his hip. After that he was unable to stand or to walk without the aid of two crutches. Luther died from general senility on June 12, 1927, and burial was in Oakwood Cemetery. Eliza died at Grand Ledge on February 27, 1928.

Clement was born in Florida to French parents in 1885. He was listed under the surname Van Holsbeke through 1915, and as Clement V. Holsbeke beginning in 1914 with entries under both names in that year. In 1915 he was residing across the Detroit River in Windsor, Ontario. Effie was born in Illinois about 1886, and she married Clement about 1909. Their four sons were born between 1911 and 1918. Effie was Clement’s partner in C. V. Holsbeke & Company from 1916 until 1918, and may have been sole proprietor of the company in 1919. The residence of both Clement and Effie in 1917 and 1918 was in Elgin, Illinois. The change in the Woodward Avenue address during 1920 was due to overall revisions in the Detroit numbering system, and not to relocation. For a while in 1921, the studios at 3529 and at 2028 Woodward Avenue were open simultaneously.

Her father emigrated from Sweden and Effie was born in Illinois about 1886. She married Clement about 1909, and she gave birth to three of their four sons in Illinois: Earl in 1911, Duane in 1912, and Merle in December of 1918. She gave birth to Kenneth in Michigan in 1914. Clement and Effie were partners in C. V. Holsbeke & Company from 1916 until 1918, and Effie seems to have been sole proprietor of the company in 1919. They both were residing in 1917 and 1918 at Elgin, Illinois. Her three youngest sons were living with Effie in 1930, when Duane and Kenneth were selling daily newspapers. Effie was enumerated as married, but Clement was not to be found.

Floyd was born at Jamestown, New York, on July 24, 1893, last of the three children of George Henry Holt and Lillian Antoinette Holt, and the younger brother of Bertha E. Holt. He became a tall slender man with blue eyes and brown hair. Floyd was single when he was inducted into the army at Detroit on March 9, 1918, and was sent to the School of Aerial Photography at Rochester, New York. He was later assigned to the Ninth Photo Section in the Aviation Section of the Third Army, and transferred to Garden City, Long Island, New York. He was shipped overseas on August 16, and was promoted to corporal on September 18, 1918. Floyd returned to the United States on July 19, 1919, and was honorably discharged at Camp Sherman, Ohio, on July 30, 1919. By 1927 he had acquired a wife named Agnes, and in the early 1930s his wife was identified as Margaret L. Holt. Floyd died in Detroit on October 14, 1959.

Fred was born on January 18, 1867, at Manchester, England, and attended Victoria University there. He came to Detroit in April of 1884 and found work as a messenger for the Michigan Savings Bank. He was gradually but steadily promoted to the positions of receiving and paying teller. His wife's parents emigrated from England, Lillian was born in Michigan in April of 1869, and she married Fred in 1890. Their daughter Dorothy was born in May of 1893, and their son Frederick was born in April of 1898. Fred left the bank about 1902 to be vice president of a steel company, and remained a steel executive through 1915. After 1915 the directories often listed only his position with C. M. Hayes & Company photographic firm, but he was also an investment broker, an organizer of real estate and trust companies, and one of the organizers of the Detroit Golf Club. He moved to Birmingham about 1923, and died there suddenly on January 4, 1929, survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Silk Holt. Lillian was president and treasurer of C. M. Hayes & Company from 1929 through 1934. She was very active in community, woman suffrage and peace organizations, and earned national recognition as president of the board of trustees of Woman's Hospital in Detroit from 1908 until 1941, when Wayne University honored her with the degree of Doctor of Humanities. She was 80 years old when she died after a long illness in Woman's Hospital on February 2, 1949. Burial was in Roseland Park Cemetery.

Reimund was born in the German Duchy of Saxe-Meiningen on October 2, 1866, and immigrated in 1882 to Wisconsin where he worked in an uncle's sawmill off and on until 1889. During this period he spent some months in the woods of the Gogebic iron range, worked on a ranch in the Washington Territory, and was employed as a scaler of standing timber in Wisconsin. While in the west his head was injured when a horse fell on him, and he later experienced blackouts, hallucinations and violent urges. In the spring of 1889 Reimund began a series of stagecoach and train robberies in Wisconsin. By August he was being hunted there, so he went to the Gogebic range in Michigan. On August 26 he attempted to rob a stage near Gogebic Station, and exchanged shots with one of the passengers. Another passenger was wounded and later died from loss of blood. Reimund was arrested at Republic on August 31, stood trial for murder in Bessemer, and was convicted and sentenced to two life terms in solitary confinement on November 16, 1889. He was transported to Marquette State Prison the next day. In 1890 he obtained a knife with which he threatened a guard and held a fellow prisoner hostage. The knife was shot out of his right hand leaving him with only a thumb. He later tried starving himself to death and slitting his wrists, and in November of 1893 he was transferred to the Michigan Asylum for the Criminally Insane at Ionia. There a trepanning operation was performed on his skull and a bone fragment that had been pressing on his brain was removed. He was returned to the prison at Marquette in November of 1894, and became a model prisoner. He spent much time reading in the prison library, and soon was appointed librarian and official photographer of the prison with responsibility for taking mug shots of all new prisoners. In this era, "R. Holzhey, Photographer, Marquette, Michigan." was printed on cabinet mounts and stamped on the 7 by 9 inch mount of a 4¾ by 6½ view of the Marquette Branch Prison. He began investing in stocks with the help of the warden, and was quite successful. Governor Bliss commuted one of his life sentences in the spring of 1904, Governor Warner reduced the other from life to forty years in 1911, and Reimund was pardoned effective July 7, 1913. He had won several influential friends who helped to obtain his freedom, and one of them employed him as a cook's helper for a year. He had adopted the alias Carl Paul, and opened a Marquette photographic studio in that name in 1916. When his true identity became known, business fell off, and he moved the studio to the lands of the Huron Mountain Club. There he worked as a fishing guide and sold photographs to tourists. After a season at Yellowstone Park taking nature photos for sale to the tourists, he returned to the Huron Mountain Club as guard on the Salmon Trout River. He moved to Florida following the stock market crash of 1929, and for many years returned to the Huron Mountain Club every summer. Depressed by declining health and a month of serious illness, Reimund shot himself in the head on September 24, 1952. Cremation without services was conducted in accordance with arrangements made a month earlier by a neighbor as directed by Reimund. Please see also the entry for Carl Paul.

His father emigrated from England and David was born in Townsend Township, Ontario, to an Irish mother in August of 1843, the son of Nimrod and Mariah Honey. Diana was born about 1846 in Southwold Township, Ontario, the daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth Griffin. She married David at Iona in Elgin County, Ontario, on October 17, 1866. Their son Darley A. Honey was born in Ontario in November of 1867. Their son Stephen Rupert Honey was born in Kent County, Ontario, on April 25, 1870, and as an adult reversed the order of his given names. Their daughter Minerva Edna Honey was born at Bothwell in 1872 and died from measles one year and eight months later on July 5, 1874. Another daughter was born at Bothwell on August 18, 1874, and never was named for she died shortly after she was born. Diana died at Bothwell from consumption on October 10, 1874. Isabella was born in Scotland to English parents in February of 1846, and she married David about 1875. Their daughters Mary and Vina were born in Ontario between 1876 and 1878, and the family immigrated to the United States in 1879. Their daughter Agnes was born in Nebraska in August of 1879, and their son Leroy was born there in October of 1886. Mary was gone, but David's five other children were living with him and Isabella in 1900, though the three oldest were married but without their spouses. Agnes and Leroy still were single and living with their parents in 1910.

"J. Honey, Photographer, Grand Haven, Mich. - New Gallery, Baird's Block." was printed on some card mounts. Late in 1875 an Owosso newspaper reported that "Mr. Honey, late of Grand Haven, formerly of Fitzgibbon's celebrated art gallery, St. Louis, Mo., is fitting up the rooms over West's grocery store for a photograph gallery. Mr. Honey has put in a first class light and otherwise re-modeled the rooms, and having a long and varied experience in all branches of the photographic art, he will guarantee as good and well finished work as any made in the large cities. All negatives will be carefully and artistically retouched, and photographs finished by the new burnishing process. Will be ready for work in a few days."

Homer was born at Harbor Springs, Michigan, on October 5, 1892, the only child of Oscar J. and Harriet A. (Makley) Hood. "H. T. Hood" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of some Michigan Agricultural College freshmen being pulled into the river while engaged in a tug-of-war with some sophomores. The print was made by "F. N. BOVEE, OPTICIAN, LANSING, MICH." and the card was mailed from East Lansing in May of 1911 by A. E. Day. Homer probably graduated from Michigan Agricultural College. He was supporting his widowed mother in 1917 and 1920, and he still was single in 1930. Homer died in Los Angeles County on April 14, 1982.

She was born Mary Elizabeth Hook at Holbrook Corners in Oxford County, Ontario, on March 18, 1874, the older daughter of David and Sarah Elizabeth (Lowes) Hook, and she was called Minnie in all other records. Her sister Sarah Bell Hooker Hook was born on the family farm in North Norwich, Oxford County, Ontario, on March 18, 1878. Minnie commuted across the Detroit River to her Detroit jobs from Windsor, Ontario. Thomas Henry Sedley was born at Detroit, Michigan, on November 21, 1876, the son of Frederick William and Sarah Parthenia (Mason) Sedley, and he became a stout man with blue eyes and light brown hair. He married Minnie at Windsor in Essex County, Ontario, on December 27, 1899. Their son Carl was born in 1900, and their son Orrin was born in Detroit on May 21, 1902. Thomas was a foundry superintendent in 1918 at New Brunswick, New Jersey, while Minnie stayed in Detroit with the boys. He was managing a Plymouth foundry in 1920, and both Carl and Orrin were working in the foundry as laborers. Thomas died in Detroit on April 1, 1923. Minnie died at San Diego, California, on September 20, 1958. She probably was living with her son at the time, for Orrin died there on May 22, 1987.

William was born at Litchfield, England, on February 5, 1833. On the Isle of Wight in 1857 he married Miss Eleanor Jane Dore. They lived in Davenport near Plymouth and had seven children, six of whom lived to maturity. Soon after their last son was born in 1867, William left his family with his in-laws on the Isle of Wight and immigrated to the United States. By 1869 he had established a photographic business at Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. Three years later his business was thriving, he had built a theater called Hook's Hall, and had decided to become a naturalized citizen of the United States and to bring his family here. He returned to England for them but brought back only his sons Willy and Theo. Eighteen-year-old Theo died only a few months later. William suffered business reversals, was in debt by the time he left Chippewa Falls, and while out of touch lost all of his property there to foreclosure over the next few years. He and Willy spent most of these years in the northern Rocky Mountains. They arrived at Fort Benton, Montana, by steamboat in the summer of 1878 and traveled on into Alberta to visit Fort Walsh and Fort Macleod that autumn. They took stereo views and other photographs of the newly formed Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Indians at Forts Macleod, Walsh and Calgary the following spring. At Fort Walsh, Sitting Bull declined William's offer of $100 for posing. Son Will stayed in Montana to try his hand at mining when his father returned to the east. The views of southern Alberta were published from Chippewa Falls and from Manitou Springs. Stereographs of Michigan iron mines were produced by "W. E. Hook, Photographer and Publisher of American Scenery from Ocean to Ocean." William arrived at Manitou Springs on April 8, 1885, and worked there for Mrs. Galbreath for a few months. By August he had opened a tent studio at the foot of the burro trail up Pikes Peak. He would photograph tourists beginning the climb in the morning, and have their pictures ready when they came back down in the evening. He soon established a successful gallery next to the Barker House in Manitou Springs. He homesteaded what he called Artist's Glen part way up Pikes Peak and built a small home there, a 45-minute walk from his gallery. William returned to England for his family, and this time was successful in returning with his wife and two daughters in April of 1887. Son Will moved down from Montana in 1888, he and daughter Alice participated in the business which was selling many lantern slides, claims of family members had expanded their holdings on Pikes Peak to 800 acres, and the house had been enlarged to provide accommodations for tourists. William spent his vacations photographing other southwestern states. Though the opening of the Manitou & Pikes Peak Cog Railway increased tourism and photographic business, the tracks passed within thirty feet of the Hook home and ruined the idyllic aspects of Artist's Glen. William's claim of $15,000 in damages was ridiculed, and he received only hundreds of dollars from condemnation proceedings. The family moved to Colorado Springs in 1890. William advertised nationally early in 1897: "FOR SALE - The W. E. Hook View Co., Colorado Springs, Colorado. The negatives, which command one of the largest view businesses in the West, need only be purchased. Any portion of the working plant and rent of rooms at option of purchaser. The leasee is over sixty and wants a rest." William died at Colorado Springs in 1908.

His father came from Ohio and Bertram was born in Michigan in August of 1865, first of the four children of William Joseph Hopkins and Sarah Maria (Cornell) Hopkins. Bertha Viola Barney was born at Bloomingtondale, Michigan, on February 14, 1870, last of the two children of J. L. and Irena L. (Stansell) Barney. She married Bert in the spring of 1891, and their daughters were born in Michigan: Viola in March of 1893, Mildred in June of 1895, and November of 1896. Their son Theodore was born at South Haven on March 17, 1901. Bert's partners in South Haven were David C. Moyer (a South Haven photographer from 1888 until 1919) and George F. Gates, who came to South Haven from Chicago about 1901. The street scenes and views of public buildings in Biographical Sketches of South Haven were reproduced from photographs by Moyer & Hopkins, as were many of the illustrations in an 1898 directory of South Haven. It was suggested in 1898 that residents of South Haven should "... Watch for Hopkins with his camera on his wheel, he will make pictures for you in any part of the state on short notice...." Charles was born in February of 1822 in Vermont to a mother from Massachusetts, the son of E. A. and Harriet Hopkins. Clarissa was born in New York State in 1830, and she married Charles in 1850. Their children were born in New York: James in 1851, Sarah Francilia (later Frank or Franc) in September of 1853, and Minnie in 1861. Charles was awarded a premium of $3.00 for the collection of oil and water colored photographs which he exhibited in October of 1866 at the State Fair in Adrian. He advertised in 1867: "... Having fitted up a first-class Studio and Photograph Gallery, I am prepared to receive orders for work from all parts of the State. I have had several seasons of successful experience at Saratoga, and know that I can furnish OIL PORTRAITS SECOND TO NONE IN THE COUNTRY. "Halstead & Hopkins, Perry, Bell Oak, Fitchburg and Munith." was printed on the front of some cabinet mounts. John R. Halstead was the senior member of this partnership and continued his photographic career for a decade. "Luther Hopkins was home Sunday and Monday from Fitchburg where they are taking pictures at the present time. They go to Munith in the near future." was noted by the Perry World on August 12, 1892.

Melvin was born at Crump, Missouri, on August 27, 1892, fifth of the seven children of William J. and Mary S. Hopkins. The change in the Gratiot Avenue address during 1920 was due to overall revisions in the Detroit numbering system rather than to relocation. Mrs. Lula May was Melvin's partner in the Hopkins Studio from 1920 until 1923. Elizabeth was born in Wisconsin in 1892 or early in 1893, she married Melvin about 1925, and their daughter Mildred was born in Detroit in December of 1926.

His father emigrated from England in 1857 and Richard was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio on September 7, 1874, last of the four sons of William S. and Jane Hopkins. He became a medium sized man with gray eyes, and he enrolled in the Illinois College of Photography from Michigan. By 1918 his hair was gray and his nearest relative was a brother, James C. Hopkins, living elsewhere in Traverse City. He was living alone in 1910 and 1920. Richard was sole proprietor of Hopkins' Photo Supply House, which advertised as "Photographers, Camera Supplies, Finishing for Amateur Photographers a Specialty." In 1923 Hopkins' Photo Supply House was classified under Post Cards and Souvenirs and offered "Cameras, Photo Supplies & Souvenirs. Finishing for Amateurs a Specialty. 215 E. Front." From 1925 through 1935 Richard was proprietor of the Hopkins Camera and Gift Shop at 219 East Front Street in Traverse City. In 1930 he was sharing his home with his sixteen-year-old nephew, B. L. Hopkins, and employing him as a photographic apprentice. Richard was married for the first time on April 12, 1938, to a lady named Leona Hale. He died at Traverse City on August 29, 1951, and burial was in Oakwood Cemetery.

His father came from New York and William was born to an Irish mother in September of 1869 at Holland, Michigan, last of the eight known children of William L. and Kate Hopkins. He learned his trade with Mr. Munroe in St. Louis, Missouri. His original gallery in Holland was on the ground floor near his later location in Kanter's Block. An 1892 photographic periodical commented upon the photos sent in by William: "... (In) his cabinet portraits on solio and American aristo ... Mr. Hopkins shows himself master of the situation in posing and lighting." William advertised in 1894: "All Kinds of Photographic Work Done." By 1896 he was specializing in platino work and doing landscapes, interior and exterior views as well as portraits in crayon, water colors, pastel and India ink. Most of the cuts for the 25th anniversary edition of the local newspaper were made from his photographs. That he would be moving from Zeeland to Holland was reported in July of 1899. William married, but by 1900 he was a widower with a daughter named Lillian born in January of 1895.

Charles was born into a Yiddish-speaking family in Russia on March 18, 1869, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hopp. Sophia was born in Canada to Russian parents in 1876, and she married Charles about 1892. Their sons were born in Illinois: Jack in September of 1893, and Clemens in July of 1899. Their daughter Pauline was born in Michigan about 1906. Charles was the sole proprietor of the Miniature Photo Jewelry Company. Charles Hopp & Company manufactured photo novelties, photo buttons and photo jewelry in 1901, and offered photo novelties for at least seven more years. Charles became a naturalized citizen of the United States on October 17, 1904. Charles Hopp & Company seems to have employed W. F. Jackson for a while in 1906. "C. HOPP & CO., 210 Woodward Ave., Detroit." was printed with many variations on the post card backs of studio portraits dated between 1907 and 1913. About 1917 the Liggett Building ran from 208 to 214 Woodward Avenue at the northeast corner of Grand River Avenue, and from signs on the building it appears that Charles Hopp & Company occupied the second and third floors at 210. Charles usually was the sole proprietor of the business, but in 1915 and 1916 his son Jack was a partner in Charles Hopp & Company. Charles applied for a passport in May of 1922, with plans of taking his wife and daughter to visit France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. They expected to leave New York on the S. S. Berengaria on June 20, and to return within six months. Their plans may not have materialized, for no record of a return voyage has been found. The company had two studios open simultaneously in 1925. Charles retired in 1928, and was 72 years old at the time of his death in Harper Hospital on June 23, 1941. He was described as a widely known portrait photographer. Services were held at Temple Beth El.

Jack was born at Chicago, Illinois, on September 1, 1893, eldest of the three children of Charles and Sophia Hopp. He became a tall slender man with brown eyes and black hair. He was single when he enlisted in the regular army at Camp Morrison, Virginia, on January 15 or 25, 1918. He was assigned to the 206th Aero Construction Squadron and was sent on February 1 to Arcadia, Florida, where he was promoted to sergeant on March 1. He was transferred to the 502nd Aero Construction Squadron at Langley Field, Virginia, on July 1, and was promoted to sergeant first class on August 6, 1918. He was transferred on October 1 to Brindley Field on Long Island, New York. Jack was sent for demobilization to Air Service Depot Number Two at Mineola, Long Island, and there was honorably discharged on January 22, 1919. He was known as John C. Hopp after 1921. Berniece was born in Michigan in 1901 or 1902, married Jack about 1924, and gave birth to Lois in December of 1927 and to John in April of 1930.

Otto was born in Michigan to parents from the Hanover region of Germany in October of 1867, sixth of the eight known children of Frederick and Christina Hoppe. Another Christina (later Christine) was born in Michigan in March of 1867 to parents who also came from the Hanover region of Germany. She married Otto in 1896. By 1910 Christine was an inmate in the Eastern Michigan Asylum at Pontiac, and she still was a patient there in 1920 when the institution was called the Pontiac State Hospital. She was not one of the many inmates that were given work assignments. "Schmidt & Hoppe" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of the University of Michigan astronomical observatory, while "MAY 31, 1911" was stamped on the back of the card. Ernest J. Schmidt had been a professional photographer for a year when he formed the partnership with Otto. "Hoppe Photo" was lettered on the negatives of postal photographs of a church interior, of Barton Dam near Ann Arbor and of a hotel on Portage Lake. "O. F. HOPPE, 619 E. LIBERTY ST., ANN ARBOR, MICH." was printed on some of the post card backs. Otto advertised "Lantern Slides and Enlargements, Flashlights and Framing, Amateur Supplies" in 1912. His ads in 1916 encouraged patrons to "Strengthen Old Friendships with a new portrait – the gift that exacts nothing in return, yet has a value that can only be estimated in kindly thoughtfulness. Make the appointment today."

His father came from Ohio and Charles was born to a mother from Pennsylvania on a farm in Barry County, Michigan, on October 25, 1868, second of the four children of Moses and Phebe A. (Wertman) Horn. He and Miss Grace M. Chandler were married at Cedar Creek, Michigan, on October 6, 1899. His sale of the Battle Creek gallery to O. E. Schell was reported in March of 1904. "HORN" was lettered on the negatives of postal photographs along with legends such as "Alma College Foot Ball Team 1907." His partner in Horn & Horn and in the Horn Studio and Art Shop in 1913 was Mrs. Grace Chandler Horn. In 1913 they supplemented photography with "... Framing, Indian Art Baskets and Gift Books, Mirrors and Trays Made to Order." About 1914 Charles and Grace seem to have gone their separate ways, and they were divorced on August 3, 1915. From 1915 on Charles was sole proprietor of the Horn Studio and Art Shop and offered "Photography, Enlarging and Framing, Fancy Post Cards, Booklets and Novelties for Xmas, Easter, &c...." He soon substituted Season's Greeting Cards for the Fancy Post Cards, and in 1930 replaced enlarging with a lending library. The change in address during 1920 was due to overall revisions in the Detroit numbering system rather than to relocation. Dora E. Winter was born in Canada in 1898, the daughter of Daniel H. and Elizabeth Winter. The family immigrated in 1905, and Dora married Charles in 1918. She gave birth to Charles in July of 1919, and to James and Phillis between 1921 and 1925. Charles was 79 years old when he died in Detroit on March 23, 1948, survived by his wife, his daughter and three sons. Burial was in Evergreen Cemetery.

Grace was born on February 28, 1879, probably at Cloverdale, Michigan. She was third of the four children of Martin D. and Jane A. (Hall) Chandler. She married Charles E. Horn on October 6, 1899. Grace purchased the Petoskey studio from Edward E. Bowman in November of 1907, and soon was making photographs of the Indians participating in the Hiawatha play at Wa Ya Ga Mug. She sold the studio to Weems & Beardsley in November of 1909 and bought it back from them in October of 1910. Charles E. Horn was her partner in Horn & Horn and in the Horn Studio and Art Shop. In 1913 their range of products included photography, "... Framing, Indian Art Baskets and Gift Books, Mirrors and Trays Made to Order." In Petoskey Grace advertised "The Hiawatha Pictures and Northern Michigan Nature Studies, Baskets, Framing and Art Goods." Printed on the post card backs of such photographs as one of a man in a feathered headdress and buckskins paddling a birch bark canoe and another of a lovely Native American maiden was: "THE HIAWATHA PLAYERS FROM WA YA GA MUG, MICH. PHOTO BY GRACE CHANDLER HORN, PETOSKEY, MICH. COPYRIGHT." Some of her photographs are held by the Petoskey Historical Museum. The illustrations in the Player's Edition of Longfellow's The Song of Hiawatha published in 1911 by Rand, McNally & Company, and The Indian Play "Hiawatha" in the Land of the Ojibways, Wa-Ya-Ga-Mug published in 1912 by the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railway, were reproduced from photographs by Grace. "FROM THE COLLECTION OF INDIAN AND NATURE PICTURES BY GRACE CHANDLER HORN, AND SOLD, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, AT HER STUDIOS, HARBOR SPRINGS AND PETOSKEY, MICHIGAN. J. HOMER DE PUE, Manager." was printed on the labels affixed to the back of some of her larger prints. Grace was divorced from Charles on August 3, 1915, and she married James H. De Pue in Grand Rapids on March 30, 1917. About 1920 she traveled to Mexico and Puerto Rico. She was associated at Flint in 1922 with a Dr. Albert in a Hiawatha Revival and a studio for producing classical films. She and De Pue were divorced on September 9, 1922. She later reverted to her maiden name, so please see also the entry for Miss Grace M. Chandler.

Lavern was born at Malcolm, Nebraska, to a mother from Minnesota on May 6, 1884, first of the seven children of Theodore M. and Eva Lillian (Brunson) Horn. He had brown eyes and dark hair. His father was a painter, and Lavern made painting his vocation for a while. His first marriage was to Eleanor Boyle, but by 1911 Lavern was a widower. Effie Leona Dakin was born in Michigan in 1888, the daughter of Frank and Oar (Funsler) Dakin. She married a man named Freer but was a widow when she married Lavern at Windsor, Ontario, on May 10, 1911. Their daughter Ila was born in 1916 or early in 1917. Lavern died on June 10, 1935.

William was arrested in Cleveland, Ohio, late in June of 1887 on the charge of burglarizing a photograph gallery in Toledo. When his room at Toledo was searched, property was found which had been stolen from the studio of James G. Hill at 49 Monroe Avenue in Detroit on the night of June 5. This included a camera box and case valued at $80.00, a Dallmeyer lens valued at $164.00, a cornet worth $15.00 and photographs valued at $7.30. William was accused of committing similar burglaries at Cincinnati, Ohio, and Paducah, Kentucky. He was in custody at Toledo, and his wife had been unable to get help from Alma in securing his release, though he was considered to have been living a respectable life there. A Detroit warrant for breaking and entering in the night time had been sworn out for service on William if the Toledo authorities did not have a good case against him.

David was born in Pennsylvania to parents from New York in 1858, second of the six children of Columbus and Emeline Ada (Sweet) Horton. His parents had five sons born in New York and Pennsylvania between 1853 and 1867, the last two as twins, and their daughter Ada was born in Michigan in 1870. David advertised "Photo Enlargements and Crayon Work; Picture Framing to Order" from Gobleville in 1892. David probably was the proprietor of The Horton View Company at Glendale about 1900. "Taken Aug 28th 1915 by D. Horton, Glendale, Mich" was written on the post card back of a photographic portrait of an aged woman. David had been married but was divorced by 1920, when he was living with the family of his sister Ada and her husband, Hiram A. Smith.

Gilbert was born in Michigan to parents from New York in January of 1853, second of the five children of William D. and Catherine S. Horton. Having fitted up a new and convenient gallery where good pictures could be had at reasonable prices, Gilbert advertised in the regional newspaper: "For Photographs Go To G. D. HORTON'S New Photograph Gallery, Au Sable, Mich. In consequence of the daily increase of accidents by boats and steam mills, the people are earnestly requested to call at once, at Horton's new Photograph Gallery and have their portraits taken, that some memento of departed friends may be left to sorrowing survivors. Au Sable, March 11, 1875." He continued to use this advertisement throughout the year. He sold the gallery opposite the Presbyterian church to Alexander J. Lawson in August of 1876. Gilbert advertised from Pendleton: "... All styles of pictures taken. My work is my reference. I keep in stock the cheapest, the best, and the largest assortment of picture frames. Call and examine." The Palace Floating Gallery was operated around Tacoma and Snohomish, Washington, by a G. D. Horton, almost assuredly Gilbert. Margaret was born in Indiana to parents from Ohio in December of 1855, and she married Gilbert about 1889. Their daughters were born in Washington: Cora in July of 1890, and Ella in January of 1894. Gilbert and Margaret were sharing their home with his 93-year-old mother in 1920, and they still were together in 1930.

Orsamus was born on his father's farm eighteen miles east of Buffalo at Alexander, New York, on May 12, 1823. He earned his first dollar by raising potatoes in the corners of their zigzag rail fences, and spent it seeing the annual general muster of the militia. Mary was born in New York State in 1822, and by 1850 she was married to Orsamus. They were married for over three decades and never had children. Orsamus came to Grand Rapids from New York State in August of 1852, opened operating rooms in a wooden building opposite the head of Waterloo Street, and was the first in Grand Rapids to fit up a skylight for photography. He was the only exhibitor of daguerreotypes at the Kent County Fair in the fall of 1854. Horton & Keeney have been credited with introducing the glass negative and the paper photographic print in Grand Rapids. In 1865 Orsamus was offering to make photographic copies and enlargements of daguerreotypes and ambrotypes, and pointing out his large assortment of gilt and rosewood frames. He ran a full-page advertisement in 1870: "PHOTOGRAPHING. The undersigned would express his thanks to the multitude of friends who have given him a share of their patronage during the last eighteen years, and extends a cordial invitation to all to call on him at his NEW ART GALLERY, in Leonard's Block, MONROE STREET. Having adopted ALL THE LATEST IMPROVEMENTS in arrangement of Light and other fixtures in the Operating Department, together with his LONG EXPERIENCE IN THE BUSINESS, he feels confident of producing WORK WHICH CANNOT BE EXCELLED in clearness of detail and beauty of tone, either East or West. PICTURES MADE FROM THE SMALLEST TO LIFE SIZE. Old pictures copied and enlarged to any size desired. A good assortment of frames always on hand. Remember the place, HORTON'S NEW ART GALLERY, Leonard's Block, 17 Foot of Monroe Street, 17, Sign of the Big Camera, GRAND RAPIDS. O. W. HORTON, Artist." In 1872 he claimed to have the most pleasant Photograph Parlors in the city, which were described as a large, handsome and elegantly furnished suite of rooms in Leonard's Block over the YMCA rooms. At this time he called himself a practical photographer, guaranteed his work and continued to specialize in copying, enlarging and coloring in India ink, oil or water colors. The NPA monogram of the National Photographic Association was printed on some of his card photograph mounts. In 1873 and 1874 his establishment was a Photograph and Gem Gallery, where old pictures could be enlarged and finished in ink. He was among the first to photograph the furniture industry, and made stereoscopic views of outstanding examples of furniture design and carving. He also made stereo views of the streets of Grand Rapids decorated with an elaborate arch and much bunting for the Centennial Celebration in 1876. Orsamus produced at least 25 views of various landmarks in the city at this time. He continued to emphasize enlarging and coloring photographs in his advertising throughout the 1870s. Homer L. Carter apprenticed to Orsamus in 1871 and was a photographer for him two years later. Orsamus employed as photographers Frank C. Bracy in 1872, Abraham DeWindt in 1873 and 1874, Reuben L. Andrew in 1875, and both DeWindt and Andrew in 1878. He began manufacturing a patent spring bed, mattresses and couches in 1875 while continuing his photography business. Knowles & Horton were portrait artists in 1888, and in the 1890s Orsamus still was doing a thrifty business in the enlarging of portraits and was making some fine pictures. His wife Mary seems to have died some time between 1880 and 1894. Hanna Amanda Hillis was born in Ohio in November of 1841, and she was a widow when she married Orsamus in the spring of 1895. Orsamus was 93 years old when he died at Grand Rapids on December 13, 1916. Amanda was sharing her Grand Rapids home in 1920 with her son, Harry Hillis.

John was born in Michigan to German parents in November of 1864, last of the two children of Simon and Mary Hoschna. His sister Mary was born two years earlier. His father often was identified as a farmer or a milliner, but he was a saloon keeper from 1879 through 1881. In the census report for 1880, his father was a farmer and his mother was the saloon keeper. Apparently fifteen-year-old bar tenders were acceptable in 1880. John died at the Detroit home of his parents on July 25, 1887.

Bessie had Scotch and Irish ancestors and was born in Canada in 1868. She was brought across the border in 1870, and she married the photographer Collin A. Hoskins about 1884. She gave birth to five children, three of whom lived to maturity. They were born in Michigan: Ethel in October of 1885, Mima in April of 1889, and Sherman in April of 1891. Both Collin and Bessie were identified as photographers and as owners of the studio in 1910, when they were employing his sister, Mrs. Hilda D. Goodwin, as an assistant photographer. During the following decades, Bessie undoubtedly played a greater part in the photography business than is indicated in the available records. The Hoskins Studio at 703 Huron Avenue was managed by others from 1921 through 1926, but by 1930 Collin had returned to the job. Bessie was a widow by 1933, when she was managing the studio. 1

HOSKINS, CENTRAL ART GALLERY. Copying and Enlarging a Specialty.... Pictures and Picture Frames, a choice collection always on hand. Chromos of latest designs a specialty." At some time his Cheboygan gallery was at 92 ½ Main Street. W. Henry Buzzard was his associate in the Tunnel City Studio as well as in Buzzard & Hoskins. Collin succeeded his brother Fernando C. Hoskins in the Wesson Avenue studio, and was in turn succeeded by Fernando. His first name was sometimes listed as Collins after 1900, one of his Port Huron locations was over the First National Bank, and he produced post card photographs from 703 Huron Avenue. Both Collin and his wife, Bessie, were identified as photographers and owners of the studio in 1910, when they were employing his sister, Mrs. Hilda D. Goodwin, as an assistant photographer. C. A. Hoskins & Son were proprietors of a Port Huron billiard hall and cigar stand in 1911. Collin advertised in 1913: "All work done by the latest methods." The Hoskins Studio at 703 Huron Avenue was being managed in 1921 and 1922 by James A. Butler, in 1923 and 1924 by Frank L. Easter, in 1926 by F. P. Fernando was born in Canada in January of 1859, eldest of the four known children of Alexander and Dorca E. (Green) Hoskins. He immigrated to the United States in 1880 with his brothers William and Collin. Lillian was born in Wisconsin to parents from Vermont in October of 1861, and she married Fernando about 1880. Their son Earl was born in Wisconsin on August 18, 1884, and their other children were born in Michigan: Gertrude on November 25, 1882, Katie in March of 1888, Franklin on August 9, 1893, Laura on January 5, 1896, and Eliza on August 24, 1902. Fernando's sale of the Cheboygan gallery to Avery B. Crandall was reported in April of 1898. He succeeded Frederick C. Lutge in the studio on Wesson Avenue at the corner of Buchanan Street late in 1899 or early in 1900, and had "Lutge's Art Gallery" printed on some of his cabinet mounts. Hoskins and Lutge were each separately listed as photographers at 589 Wesson Avenue in 1903. "F. C. HOSKINS, PONTIAC, MICH." was blind embossed into the corner of studio portraits with post card backs. Fernando was a naturalized citizen of the United States by 1910, and he was enumerated as a portrait photographer in 1930.

Richardson was born in New York State in 1829 or early in 1830. John H. Benson had been running a similar local advertisement in his own name for three months before it changed to: "For the Finest PHOTOGRAPHS, go to Benson & Hough's NEW GALLERY over Norton & Harshaw's Hardware Store. The finest rooms in the State of Michigan." and ran for several months in the summer and fall of 1867. Richardson advertised in 1869: "Pictures copied and enlarged. Special attention given to children. Picture Frames, Cards & Tassels for sale. All work done to please." Eunice Burnette Hilton, known as Nettie, was born in Michigan to parents from New York in the summer of 1847, second of the five children of Norton and Fidelia Hilton. She married Richardson at Pontiac on November 18, 1869. The Houghs moved to a farm near Eddy, a small town southwest of Waco in McLennan County, Texas. Richardson died there prior to 1891 and was buried on the farm. Nettie died at Waco about 1924.

His father came from Virginia and his mother, Mrs. Susan Houston, came from Kentucky, and Edgar was born in 1 Detroit in March of 1868. He had an older sister born in Chicago about 1857, and two older brothers and a younger 1 brother and sister who were born in Detroit between 1861 and 1875. Edgar's name often was spelled Huston, 1 d particularly in the 1880s, and the designation (col'd) appeared after his name in about one third of the listings. In a list d 2 of African American men who had been with the same employer for more than five years, a newspaper published in 2
May of 1888 noted that Edgar had been a printer in Randall's Photograph Gallery for some time and was exceedingly 2 well thought of. Martha (sometimes Mattie) was born in Canada in December of 1871, and she married Edgar about 2 1 1892. Their children were born in Detroit: Edgar in November of 1893, and Mildred in September of 1899. Martha 1

Artin was born into an Armenian family in Turkey on April 16, 1878. He married before he emigrated from Turkey and traveled on the S. S. Saxonia to Boston in January of 1909. He moved swiftly through the United States to Canada, where he spent the next year and a half. His examination as he crossed from Canada into Niagara Falls, New York, on July 5, 1910, revealed that he was 5 feet 5½ inches tall with a fair complexion, brown hair and brown eyes, and after paying for the ticket to his destination he was carrying one hundred dollars. At this time his nearest relative was his wife back in Turkey. When he registered for the draft in 1918 he was described as tall and slender, and his nearest relative was Sarkis Astoorian in Detroit. Artin was arrested on September 10, 1923, and charged with doing the photographic work on counterfeit twenty dollar Federal Reserve notes that closely resembled bona fide currency. Federal officers also arrested three others including Tarian Sirbu, said to be the master mind of the group and the producer of linen paper with a silk fiber running through it that matched the genuine bank note paper almost perfectly. Artin pleaded not guilty on arraignment, and was held in lieu of $200,000 bail. Apparently he was exonerated. By 1930 he was widowed and his 25-year-old daughter, Teriz, was sharing his home and handling the clerical work of his photographic business. He had reached the age of 86 by the time of his death in Detroit on July 24, 1964.

Manistique PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1888-1891 m

Oliver was born in New York State in 1865 or early in 1866, fifth of the ten children of Oliver B. and Leafy M. Howard. "HOWARD, Artist. All Negatives Preserved. Duplicates furnished at Reasonable Rates." was stamped on the backs of stereo views of Manistique churches and homes, and of the Big Spring northwest of Manistique. "Ollie Howard" was printed on some of his cabinet mounts, while "New Gallery" was printed on others. "Howard, New Gallery, Manistique, Mich." was printed beneath the image on heavy buff ten by eight inch mounts with beveled and gilded edges. Note that his brothers Archie and Charles were Manistique photographers a decade later. Only five of the ten siblings in the Howard family were living in 1900, and probably Oliver was not one of them.

Carson was born in Ontario in 1849 or early in 1850. Emily F. Campbell was born there at about the same time, and she married Carson in the mid 1870s. The only Ontario birth registered with them as parents was their daughter Minnie Grace Howell at Ingersoll on May 3, 1879. Apparently Minnie lived less than a year. Annie Howell was born at Hamilton, Ontario, on April 1, 1877, the illegitimate daughter of another Annie Howell. The elder Annie may have been a relative of Carson. He and Emily were raising a three-year-old girl named Annie as their daughter in 1880. The formal opening of Howell & Reilay's Metropolitan Gallery in Lansing was held on November 6, 1883. They advertised all kinds of photographic work and the finest stock of picture moulding ever brought to Lansing. Their club rate pictures included cabinet photos for two dollars per dozen. They made a specialty of life size crayon portraits and guaranteed satisfaction. This advertisement appeared in 1885: "Must be Destroyed. All photographic negatives in our possession made by Kittle & Burdick will be destroyed to make room for new ones. Any person having a negative with us by ordering at once can have a dozen cabinet photos of the same for $2, or will sell the negative for $1. Pictures guaranteed to be first class in every respect. T. H. Powe, Photographic Artist. C. M. Howell, General Manager." The relationship between Howell and Powe was clarified by a Saginaw publication in 1887: "Powe & Howell ... was established three years ago ... Mr. Powe taking charge of his gallery at Muskegon, and Mr. Howell of the studio in this city. Mr. Howell is a highly skilled operator of sixteen years experience, and was several years with Howland, of Cincinnati, as head operator. The studio here is eligibly located on the second floor.... In addition to cabinets, life-size and commercial work is done in the highest style of the art...." The prominent initials "T.H.P." and "C. M. Howell, operator and manager, East Saginaw; T. H. Powe, proprietor, Muskegon, Mich." were printed on some cabinet mounts. Otto Opperman was a photographer at East Saginaw for Powe & Howell in 1887. They lowered their price for cabinet photographs to $2.00 per dozen, and in January of 1888 announced that the reduction would "... continue until the 20th ... as an accommodation to the hundreds of people who came to the gallery during the past month and were unable to secure a sitting, owing to the rush of business then on hand from early morn until late at night."

Ethan was born in Michigan in September of 1896, third of the four children of William H. and Sarah Mills (Burgess) Howell. His grandparents all came to Michigan from New York. No Draft Registration record could be found for Ethan, suggesting that he was in the military service during World War I. Her father emigrated from Germany and Catherine was born in Missouri in 1896. She married Ethan about 1919, and their sons were born in Michigan: Carl about 1921, and Earl in October of 1927. Though Catherine was listed in Detroit as Ethan's widow in 1936, Ethan was not listed in the Detroit Death Index.

Jacob was born in Michigan to parents from New York in October of 1851, eldest of the four children of Jacob B. and Lydia M. Howell. In 1880 he and two siblings were living with their widowed mother. Between March of 1881 and November of 1884 Jacob applied for and was granted six patents on two different Vehicle Axles, a Side Bar Carriage, a pair of Two-Wheeled Vehicles and a Vehicle Spring. Jennie was born in New York State in December of 1854, and she married Jacob about 1882. "... Photographer and Photo Engravings" was printed on Jacob's cabinet mounts and stamped on the back of the 10 by 12 inch mounts of photos, including street scenes. His real estate office and the photographic studio of his wife, Mrs. Jennie L. Howell, were both at 106 East Main Street in 1900. Jacob died of Bright's disease on May 22, 1903, at the age of 51.

James was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio on September 12, 1871, fifth of the six children of James Claude Howell and Lucretia Jane (Reynolds) Howell. Her father came from New York and Clara was born in Wisconsin in June of 1870. She married James about 1894 and their children were born in Michigan: Vern on September 12, 1896, Ella Mae in March of 1899, Mildred on September 7, 1902, Theo on January 15, 1906, and Cecil on October 26, 1908. "J W HOWELL BRINTON MICH" was printed in purple ink on a cabinet mount below a photograph of a couple and their seven children posed outside their rural home. By 1920 James was a widower. Cyrena Pearl Sampsel (usually Pearl) was born in Michigan to parents from Ohio on January 17, 1888. Her first marriage was to Frank Ferner, who died in 1918. When she married James at Mount Pleasant on April 15, 1924, Pearl brought along three daughters. They were born in Michigan: Helen on August 4, 1913, Bertha on April 28, 1915, and Rosalia on November 23, 1917. Pearl and James had two sons born in Michigan: Jonathan on November 19, 1925, and James on January 20, 1928. James died on August 14, 1938, and was buried at St. Louis, Michigan. Pearl lived until August 6, 1968. Please see also the entry for William Howell.

Jennie was born in New York State in December of 1854, third of the four children of Hazard W. and Catherine Titus. She married Jacob Howell in 1882 or 1883, and probably worked in his studio between 1894 and 1897. They had no children, but were sharing their home in 1900 with two nieces and a nephew between seven and twelve years of age. She succeeded Everett E. Thayer in 1900, only a couple of years after he acquired the Main Street studio from Hugh A. Steele. Jennie specialized in children's portraiture about 1902, and she became a widow in May of 1903. She was living with a widowed niece in 1920, and was sharing her home with a sister and three younger relatives in 1930. Jennie still was working in her nineties.

Howell, William

A regional newspaper noted in June of 1899 that Will had been in Weidman negotiating for a lot on which to erect a photograph gallery. The paper reported later that the six month old daughter of Mr. & Mrs. William Howell of Brinton had died on January 5, 1901. George was born in Canada to English parents on May 12, 1838. Sarah Jane Ann Enos (Jennie in 1880 and later) was born on May 2, 1841, probably at Niagara Falls, New York. They married on May 18, 1861. George was 5 feet 10½ inches tall with a fair complexion, blue eyes and brown hair, and worked as a carpenter before he entered the army. He enlisted as a sergeant in Company B of the 151st New York Infantry on September 3, 1862. The regiment left Camp Church at Lockport on October 22, was armed at Elmira, and spent the winter at Baltimore. George was reduced in rank to private on January 31, 1863. Sarah gave birth to George, Junior, on April 5, 1863, apparently with difficulty, for on April 8 George was given ten days furlough to visit his sick wife. The little family went to Canada, and George never returned to the army. Their daughter Jennie Lillian Howie was born in August of 1865 at Clifton, Ontario, a son and a daughter born in 1868 and 1869 died as infants, and daughter Ida May and son Earl Adelbert Howie were born in April of 1873 and in April of 1879 at Niagara Falls, New York. "From G. W. HOWIE'S Photograph PARLORS, Prices low as possible to ensure good work. Negatives preserved. SUSPENSION BRIDGE, N. Y." was printed on both cabinet and card photograph mounts. George employed his son, George W. Howie, Junior, as a photo operator in 1883 and 1884. "... Over 145 and 147 Randolph Street." was printed on some of his cabinet mounts. He advertised in 1888: "FOTOGRAFS! HOWIE Makes them in every style, from the lowly tintype to the gorgeous cabinet.... 145 Randolph Street." He produced tintypes from 231 Jefferson Avenue, which was at the corner of Randolph Street, and offered "... Special Low Rates to Professionals." from 227 Jefferson Avenue. George employed his son-in-law, John J. Steinhauer, in 1894 as a photographer. In addition to the usual studio portraits, George turned out some very interesting cabinet photographs of entertainers: a mock boxing match between two young men, one very skinny and the other very fat; a one-man band, a western marksman with his Indian wife and baby; and midgets. George died of heart disease on July 28, 1913, and burial was in Forest Lawn Cemetery. His wife, Sarah, lived until May 5, 1931, and was buried in Detroit's Grand Lawn Cemetery.

| Her father came from New York and Fannie was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in March of 1868, the younger daughter of Isaac Newton Hoyt and Ellen (Truman) Hoyt. Her sister Lillian was eight years older. Fannie graduated from Wayland High School in 1885, and later became the first librarian of the Henika Public Library in Wayland. She began advertising her post card photographs of Wayland and of nearby Gun Lake in 1906. Her cards can be recognized by her distinctive artistic lettering, which also appears in library records. Some of her post cards were made by pasting photographic prints to card stock. Her postal photographs included street scenes, churches, cottages, and the G.R.& I. water tank wrecked by a tornado on October 11, 1907. Early in 1923 Fannie was listed as a new member of the International Photographic Association in Class 3 as number 5238. She never married and lived with her parents through 1910. She was living with her married sister in 1920, and by herself in 1930. Fannie was 81 years old at the time of her death in Wayland on March 31, 1949. |           | 1 222 ttt 33 11 22 |

His father came from New York and Willis was born in Michigan to a mother from Connecticut in March of 1855, third of the eight children of Alexander Charles Hubbard and Lucy H. (Barrows) Hubbard. He was called Willie as a youth. Elizabeth (often Lizzie) was born in Indiana to a mother from Pennsylvania in February of 1857, and she married Willis about 1873. Their children were born in Indiana: their son Alvy or Alba about 1876, Edward about 1878, Frank in 1879, and Bertha in April of 1883. These messages were printed on the backs of 19th Century style cabinet photo mounts: "All Work First Class. Calls by Mail will receive Prompt Attention. W. V. HUBBARD, VIEW PHOTOGRAPHER, Pictures Taken of Buildings, Out-door Groups, Horses, Buggies, Etc." and "Pictures taken of buildings, out door groups, Horses, Buggies & etc. Cabinet Photo's taken at your home. Calls by mail will receive prompt attention. All work warranted. W. V. Hubbard, Kalamazoo, Mich." All four children were living with Willis and Lizzie in 1910, although Alba was a widower, the other sons were divorced, and Bertha was raising two sons of her own. Her father emigrated from Germany and Mary was born in Wisconsin to a mother from New York in 1873. Something had happened to Lizzie, and Willis was married Mary prior to 1920.

Herbert was born in Michigan on October 23, 1879, the only son of Charles and Elizabeth F. Hubel. His father emigrated from the Bavarian region of Germany and became a dealer in real estate, and his mother was born in Michigan to German parents. Herb and his younger sister Grace were living with their parents in 1900, and he still was at home in 1910. "Launching of Harry Yates, St. Clair, Mich., Mar. 5, '10. Hubel" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph. "Hubel Photo, St. Clair, Mich" along with captions like "Hello 'Bill.'" and "An Elk Hunting Elk's Headquarters." was scribed into the negatives of post card photos with huge animals added to Detroit street scenes with the Elk's Temple in the background. The national Elk's Convention was held at Detroit in July of 1910, and some of these cards were mailed at that time. "H. C. HUBEL, ST. CLAIR, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of photographs made from a negative into which had been scribed "The Campus, U of M. During the Great Flood. Hubel, St. Clair, Mich" and which was printed with "© 1910. Ann Arbor, Mich." In this frontal view of University Hall, the central walk leading up to the building was replaced with a lake scene, so that three young men in a sail boat seemed to be skimming over slight waves toward the viewer. Herbert was single in 1918, when his widowed mother was living in Detroit with his sister Grace and her husband, John De Wolf.

Elizabeth was born at Stepney, England, in March of 1862, first of the nine children of Robert M. and Elizabeth M. Treend. The family moved to Canada about 1871. Robert Hudson was born in 1849 at Gatineau, Quebec, and he married Elizabeth at Renfrew, Ontario, on September 13, 1882. Their daughter Daisy was born in Renfrew County, Ontario, on October 11, 1883. Their son Robert was born in May of 1885, probably in Wheatland Township of Sanilac County, Michigan, where Elizabeth's parents had been living since 1882. Their son William was born in Canada on March 31, 1888. They immigrated to Michigan later in 1888, and their son Edward was born there in January of 1890. Both Elizabeth's husband and her brother Charles, who was living with them, were Saginaw photographers in 1900. By 1910 Elizabeth was a widow sharing her home with her son William and his wife and child. William was working at this time in her gallery as a photographer. 2

Robert was born in Canada to a Scotch mother in March of 1861, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hudson. He immigrated to the United States in 1878. Sarah A. Watson was born in Canada to an Irish mother in February of 1864, and she immigrated in 1878 with her family. She married Robert in the early 1880s, and they both became naturalized citizens of the United States. Their son Edward was born in October of 1884, their daughter Ida was born in September of 1888, their daughter Sarah was born in October of 1890, and they adopted Robert who was born in 1903 or early in 1904. By 1930 Sarah was gone, and Robert was living with his daughter Sarah and her husband.

Robert was born in May of 1849 at Gatineau, Quebec, first of the six children of William and Elsie (Fairbairn) Hudson. Elizabeth Freend was born in Ontario in 1862, and she married Robert at Renfrew, Ontario, on September 13, 1882. Their daughter Daisy was born in Renfrew County in October of 1883, and their sons Robert, William and Edward were born between 1885 and 1890. Elizabeth's brother, Charles Freend, was living with the Hudson family in 1900 and working as a photographer. Robert may have been the proprietor of a photograph studio in 1900, and may have been employing Charles. Elizabeth was Deckerville's photographer by 1906, and she was enumerated as a widow in 1910.

Russell was born at Leesburg, Ohio, on October 21, 1877, fifth of the eight children of William Wright H. Huff and Phoebe Jane (Terrell) Huff. He grew up on the family farm and became five feet eleven inches tall with brown eyes and dark brown hair. Russell studied mechanical engineering at the Case School of Applied Science in Cleveland, Ohio. Jane Garrett Cox (usually Jennie) was born at Leesburg, Ohio, on May 2, 1879, last of the five children of Moses M. and Minerva E. Cox. She married Russell in 1901 at Washington Court House, Ohio. Two of their daughters were born in Ohio: Helen on April 25, 1902, and Louise on October 13, 1903. Their daughter Lillian was born in Michigan on March 22, 1908, and their son Russell was born here on May 10, 1918. Russell was said to have been with the Packard Company from 1900 through 1916 and with the Dodge Brothers until 1926, resigning as vice president of engineering. He visited the British Isles, Italy, France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland in 1921 on business for Dodge Brothers, and was accompanied by his wife. They left New York October 4 on S. S. Aquatania and reached Southampton a week later. When they returned they sailed on November 16 from Southampton on S. S. Adriatic, and arrived at New York on November 24, 1921. Russell lived at Pine Lake during his later years. He was 52 years old when he died at St. Petersburg, Florida, on March 26, 1930, survived by his four children and his widow, Mrs. Jane Cox Huff. Sarah E. Stoddard was born March of 1826 in New York State. She taught a summer school in Burns Township, and in November of 1843 was married to Andrew Huggins, then school director at Byron. Andrew was born in 1817 or 1818 in Massachusetts, and was successively a builder of mills in Corunna and Byron, Shiawassee County Surveyor, surveyor of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad, the man who laid out and platted the villages of St. Johns and Wenona, city engineer of Bay City, chief construction engineer of the Bay City & East Saginaw Railroad, and for the last sixteen years before his death in 1891, a resident of Corunna. Sarah and Andrew had two children: Hattie was six when she died at Byron in 1856, and Eddie died at Newburgh of typhoid fever in 1876, aged nineteen. Joseph N. Lemon, a seventy-year-old carriage maker, was boarding with Sarah in 1900.

Frank was born in Michigan to English parents in January of 1868. Something happened to his father, and by June of 1870 his mother, Hattie (Bano) Hughes, had taken Frank and his nine-months-old brother Claude to live with her parents. Hattie soon married Benjamin D. Hotchkiss, and between January of 1872 and July of 1882 Frank gained three half-siblings. "Frank L. Hughes, Amateur, Bay City, Mich." was printed on the backs of 5 ¼ by 4 ¼ photograph mounts. One carried a photograph of four young women and two young men sitting on the floor of a room. One young woman faced away from the camera and had a sign on her back: "Guess who she is." Frank married late in 1899 or early in 1900, but for some reason was living with the family of his step-father rather than his wife in June of 1900. He was enumerated as a widower in 1910.

His father came from Wales and J. Wesley Hughes was born to an Irish mother on February 9, 1860, in Ontario, Canada, and was educated there. His wife and children were born in Michigan, Florence in February of 1868, Edwin in December of 1891, Margaret in November of 1893, Allen in December of 1895, Charlotte in August of 1899 and Florence in 1906. On the back of a cabinet photograph of the Coldwater Free Public Library was printed: "THE PROPER PLACE TO GET PHOTOGRAPHS IS AT HUGHES' NEW GALLERY. I now have one of the neatest and best equipped galleries in the state and can give you 75 different scenes to choose from. I have an elegant new skylight and can give you any desired effect. The Beautiful Rembrandt, or the plain light with both sides of the face the same shade. Can photograph a Brunette and a Blonde together or a Child and its Grandma and have them all perfect. Give us a trial and you will be convinced that this is the place to get photographs. HUGHES' NEW GALLERY, 18 Chicago St. Late with Millard, Detroit. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED." From 274 Woodward Avenue he specialized in fine portraiture and groups, copied old daguerreotypes and photographs, and made enlargements finished in crayon, pastel, India ink, water color or oil. Many of the illustrations in an 1891 history of Detroit were engraved from photographs by J. W. Hughes. His employees included Alice M. Hughes, photo finisher in 1890 and retoucher in 1892 and 1893; George B. Ladd, retoucher in 1891; Miss Nellie A. Hedges, clerk in 1891 and bookkeeper 1892 and 1893; Charles Sarjeant, photo printer in 1891 and 1892 and photographer in 1894; George I. Hedges, photo printer in 1893; Robert B. Thompson, assistant photo printer in 1893; and Joseph J. Vanderwill, photo printer in 1894. Hughes & Sarjeant exhibited some of their photographs at the Detroit convention of the Photographers' Association of America early in August of 1895. At the second annual meeting of the Michigan Photographers Association, held at Detroit in February of 1897, they were awarded the Angell Prize for the best 3 1/2 inch head, as well as third prize in Class A, six pictures thirteen inches or over, portraits exclusively. Hughes & Sarjeant employed photo printer George I. Hedges in 1895, clerk Miss Nellie A. Hedges in 1895 and 1896, and retoucher Maude M. Haynes in 1897. With their move to Porter Street in 1898, they began to emphasize commercial and art photography. At the 1899 Photographers' Association of America convention the best genre photograph exhibited was judged to be "The Chair Invisible" by Hughes & Sarjeant. In 1900 J. Wesley was a principal of the Hughes & Hough Company, which sold pictures, frames and artists' materials at 287 Woodward Avenue. He was still an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. He was president of the Hughes & Lydey Company, art publishers and commercial photographers. In 1913 he was a portrait, commercial and panoramic photographer as well as an art publisher, and offered pictures and framing. Some post card photographs of public buildings in Detroit were copyrighted by J. W. Hughes. He advertised in 1920: "PORTRAITS. From an inexpensive photograph to a high grade colored portrait at prices which are uniformly lower than you will find usual for this quality of work. Many of the most prominent of Detroit's educational institutions have for years sent their graduating classes here to be photographed. COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHY. The ability to size up a subject from the business angle, and to photograph it with that idea in mind, has brought to us the patronage of many large Detroit concerns. Can we figure on your commercial work? ART SUBJECTS. Many Detroiters do not know that we produce annually many thousands of dollars worth of beautiful art pictures, hand colored and sepia. Our Art Gallery is open at all times during business hours and contains many rare subjects of Old Masters which will interest you. FRAMING. An almost unlimited variety of mouldings of all designs and finishes enables us to heighten and intensify the beauty of a picture by enclosing it in a suitable frame. These frames are, for the most part, very inexpensive...." Two of his children were working at the gallery in 1920, Allan as a bookkeeper and Margaret as a clerk. Both of them were sharing the home of their widowed father in 1930. J. Wesley Hughes died in Detroit on June 26, 1933. From 1934 until 1941, the J. W. Hughes Galleries at 7337 Woodward Avenue were art publishers and sold pictures and framing, with Elsa Goodman as president and Margaret Hughes as secretary and treasurer.

His father came from New York and Harry was born at St. Joseph, Michigan, to a mother from Ohio on December 18, 1865. He was last of the four children of Joseph J. and Martha Hughson, and their only son. Her father emigrated from Canada and Iza Irene Hawley was born in Michigan to a mother from Pennsylvania on May 2, 1867, last of the nine children of Peter Lischer Hawley and Harriet (Cook) Hawley. She married Harry at Manchester, Indiana, on July 20, 1890. They had no children, and Iza was gone before 1910. Viola F. Fisher was born in Wisconsin in June of 1893, second of the three children of Leroy D. and Anna M. Fisher. She married Harry in 1909 or early in 1910, and they never had children. Viola undoubtedly participated significantly in her husband's photographic business between 1910 and 1929. The completion of Harry's neat and commodious picture gallery in Saint Joseph was reported early in 1893. "Hughson" was lettered on an 11 by 14 inch mount below the 7 ½ by 9 ½ photograph of C. E. Bort's Fife & Drum Corps and many G.A.R. veterans posed in front of a speaker's stand on Memorial Day in 1901. Harry was chief of the St. Joseph fire department from 1904 until 1911. His widow, Mrs. Viola F. Hughson, conducted a Photographic Developing and Printing business from 1929 to 1934 at 318 ½ or 320 ½ State Street in St. Joseph. After 1929 her business was called the Daily Photo Service.

Joseph was born in New York on December 14, 1833, fourth of the eight children of Stephenson P. and Hannah Hughson. Martha was born in Ohio to parents from Pennsylvania on April 9, 1839, the daughter of George and Catherine (Hoover) Miller. She married Joseph on January 27, 1858. Their children were born in Michigan: Eva on February 20, 1859, Clara on March 16, 1862, Cora on March 14, 1864, and Harry on December 18, 1865. The work of J. J. Hughson & F. L. Pixley in the preparation of their St. Joseph gallery for its formal opening on February 11, 1888, was reported during the preceding month. The gallery was comprised of dressing, reception, operating and finishing rooms all newly painted and papered, partially carpeted, and furnished attractively and comfortably. The proprietors were experienced men starting with a good supply of artists' materials and pleasing scenic effects, and with the intention of making every effort to merit patronage. By 1900 Mrs. Martha Hughson was a widow, who was providing a home in St. Joseph for her son and his wife.

Henry was born in Michigan to parents from Connecticut in February of 1850, seventh of the eight children of Asa Hamilton Hulbert and Marietta (Standish) Hulbert. He and two older siblings were living on their parents' farm in 1880. Minnie was born in Michigan in 1863, and she married Henry about 1885. Frames were a specialty with Henry in 1893. He lost his fine brick studio by fire on May 25, 1898, with a loss of $2000 and insurance coverage of only $1100. He rebuilt the gallery immediately. Henry's wife, Mrs. Minnie L. Hulbert, was a professional artist and undoubtedly participated in his photography business. By 1910 she was a widow and in the photography business on her own. Henry's brother Lucius was the father of the Lucius Claire Hulbert described by the entry below.

Lucius was born November 22, 1888, at Smith in St. Clair County, Michigan, second of the three children of Lucius Dwight and Celia M. (Hurd) Hulbert. He was the nephew of the Harry Hulbert profiled above, and he became a tall slender man with blue eyes and light hair. He attended the Lapeer Branch of Flint Business College, and was enumerated as Clare Hulbert in 1910. He was known for a decade or more as L. Claire Hulbert. Mary Jane Hungerford was born in Michigan on June 12, 1891, eldest of the three children of Robert and Susan Hungerford. She grew up in Lapeer, and she married Claire on June 30, 1914. Their children were born in Michigan: Arthur in October of 1915, Lloyd in October of 1918, and another son in 1931. For almost eleven years, Lucius was photographer for the State of Michigan Department of Health and the State Administrative Board. He then concentrated professionally upon photographing wild life and making educational motion pictures. From 1934 through 1936 he was vice president of the Michigan Audubon Society. He helped to organize the Lansing Audubon Society and became its first president in June of 1935. Mary died in San Diego County, California, on June 12, 1971, and Lucius died there on May 9, 1985.

William was born on Mackinac Island on October 12, 1868, to Francis Robbins Hulbert and Diantha Hulda (Gillett) Hulbert. The family lived at Grand Rapids from 1869 until they moved to St. Ignace in 1880. Infantile paralysis prevented him from participating in the vigorous lumbering activities of his father and brothers. He became a teacher and wrote about the pine logging era along the Tahquamenon River and of the plant and animal life of the region for many magazines, including the Atlantic Monthly. He lugged a heavy camera along on canoe trips and laborious walks, and supplemented some of his articles with photographs. He probably would have become a nationally recognized nature writer had he lived beyond 1913. His Forest Neighbors was published posthumously in 1915 and nine of his stories were published by the Historical Society of Michigan in 1949 as White Pine Days on the Taquamenon. Three of his photographs were included in Tahquamenon Country, published in 1991: "Timber cruising party, c. 1904, on Wire Road north of Eckerman." on page 58; "Wanigan and boom, 1904." on page 82; and "At the brink of the Upper Falls, 1904." on page 83. In the fall of 1913 William went to visit a brother in Portland, Oregon, and died there on November second. His body was returned to Mackinac Island for burial in the family plot.

Charles was born in Ohio in May of 1876, the son of Sedgwick S. and Mary S. Hull. Note that Sedgwick S. Hull is profiled on a later page. He was C. Merton Hull in Coshocton and at Toledo in 1899, and was Charles M. Hull at Toledo in 1900 and in Albion a few years later. Nancy A. (later Alberta N.) Quinn was born in Ohio in October of 1880, fourth of the seven children of James and Sarah E. Quinn. She married Charles about 1898, and their daughter Clela was born in Ohio in May of 1899. Sarah E. Quinn was a widow by 1900, when she was providing a home for Charles and his family as well the six of her children who were unmarried. Sarah still was providing a home for Alberta and Clela in 1910, but Charles could not be found. One C. M. Hull had a photo business in 1916 at Elwood, Indiana.

Sedgwick was also in the photographic partnership of Condit & Hull at Wilkes Barre during the 1860s. From Galveston, he attended the inaugural convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880. "S. S. HULL & SON, Photographers, Battle Creek, Mich. - Crispell Gallery." was printed on some card photo mounts. The son in this partnership was H. Derward Hull. Hull & Son exhibited frames and portraits of various sizes at the Milwaukee convention of the P A of A in August of 1883. Hull & Son employed Ebbie Schumaker as a retoucher in 1884 and 1885, and probably used W. H. Stackhouse as a printer and toner. In August of 1885 the services of crayon artist George W. Rose were advertised as being available at the Hull gallery, which was sold to H. D. P. Reeve in November of 1885. C. Merton Hull was the junior partner in S. S. Hull & Son in Coshocton, and was a photographer in 1900 at Toledo, Ohio.

His parents came from New York and Dexter was born in Michigan in January of 1841. He and his twin brother Robert were fourth and fifth of the nine children of William and Elizabeth A. Hulsart. Dexter was 20 years old when he enlisted at Romeo as a corporal in Company A of the Ninth Michigan Volunteer Infantry on August 13, 1861. The regiment was mustered into United States service on October 15, 1861, and ordered to West Point, Kentucky, to fortify Muldraugh Hill and to build roads and bridges. They embarked on the Ohio River from West Point and reached Nashville, Tennessee, on January 23, 1862. They immediately turned around and marched through Kentucky after the Confederate raider John Morgan. Then the Ninth was part of the 5000 man force which moved on Chattanooga, Tennessee. Six companies of the ninth, 250 men, were in an isolated position. Before dawn on July 13, 1862, 2500 rebel cavalry rode directly into their camp. The enemy was driven back in a hand-to-hand encounter and the camp was recovered, but the concentrated attack continued and no support was available. By early afternoon one third of the men had been killed, wounded or captured and the officers felt obliged to surrender the command. Dexter was discharged for disability at Detroit on October 16, 1862. Neither he nor his partner in Romeo, Charles L. Hoyt, seem to have had previous photographic experience. He enlisted at Bruce in Company G of the reorganized Third Michigan Infantry on September 2, 1864, and was promoted to corporal on September 23. The regiment left Grand Rapids on October 20 for Nashville, Tennessee, was stationed in November at Decatur, Alabama, and then performed picket and scouting duty from Murfreesboro, Tennessee. Dexter was promoted to Fife Major on January 1, 1865, and the regiment moved on January 16 to Huntsville, Alabama. Starting on March 16, the Third moved to the eastern tip of Tennessee, and then back to Nashville, where Dexter was discharged on July 25, 1865. Mary was born in Michigan in 1846 or early in 1847, and she married Dexter about 1867. Their children were born in Michigan: Nora (later Stella) in 1868 or early in 1869, Harry in July of 1870, Adolph in June of 1873, Gertie about 1875, and Virginia in January of 1877. By 1880 Mary was in the Michigan Asylum for the Insane at Kalamazoo, and Dexter's sister Elizabeth (sometimes Caroline) had come to take care of the house and the children. By 1900 Mary had been transferred to the Northern Michigan Asylum at Traverse City, and Dexter was sharing his home with his daughter Virginia and sister Elizabeth. The photographer Mrs. Carrie L. Ostergren was one of their neighbors in Morley. In 1910 Virginia and Elizabeth were rooming with a young couple in Louisiana, and Mary still was an inmate at Traverse City. Though Mary was enumerated as married, Dexter was not to be found. Apparently, Dexter never filed for a Civil War Pension.

John was born in Pennsylvania in 1834 or early in 1835. Abigail was born in New York State about 1835, and she married John about 1856. Their daughter was born in Michigan in 1857 or early in 1858, and was identified as Allerturn in 1860, Tena in 1870, and Polly in 1880. Abigail was enumerated as a milliner in 1860, and she was the proprietor of a millinery store in 1880. As well as portraits of local people, John's cartes de visite from Hillsdale included reproductions of an engraved bird's-eye view of Hillsdale and portraits of Abraham Lincoln and General Burnside from stock negatives. He published: "HUMMELL'S PROCLAMATION. The Public to receive a Benefit in Pictures. DOWN! DOWN! Alfred was born in England in April of 1858, immigrated in 1878, and by 1900 was a naturalized citizen of the United States. He and his brother Fred were boarding with the family of a Ypsilanti couple in 1880. Kate was born in Australia to English parents in April of 1860, she immigrated in 1874, and she married Alfred in 1881 or 1882. Their children were born in Michigan: Harold in December of 1886, Hubert in February of 1888, George in October of 1893, and Helen in April of 1898. Alfred was associated in Mendon businesses with his father, George Humphrey. On January 30, 1888, he filed a patent application on a Photographic Burnishing Machine with heated rollers which revolved first one way and then the other as a crank was turned continuously, and Patent Number 388,681 was granted to him on August 28, 1888. In Kalamazoo, the Humphrey Brothers were brass founders, machinists and nickel platers, and by 1892 were manufacturing photograph burnishers. Alfred applied for a patent on a Polishing Roll for use in Photograph Burnishers on January 7, 1892, and the resulting Patent Number 596,268 did not issue until December 28, 1897. Without Alfred, his brothers Frederick J., George and Herbert Humphrey continued as manufacturers of hot water heaters in Kalamazoo for at least three more decades. Alfred and Kate and three of their children were living in 1910 at the Hotel Ansonia in Manhattan. Alfred was a widower by 1930, when he was living by himself at the Hotel Ansonia.

Herbert was born in England in August of 1864, youngest of the known sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Humphrey, and brother of the Alfred H. Humphrey profiled above. He immigrated in either 1872 or 1880. "H. S. Humphrey" was added to some of the Kalamazoo cabinet mounts of Frank P. Ford. Ford & Humphrey used at least four other imprints, specialized in Bromide Portraits and touted their ground floor studio opposite the post office. The Humphrey Manufacturing & Plating Company made hot water heaters while Herbert was secretary, but had manufactured photograph burnishers in 1892 and 1893. Constance was born at Franklin, Pennsylvania, to a mother from New York on July 6, 1874, and she married Herbert about 1896. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Constance in February of 1898, and Margaret in March of 1900. Herbert became a naturalized citizen of the United States at Kalamazoo on August 12, 1915. The water heater business must have been fairly profitable. Herbert and Constance enjoyed a Caribbean cruise in March of 1917. They returned from a visit to Bermuda in March of 1924, from Hawaii in March of 1925, from England in April of 1927 and again in May of 1929.

Wilson was born at Bainbridge, Ohio, to a mother from New York on May 9, 1876, second of the three children of Westel W. and Nancy C. Hunt, and their only son. Her father came from New York and Jessie was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio about 1879. She married Wilson about 1901, their daughter Marian was born in 1902 in Ohio, and their son Wilson was born in July of 1908 in Missouri. Wilson was credited with the photos reproduced in Saginaw, Michigan, The Metropolis of the Saginaw Valley. In Kansas City, he and Jessie lived next door to the grocer James H. Jackett and his wife, Drusilla O’Gorman Jackett. Drusilla was a professional photographer on her own account. Wilson was tall and slender with brown eyes and black hair turning gray in 1918, and Jessie May Hunt still was his wife. He was a widower by 1920, and in 1922 Wilson married Rebecca. Her father emigrated from Germany and Rebecca was born in Michigan to a Canadian mother in 1873 or 1874.

Frank was born in Michigan in 1856 or early in 1857, second of the four sons of Hiram H. and Ellen D. (Coffin) Hunter, and the brother of photographer Hiram H. Hunter, Junior. As minors, the boys lived on the farm of their maternal grandparents, Harmon and Dorcas Coffin. The business of Hunter Brothers was described by an 1880 publication: "At the outset this enterprise was started upon an amount of capital which enabled ... (them) ... to procure the most complete outfit of apparatus, chemicals, and all other accessories known to the art, and has ever since been well equipped in every way. Splendid rooms for waiting and reception, and a most perfectly appointed operating room form a special feature of the house which has no superior in that quarter of the city. This gallery ... gives employment to seven assistants in the two departments, and keeps four others constantly busy outside in viewing, photographing scenery, private residences, country places and farms, which is a branch occupation of which this firm makes a specialty. They also keep in good trim complete covered wagons and tents which are accompanied with complete apparatus for taking all kinds of pictures and views, and for which they are noted throughout the city and the adjacent country and state. These men are natives of Detroit, and studied their art under the well known Woodward Ave. photographer, Powelson, and the reputation they are making for themselves entitles them to a prominent position in this branch of the art." One Frank Hunter, reportedly born at Detroit in November of 1858, enlisted in Company B of the Eleventh United States Infantry on August 8, 1883, at Buffalo, New York. He was 5 feet 10½ inches tall with grey eyes, brown hair and a fair complexion, and he deserted on July 20, 1884.

Hiram was born at Pontiac in December of 1855, first of the four sons of Hiram H. and Ellen D. (Coffin) Hunter. Hiram and his brothers lived while they were young on the farm of their maternal grandparents, Harmon and Dorcas Coffin. At one time Hiram worked for the Detroit photographer Benjamin F. Powelson. Her father emigrated from England and Dianna was born in Canada in 1857 or 1858. She was married to Hiram by 1880, when they were providing a home for his mother and two of his brothers. In 1888 Hiram signed an advertisement "Bert Hunter." William J. Walker was his partner in 1875. From 179 Michigan Avenue the Detroit Viewing Company produced stereo views of such subjects as the fire company at Perrysburg, Ohio. H. H. Hunter & Company were successors to Edward Ward in 1879, had Frances A. Hilton as another principal and employed photographer George Hutchinson, and had "The cheapest and best Gallery in the city for all kinds of Pictures, from Locket to Life Size." Frank was the other Hunter Brother, and photographers George Hutchinson and Oliver Desmaries were among the seven assistants they employed in the second floor gallery on Michigan Avenue. The Brothers had four others outside engaged in viewing, photographing scenery, private residences, country places and farms from well-equipped covered wagons and tents. Hiram retained George Hutchinson and employed artist Jay B. Louis in 1881. Hunter & George V. French were proprietors of the Detroit & Belle Isle Viewing Company, Hunter & Smith were proprietors of the Excelsior Gallery, and Hunter & Hiram Gay were proprietors of both the Excelsior Gallery and the Detroit Viewing Company. Hunter & Gay employed photographer Frank D. Brooks and photo printer John H. Bennett. A cabinet photograph of Whitney's Grand Opera House was from "Hunter's Art Gallery - Headquarters - DETROIT VIEWING CO. Cheapest Gallery in Detroit for First-Class Work. 227 Jefferson Ave.... SPECIALTIES: Crayon Portraits, Children's Photos, and Landscapes." Some cabinet photographs from Hunter's Art Gallery showed people outside their homes with furniture from inside the house. Hiram retained Frank D. Brooks as an artist in 1886, and employed photographic printer Edward E. Hicks in 1888. Hunter & Bixby purchased and refurbished the Kittle Gallery in Pontiac, and opened it as a branch of the Detroit business. Within two weeks, Bixby's name was dropped from the advertisements and on March 16 Hiram published "A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.... one Frank Bixby is in no way connected with Hunter's Art Gallery ... since Saturday, Feb 26th; all persons are warned not to trust him, or transact any business with him on our account...." He continued to advertise in Pontiac: "... Fine Cabinet Photos at $1.25 per doz. with one large 8 x 10 and framed $3.00. This Gallery is a branch of Hunter's Art Gallery, 227 Jefferson Ave., where all work will be finished. We have in connection a first class viewing wagon and will make views of residences, houses or landscapes, in any part city or country. Don't fail to get a snow picture of your residence...." Hiram was proprietor of the New York Art Gallery on Gratiot Avenue in 1889, and Ferdinand Uebele was his partner in 1891. Something happened to Dianna which allowed Hiram to marry again. Mabel (often Mable) was born in Wisconsin in December of 1866 to parents that probably were from New York, and she married Hiram in 1889 or 1890. Their daughter Ruth was born in Michigan in April of 1900. Mabel was a widow by 1930, when she was working as an infirmary attendant at the Wayne County Home and Insane Asylum in Eloise, Michigan.

John was the son of John W. Hunter, and was born in Birmingham, Michigan, on November 9, 1825. He worked for various merchants in Birmingham and later in Detroit. Owing to a partial failure of his health, he took up the daguerreian business and traveled across Michigan to Chicago. He and Miss Anna A. Curtis were married in Chicago in September of 1850. He studied medicine with doctors in Detroit, Chicago and Muscatine, Iowa, and received a diploma from the Medical University of Philadelphia. He traveled through the south for two years before he settled in Muscatine. He was in poor health for several years prior to his death on February 12, 1870.

John was born in New York State about 1836, fifth of the seven children of John B. and Catherine Hunter. Kate was born in New York in 1840 or 1841, and she married John about 1855. Their son Frank was born in New York in 1856 or 1857, and their daughter Kate was born in Michigan in 1863 or 1864. John advertised in 1872: "Pictures taken in all kinds of weather and satisfaction guaranteed. Special attention given to enlarging. Pictures colored in oil or water colors." Many of his later card photographs were from "...First door east of Commercial Block, Jonesville, Mich. Old pictures copied and enlarged - colored in Oil or Water Colors, as well as Ink. Prices reasonable. Duplicates from this may be had at any time." Early in 1874 a photographic journal carried two suggestions from J. H. Hunter: a procedure for sensitizing paper and a method of copying a broken ambrotype. Before the end of 1874 Hunter had been succeeded as Jonesville's photographer by Julius A. Ball.

Edwin was born in New York State in 1831 or 1832. Miss Lucy E. Reeves was born in New York at about the same time, and she married Edwin on August 17, 1852, at Palmyra, New York. They had two daughters born in Michigan: Mary about 1853, and Isabella (later Belle) about 1857. The Minnie mentioned in 1880s correspondence may or may not be one of these girls. Ed was 33 years old when he enlisted at Pontiac in the 24th Michigan Volunteer Infantry on March 24, 1865. He joined the regiment at Baltimore, Maryland, where they were on special duty. The 24th was ordered to Springfield, Illinois, and assigned to garrison duty at Camp Butler with unusual exposure to the weather. Edwin contracted a bad cold which settled in his lungs and left him with a chronic cough for the rest of his life. While in Springfield the regiment served as escort at the funeral of President Lincoln. Leaving Springfield for Detroit on June 19, Edwin and the regiment were mustered out of the army and disbanded at Detroit on June 28, 1865. "Huntington & Jones Gallery of Art,... Negative Preserved. Special attention given to enlarging ambrotypes, or old pictures to any size desired, and colored in India Ink, Water and Oil Colors in a superior manner." was printed on the backs of some cartes de visite. Huntington & Ransom N. Jones were succeeded by William H. Noble. Edwin died from consumption at Ypsilanti on September 20, 1886. His widow, Mrs. Lucy E. Huntington, finally qualified for a widow's pension late in 1889 which she received until her death in April of 1914. 5

George was born in New York in October of 1861, the only son of John and Louisa M. Huntington. His sister Emma was a couple of years older. Her father came from New York and Elizabeth was born in Michigan to a mother from Vermont in June of 1866. She married George in 1886 or 1887. Their children were born in Detroit: George in December of 1890, Alice in January of 1893, Edwin in October of 1895, and Albert in April of 1901. Frank Scott Clark and George continued to call themselves proprietors of the Millard Studio for most of the time they were in business together. They produced duplicates at reduced rates from 70,000 negatives made by Powelson and by Millard, advertised photo-ceramics in 1895, and in 1901 offered "General Portraiture, Makers of Little Children's Pictures. Platinum and Autotype Prints. Fine Frames..." George was named secretary of the Michigan Photographers' Association at its organization on January 15, 1895. At the Detroit convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1895, Huntington & Clark received a third prize bronze medal for six pictures sixteen inches or larger, and a second prize silver medal for twelve Paris Panels to sixteen inches. Some of their employees were: Edward J. Winiker, photo printer in 1894 and 1896 and photographer in 1895; Hewlett F. Duryea, photographer in 1895; Nelson H. Tallman, artist in 1895; Edwin H. Wilkinson, retoucher in 1895; Louis E. Herlinger, retoucher in 1896; and Clara Waite, clerk in 1899. B. Frank Moore succeeded Clark as George's partner in 1903, and George was sole proprietor of Huntington & Company. He was an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. Walter J. Watson was the proprietor of the Huntington Studio at 78 Washington Boulevard in 1911. In November of 1914 George was hunting with a companion from a camp near Seney when a blizzard caused them to become lost in the woods. They were without food for four days before they got back to camp. George and Elizabeth were providing a home in 1920 for all three of their sons as well as the wife and two children of one of them. By 1930 their son George had taken over management of the poultry hatchery. George was 89 years old when he died at Ann Arbor on July 8, 1951, survived by his four children.

Augustus was born in Michigan to parents from New York in February of 1860, the second child of Nathaniel John Huntley and Sarah A. (McKinstry) Huntley. His sister Elizabeth was born at Lapeer in 1857. His mother died soon after Augustus was born, and his father married a lady named Cloe. Augustus soon had two half-sisters and a half-brother born between 1862 and 1867. He was living in 1870 with his uncle Deloss Huntley and his wife Mary. Augustus was boarding in 1880 on the farm of his maternal grandparents, Beniah and Elizabeth McKinstry. Jennie M. Welsh was born in Michigan to parents from New York in August of 1862, and she married Augustus about 1888. Their daughter Ruth was born at Saranac in March of 1886. "HUNTLEY PHOTO" or "Huntley - Pub." was lettered on the negatives of many Saranac post card photographs along with brief captions which included a few dates such as August 25, 1909, and August 20, 1913. These photographs ranged from business and residential street scenes and views of a parade, warehouses, produce wagons, the high school and its pupils, the cemetery, the Grand River, bridges, a dam and the mill pond to pictures of the Ionia County Home and the depot. Augustus and Jennie still were together in 1920, but by 1930 Augustus was a widower living with his sister-in-law, Blanch Powers.

His father came from New Hampshire and Frank was born on October 23, 1840, in Allegany County, New York, sixth of the seven children of Sylvenus and Eunice (Sawyer) Huntley. He came with his parents in 1855 to Kalamazoo County, Michigan. He worked in a store for several years, then to salvage his health turned to teaming and other outdoor jobs. He was 22 years old when he enlisted at Kalamazoo as a corporal in Company D of the Seventeenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry on August 4, 1862. The regiment left Detroit on August 27 for Washington, D. C. On September 14, less than three weeks later, the inexperienced men of the 17th were facing the enemy which was waiting behind stone walls on the crest of South Mountain, Maryland. Ordered to charge, 500 of them scrambled up the hillside with wild yells and drove the Confederates from their stone defenses and down the slope of the mountain. 140 men were killed or wounded during that charge. Frank was wounded in the hand badly enough that he was discharged for disability at Baltimore, Maryland on January 4, 1863. He returned to Kalamazoo and soon moved to Saranac. Mary was born in Ohio about 1840, and she married Frank soon after he returned from the army. Their sons Seth and Frederic were born in Michigan between 1864 and 1866. Their daughter Kate was born in Kansas in January of 1870 and, like her mother, did not survive. Her father emigrated from Switzerland and Harriet (often Hattie) Maria Schlappi was born at Delta, Ohio, on September 20, 1853, sixth of the twelve children of Samuel and Mary Ann (Zimmerman) Schlappi. She married Milo S. Barnum at Woodland, Michigan, on April 23, 1871, and he died from consumption at St. Paul, Minnesota, on October 27, 1871. Hattie married Frank at Hastings, Michigan, on November 17, 1873, and then helped him to raise his two sons. She never had children of her own. In 1878 Frank began a jewelry and watch making business at Cadillac with capital of two dollars and a half in cash. After serving as an alderman for two terms, Frank was elected mayor of Cadillac in the spring of 1884. Frank was living at Chico on his own income in 1910, when Harriet was the keeper of an apartment house on her own account. Frank died at Chico on September 15, 1912, and Harriet lived on there until her death on July 3, 1940.

George was born in Ohio to a mother from Maryland in March of 1854, last of the seven children of Zadoc L. and Elizabeth (Mowbray) Hurtt. His mother died and he had a step-mother by the time he was twelve. In Danbury he was living with Samuel and Catherine Parks, both forty, and probably related in some way. George was boarding in 1880 with the family of Louis R. Newman, who managed the Union View Company in Lansing and the company of the same name in Rochester, New York. One of the seven boarders was a photographer, and the others all were identified as artists. Her father came from Virginia and Anna L. Lane was born in Kentucky to a mother from Ohio in April of 1861, first of the five children of William and Alida M. Lane. She married George about 1883, and she gave birth to Helen in September of 1885. Anna was a widow by 1930, when she was a nursery woman with employees. Helen was living with her, and was the proprietor of a flower shop with a staff.

Edwin was born in Indiana in May of 1863, the only child of photographer J. W. Husher and his wife May M. Husher. His mother was a widow by 1880, and Edwin had become the photographer in the family. Gertrude was born in Tennessee in April of 1867, she married Edwin in 1889 or early in 1890, and their son Edwin was born in April of 1891. Edwin was at one time chief operator for the Taber Gallery in San Francisco. During the summer of 1886 he spent a month taking photographs in the vicinity of Alaska's Mount St. Elias. The San Francisco Examiner devoted three illustrated columns to an Alaskan trip he made in 1889, and he was a member of the California Camera Club in 1890. E. H. Husher & Company succeeded Frank N. Tomlinson in the Woodward Avenue gallery established twenty years earlier by Joseph E. Watson, with reception parlors and toilet rooms on the second floor, and the operating rooms, printing rooms, finishing room and dark room on the third floor. Several photographs of a logging camp and various logging operations reproduced in an 1893 book were credited to E. H. Husher & Company. Edwin was sole proprietor of the company until George T. Bigelow became his partner in 1894. Employees of the company included bookkeeper Miss Ida G. Graham and retoucher George B. Ladd in 1892, clerk Miss Jessie M. Withers from 1892 to 1894, bookkeeper Minnie E. Charlesworth in 1893, photo printers John G. McCurdy and Walter J. McCurdy in 1893 and 1894, clerks Joseph Burch and Felix C. Petri and retouchers Anselm L. Gault and William E. Shemild in 1894, retoucher and photographer Paul Milloy in 1894 and 1895, and artist Charles W. Austin in 1895. At the Detroit convention of the Photographers' Association of America early in August of 1895, Ed Husher was one of the judges of the photographs exhibited. He went to Switzerland in 1896 to investigate a new photo-lithographic process for reproducing pictures in color. The American rights were acquired by his associates in the Photochrom Company, which had been organized to use the process. Edwin became the plant superintendent, and suggested that the new company purchase the W. H. Jackson Company of Denver so as to acquire a stock of desirable negatives, and that they offer Jackson a position with the company as director and photographer. This was later accomplished. In the spring of 1903, Edwin sold out his interest in the Photochrom Company and bought a California orange grove, and was succeeded as superintendent by William H. Jackson. Edwin and Gertrude were living separately in the same part of Los Angeles in 1920, and Gertrude was enumerated as a widow and manager of an apartment house. By 1930 it seems that she actually was a widow and the proprietor of lunch rooms in San Gabriel.

Ernest was born in Michigan to Canadian parents on July 23, 1874, eighth of the twelve children of William Edmund Husted and Margaret (Weaver) Husted. He became a tall man with brown eyes and dark hair. Blanch Calleman was born in Canada in May of 1873, immigrated, and married Ernest in the spring of 1895. Their children were born in Michigan: Blanch in October of 1896, and Aubrey in 1903 or early in 1904. By 1918 Ernest was a widower, and he had lost the little finger and thumb from his left hand. Helen was born in Ontario about 1870, the daughter of Peter and Hellen (Murch) Husted. She was a widow named Helen Pender and living in Detroit when she married Ernest over in Windsor, Ontario, on May 28, 1919. Ernest's parents died at West Branch: William on November 24, 1931, and Margaret on May 5, 1943. Ernest was over one hundred years old when he died there in September of 1976.

His first name was spelled "Coart" in some of the earlier listings, and his last name was spelled "Hutchins" in many of the earlier gazetteers and on some of his cabinet mounts, early and late. Court was born in Michigan to parents from New York on July 5, 1863, second of the three children of Abram and Sarah A. (Parker) Hutchings. Her father emigrated from Canada and Grace Adelia Sanford was born in Michigan in July of 1867, the daughter of Henry and Elizabeth Sanford. She married Court in 1887, and their son Charles was born in November of 1894. That "C. R. Hutchings of Durand, Michigan, is building a photograph gallery." was reported late in 1897. Small self-portraits of Court were affixed to 2½ by 4½ business cards on which were printed: "C. R. HUTCHINGS, Photographer. Dealer in Frames, Crayon, Sepia, Pastel, India Ink and Water Color Portraits. High Grade Work a Specialty. All Work Guaranteed. Durand, Mich." He was identified as a licensed embalmer in 1902. He advertised on October 11, 1906: "NOTICE - NOTICE. I wish to announce to the people of Perry and vicinity that I have fitted up the rooms over D. A. Blanchard's drug store for a studio where I am prepared to do all kinds of Photography in all the latest styles. Copying, Enlarging in Crayon, Pastel and Water Color Portraits. Also Post Cards, Souvenir Cards, Picture Framing, Etc. All Work Guaranteed. Thanking you for past favors, I solicit a continuance of your patronage in the future. Yours Respectfully, C. R. HUTCHINGS, Photographer and Funeral Director, PERRY, MICHIGAN." Court died at Perry on October 8, 1918, and his son continued the undertaking business. Grace died at Marcellus, Michigan, on April 15, 1945.

Ernest was the son of Luther N. and Ruth L. (Richmond) Hutchinson, and was born in June of 1846 in Michigan, probably at Ypsilanti. His younger brother died as a child in 1865. Ernest succeeded his father as photographer in Sturgis, and in August of 1866 was advertising "HUTCHINSON'S FINE ART GALLERY, Opposite Exchange Hotel, STURGIS, MICHIGAN. To our former patrons, and community at large, we would say that we are again prepared to take PICTURES in all the various branches. We have spared no pains in fitting up rooms in the most improved style, in our Brick Block opposite the Exchange Hotel, with Sky and Side Lights and all necessary fixtures. Our Skylight is the largest in Southern Michigan and works fine. Our sittings only require from One to Ten Seconds to get the finest results. We shall endeavor to finish our work in the most satisfactory manner, and to keep pace with all improvements in the Art as it advances, and by so doing we are in hopes of pleasing all that may favor us with their patronage. All known the Heliographic age has wonderfully changed, and continues to advance for the better, and has ever since the first shadows in old Daguerreotype age; though at this time, it seems as if perfection was almost reached, yet 'onward' is the watchword. Our rooms are located in a very pleasant part of our village and it will pay you well to come, take a view of our beautiful town and prairie and, should you not wish a picture, then we can show you some of our own work, which we claim is second to none, leaving you, of course, the same privilege to judge for yourselves." Nellie (later Hellen) was born in New York State in 1849 or 1850, and she married Ernest about 1869. They were living with Ernest's widowed father in 1870, and Nellie was doing the house work. Their children were born in Michigan: Ernest about 1871, Luther about 1875, and Blanch about 1878. Something happened to Hellen. Luther was born at Westmoreland, New York, to parents from Connecticut on April 8, 1823, youngest of the four children of Warren and Mary (Goddard) Hutchinson. The family came in 1834 to Michigan, where Warren built a hotel at Scio. Luther hoped for a career as an artist, but failing eyesight forced him into other fields. Ruth L. Richmond was born in New York in 1825, and she married Luther at Scio on January 2, 1843. Their son Ernest was born in June of 1846. In 1860, Luther was first enumerated as an artist, but that was crossed out and dentist was substituted. Their second son Aver was not five years old when he died on February 27, 1865, and Ruth died in the later 1860s. Her father came from New York and Adda C. Foote was born in Michigan about 1855, the daughter of Jacob J. and Sarah H. Foote. She was living at Scio before she married Luther on July 27, 1870. Their only child Glen died on January 11, 1879. Daisy was born in Michigan to parents from New York on May 9, 1881, and five weeks later was adopted by Luther and Addie. Luther was enumerated as married in 1900, but Daisy was a milliner boarding in Grand Rapids with a widow and Addie could not be found.

Nora and her twin sister, Cora, were born in Michigan in November of 1878, and their sister Ivy was born here in June of 1880. Their parents, William Z. and Mae (Simpson) Hutchinson, were born in New York State in February and March of 1851 and married about 1875. In 1900 the family was living at 613 Wood Street near Saginaw Street in the First Ward of Flint, and Nora probably was working for her publisher father. Printed on the label affixed to the back of the 10 by 12 inch mount of a 7½ by 9½ photo of more than fifty well-dressed boys standing in front of their school was: "NORA HUTCHINSON, Cor. Wood and Sag. Sts., 1st Ward, View Photographer. SINGLE PICTURE, SIXTY CENTS. TWO, OR MORE, FIFTY CENTS EACH." His father emigrated from Canada and Allen G. Hartshorn was born in Michigan in April of 1874, second of the four or more children of Aaron and Clara E. Hartshorn. He married Nora about 1901, and their daughters were born in Michigan: Bernice in 1902, and Gladys in 1904. Allen was a printer with his own shop in 1910, the proprietor of a filling station in 1920, and a machinist in an auto factory in 1930. The Hartshorns were sharing their home with Nora's widowed mother in 1920 and 1930.

"BIRD'S EYE VIEW MANISTIQUE HUTT" and "HUGHES RESORT, STEUBEN HUTT" were lettered on the negatives of post card photographs with both undivided and divided backs. The second upright of the H resembled an elongated L which underlined the following letters, so this could have been sort of a monogram for H. Lutt.

Eugene was born in Michigan to parents from New York in May of 1859, first of the four children of Seymour P. and Mary Elizabeth Hutton. His father worked as a laborer and a carpenter, but by 1880 he was a barber as was Eugene's brother Owen. Delia was born in a French region of Canada, probably Quebec, in April of 1863, and she came to the United States about ten years later. She married Eugene about 1882, and their sons were born in Michigan: Harry in November of 1883, Earl in August of 1889, Owen in March of 1897, and Clarence in May of 1900. Eugene and Delia were providing a home in 1930 for Clarence, his wife Dorothy, and their five-year-old daughter June.

His father came from Pennsylvania and William was born in Nebraska to a mother from New York in November of 1870, eldest of the four or more children of Miles C. and Cecelia (Smith) Huyette. Samuel E. Thomas & Huyette were primarily mechanical draughtsmen, with blueprinting and photography available as secondary services. They occupied Rooms 41-42 in the Hodges Building on Griswold Street in 1890 and 1891, when they also offered photo-engraving. Lillian was born in Michigan to English parents in March of 1871, and she married William about 1890. Three of their daughters were born in Michigan: Marie in April of 1892, Dorothy in March of 1896, and Margarite in December of 1897. Their daughter Helen was born in Pennsylvania in September of 1894. Three of their children were born in Illinois: Ruby in March of 1900, and then Carl and Beatrice between 1901 and 1903. Lillian and all of her children were living in 1910 at Birmingham, Michigan. Lillian was enumerated as married, but William was not to be found.

Edward was born in New Brunswick, New Jersey on August 22, 1829. He was living in 1850 with his sixty-year-old mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Huyler. Mary was born in New York State about 1833, and by 1860 she and Edward were married. Edward came to Sturgis with sixteen years of experience and had been "... for a long time an active and progressive Ambrotypist and Photographer of New York City." He advertised cartes de visite, large size photographs, excelsior ambrotypes, and copying old daguerreotypes. He stated that "All pictures left at this gallery to be copied, are kept in a Fire and Burglar Proof Safe.... He is now ready to introduce the PORCELAIN PICTURE! The DOUBLE PICTURE! and the LIFE SIZE PICTURES! ... India Ink and Colored Work finished in the most elaborate manner by a first-class colorist of New York City.... A finished proof shown to all customers, and satisfaction guaranteed." The Michigan State Fair was held at Adrian in 1865 and drew displays from photographers of Chicago, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Adrian, Hillsdale, Tecumseh and Sturgis. Edward's exhibits were described as "... the finest specimens of photographic art and skill exhibited at the Fair.... They far surpass anything of the same class here represented, (and) would have done credit to any fair in the United States." He received four First Premiums: for the best collection of photographs, for the best photograph colored in oil, for the best photograph in India ink, and for the best porcelain picture. He later claimed to have been awarded a fifth First Premium for the best double pictures, and some of his stereoscopic views from Sturgis have survived. At the St. Joseph County Fair two weeks later, he exhibited what were judged to be the best collection of photographs and ambrotypes, the best ambrotype and the best photograph. He also displayed "... several examples of miniatures on porcelain, a new achievement in photography, and the most delicate and perfect likeness yet produced." While Edward remained in Sturgis, the state and county fair awards were prominent in his advertising. He offered life size photographs, finished in oil or water colors by experienced and skilled New York City artists retained for such work, and handsomely framed for $40.00. Before moving on, he sold his photograph rooms to William Reiterman, an experienced and successful photographer from Toledo, Ohio. "THE HUYLAR GALLERY, Sturgis, Mich. Wm. Reiterman, Proprietor. Copies of this Picture can be had at any time." was printed on cartes de visite to which two cent revenue stamps were affixed. Though Reiterman purchased the Sturgis gallery in February, he still was advertising as the Huyler Art Gallery in August of 1866. By 1883 Edward had gray hair and dark brown eyes, and he was 5 feet 8¾ inches tall. He applied for a passport on April 3, 1883, with the intention of going abroad with his current wife, Martha N. Huylar. No record of the planned voyage has been found.

Daniel was born at Buffalo, New York, on March 25, 1878, eldest of the two or more children of Abraham N. and Rebecca Hyman. He became a five foot seven inch man with blue eyes, dark brown hair and a fair complexion. He enlisted in Company B of the Nineteenth United States Infantry at Pittsburgh on June 3, 1898. Daniel was discharged as a private with a rating of excellent at Ponce in Puerto Rico on April 13, 1899, and he re-enlisted the next day. He was discharged as a sergeant in July of 1899 at Camp Mead, Pennsylvania. He soon enlisted again, and served in the 27th Infantry until April 1, 1901. He enlisted in Company L of the 26th Infantry at Saint Louis, Missouri, on July 1, 1901. Something changed his mind, and Daniel deserted on July 17, 1901. Her father emigrated from the Polish region of Germany and Millicent was born in Michigan in 1881. She married Daniel about 1903, and they had two sons born in New York: Nathan about 1905 who died as a child, and Edgar in 1912 who survived. Their daughter Ruth and their son Richard were born in Michigan between 1919 and 1922. Daniel was president of the Hyman Amusement Company and was also the treasurer in 1924, when John W. Bates was vice president and Daniel's wife was secretary. Millicent was both secretary and treasurer of the company in 1925, and she was enumerated as an independent writer in 1930. Daniel was also the proprietor of a shooting gallery at 220 Woodward Avenue in 1926. He was 59 years old when he died in Detroit on January 31, 1938.

| Chippewa Lake resident .....             | 1953-1957 | 4   |

His father was born in Canada to Scotch parents, and Bain was born at Berea, Ohio, on October 31, 1886, second of the four children of Robert C. and Charlotte Elizabeth (Bowman) Hyslop. The family moved to the Weidman area while he was a youngster. About 1893 his father built a resort hotel on the east side of Coldwater Lake augmented by a private beach and picnic grounds with a shooting gallery, a horse-powered merry-go-round, a dance hall and a steam launch which made several trips around the lake on summer days. Charlotte Hyslop was not with the family in 1900 and 1910, and the housekeeping was being done by Bain's Aunt Linnie with the help of his sister Laura. A regional newspaper reported in the fall of 1907 that "Bain Hyslop is doing some fine work in picture taking." He sent his negatives to George H. Bayes at Manton for developing and printing on post card stock. Views of Weidman streets, mills, churches and annual field day celebrations were made from negatives with "Hyslop" or "Pub. By Hyslop." or "B. Hyslop Pub." lettered on them, as were views of Coldwater Dam and the grounds at Hotel Hyslop as well as a bird's-eye view of Sherman City. Some of these cards were post marked between 1909 and 1912. Bain was enumerated as a farmer in 1910, and about 1913 may have entered into a marriage that did not last. Alma W. Peterson was born in Illinois to Swedish parents in 1890, and she married Bain about 1918. Their children were born at Rodney: Laura in May of 1919, Hilma in 1924 or early in 1925, and Robert in June of 1926. Alma died in 1952. Bain was 70 years old when he died at Blodgett Hospital in Grand Rapids on March 4, 1957, following a brief illness. He was survived by two daughters, two sons, two sisters, a brother and nine grandchildren. Burial was in Rodney Cemetery.

Lewis was born to parents from Ohio on May 26, 1860, at Macomb, Illinois, fourth of the seven children of William L. and Anna Imes. He left Macomb when he was 18 years old for Chicago, where he spent three years in the gallery of Edward F. Hartley learning the photographic profession. Lewis worked as a photographer in a succession of western towns during the following years, including several places in California as well as the cities noted above. He returned to Chicago for a while before spending a season at Omaha. For eight years in the 1890s he was employed by the American Aristotype Company of New York City as a traveling agent or demonstrator in various western cities. The purchase of the Lansing photography business of Millard F. Hatton by Lewis was reported late in 1899. He married a 26-year-old lady named Jessie at about this time, and she was doing his retouching in 1900. Lewis employed Evelyn O. Hunter as a retoucher in 1904, and advertised in the 1904 Lansing directory: "Every City of Importance has Its One First-Class Photographer. LANSING HAS IMES. Lewis E. Imes, Portrait Photographer, Over State Savings Bank, Corner Wash. & Michigan Avenues. Portraits from Miniatures to Life Size, In Platinos, Platinums & Carbons. Photographs of Children a Specialty. Our Photographs Please Everybody. There is a Reason." The title "1905 MICHIGAN INTERCOLLEGIATE CHAMPIONS. IMES PHOTO." was lettered on the negative of a 6½ by 9 photograph of the Michigan Agricultural College football team on a 10 by 12 inch mount. Lewis copyrighted a 7½ by 12¾ photograph of "The Supreme Bench, State of Michigan" in 1910. He was vice president of the Professional Photographers' Society of Michigan in 1910 and 1911, was elected president of the society on March 20, 1912, and was still serving as president of the society early in 1914. His wife was given equal recognition as a photographer in 1910, and she was doing the retouching for his studio in 1920. He and Jessie took a European cruise in 1931.

Horace was born in August of 1861 in Oxford County, Ontario, and commuted across the Detroit River from Windsor, Ontario, to his Detroit jobs until 1880. Jean (sometimes Jennie) was born in Scotland on July 23, 1861, and she married Horace in 1881 or 1882. They both became naturalized citizens of the United States in the later 1880s. Their children were born in Detroit: Gordon in June of 1886, and Katherine in December of 1887. Nelson Shattuck was Horace's partner in 1885 and 1886. In his 20 by 60 foot gallery on the second floor at 59 Monroe Avenue, Horace specialized in fine portraiture and groups, and executed portraits in crayon, pastel, India ink, oil and water colors, all at moderate prices. Some of his employees were: Austin F. Mann, photographer in 1887; Dudley A. Kepperling, photographer from 1888 to 1890; Archibald McDonald, retoucher in 1889; William McDonald, artist in 1891; Otto Buck, photographer in 1895; and William Imm, photographer in 1903. Jean Imrie had a dry goods or millinery shop on Russell Street in Detroit from 1898 to 1901. Horace lived 74 years before he died on July 15, 1935. Jean lived until June 29, 1937. 1 2

John was born in Indiana in June of 1866, eldest of the four or more children of Samuel and Susan Inbody. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Adelaide J. Zimmerman was born in Indiana in October of 1873, the daughter of Abraham and Catherine M. (Beam) Zimmerman. She married John in 1891 or 1892, and they had no children eight years later. "MADE BY J. INBODY, ELKHART, IND. HOME PHONE 500" was printed on the post card backs of many photographs, while "Copyright, Inbody." or "© J.I." was lettered on their negatives along with brief captions. At the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, Inbody photographed University Hall, the Engineering Laboratory, Newberry Hall, and interiors of the Central Library, the Law Library and Alumni Memorial Hall. Some of his other postal photos were a bird's-eye view of Adrian and a stone railroad bridge there; a general store and a church at Mottville; a bird's-eye view and a business street scene at Hillsdale, plus the post office, a parade, the grandstands at the fair, and a loop-the-loop aviator; Divinity Hall at Hillsdale College; the main street of Cassopolis and the Opera House there; swimming and sailing and cottages and an inn on Baw Beese Lake; three different resorts on Christiana Lake; and several views of Klinger Lake. Many of the cards were mailed between the summer of 1907 and the summer of 1915. John was located at 117 West Lexington Avenue in Elkhart in 1908. John was a widower by 1920, when he was one of four boarders with the family of an Erie couple. 1 t

Adolph was born in 1848 at Zurich, Switzerland, and immigrated to the United States in 1854 with his parents, Henry and Mary Isler. In addition to drugs, his merchandise included books in 1875 and stationery in 1877 and 1881. m 4
Anna (often Annie) was born in England in October of 1852, and she was brought to America two years later. During her first marriage to a man named Retallick (possibly the photographer William Retallick) she gave birth about 1873 to Winifred, who came along when Annie married Adolph at Houghton on March 7, 1878. Their daughter Lena was born in 1879, and their son Harry was born in June of 1885. Adolph advertised in 1881: "Red Jacket, Calumet P. O., Mich. ISLER'S Prescription Drugstore. You can get the Finest Copper and Silver Specimens. Photographic Views of the Celebrated Calumet & Hecla Mine and Vicinity. Job printing neatly done." He was the copper country correspondent for the Marquette Mining Journal from 1893 to 1900, served much of this time as a United States Deputy Marshal for the upper peninsula, and in 1895 was "... Proprietor 'Isler's News Bureau' covering the Lake Superior Copper Mining District. Special reports promptly furnished, by wire or mail, to the 'Press' or private individuals, on any mining property or industry. - PHOTOGRAPHIC views of the mines, underground as well as of the surface, especially of the Calumet & Hecla, Tamarack, Quincy, Atlantic, Osceola and other mines, also towns and scenery, also copper and silver specimens. - A. F. ISLER, Manufacturers' and Jobber's Agent. Manufacturers or wholesale dealers wanting a representation in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan will please address me, Lake Linden, Mich." Adolph produced stereoscopic views and many 8 by 10 inch photographs, including views of men, women and children gathered around the Osceola mine head during the fire of September 7, 1895, listing in order of nationality the thirty miners who lost their lives. In 1899 his specialties were Lake Superior Views of mining, underground machinery, towers and winter scenery, as well as copper and silver specimens. He worked as an enumerator for the 1900 Federal Census of Calumet Township. He was city editor of the Copper Country Evening News from 1900 until 1904. In 1901 he advertised Artistic Photographs and Souvenir Books of the Copper Country, "... COPPER and SILVER SPECIMENS, MINING VIEWS, MAPS and SONG BIRDS,... Hartz Mountain Song Canaries and Andreasberg Warblers a Specialty. Every Bird Guaranteed." Adolph's "Headquarters for Birds, Specimens and Lake Superior Views" moved from 328 Fifth Street to 194 Sixth Street on May 6, 1903. He was the Calumet representative of the Hancock Journal from 1904 to 1908, and carried photo supplies from 1906 into 1908. Monochromatic press printed post cards reproduced from Adolph's photographs included: "ISLER'S LAKE SUPERIOR CARD No. 6, TIMBERING IN CALUMET AND HECLA MINE" and "ISLER'S LAKE SUPERIOR CARD No. 7. HANCOCK AND PEWABIC ENGINES CALUMET AND HECLA MINE." He supplied a large collection of his views to the Calumet & Hecla library, but retained most of his old negatives. His final illness began late in 1911, and he went to the University of Michigan hospital at Ann Arbor on January 13, had an operation for cancer of the bladder on January 15, and died early in the morning of January 23, 1912. He was survived by his wife and their daughter and son, and his body was returned to Calumet for the funeral. 2

His parents spoke Yiddish when they emigrated from Russia, and sources through 1910 indicated that William was 1 born on July 15, 1882, and had emigrated with them in 1889. Later sources said that William was born at Chicago, 4 1
Illinois, on the same date. He was living in 1900 with his sister Ida and her new husband, Samuel Goldblatt, along with 4 1 a younger sister and their widowed mother, Mrs. Rosy Israel. Even as a youngster William was interested in 1 2 portraiture. He studied camera manipulation and technique at the Illinois College of Photography some years before he 2 opened his first studio at Negaunee. Edith was born in Michigan to Canadian parents in 1883, and she married William 2 1

1911 William copyrighted a 5¾ by 4 inch photograph of the Negaunee National Bank Building. In 1913 he succeeded 5 P

1918 William was medium sized with blue eyes and black hair. He advertised in 1922: "Photography, pictures copied, 4 P president of the Michigan Photographers' Society in 1932, and served for two years. Two bromide or chloride prints 7 8 by William were selected for the First Annual Michigan Exhibition of Pictorial Photography at the Detroit Institute of 8

Arts in May of 1932. He was among the few professional photographers to have portraits accepted for display in the 2

His father came from Connecticut and Edwin was born in Ohio to a mother from Massachusetts in September of 1832, eldest of the three children of Abel and Lucy Ives. Her father came from Massachusetts and Almira was born in New York in May of 1833, last of the five children of Marsena and Sarah Brooks and their only daughter. She married Edwin about 1852. Their son Allen was born in Ohio in 1853, and their son Lowell was born in Michigan about 1859. Their daughters Carrie and Kittie were born in Michigan between 1861 and 1869. Edwin joined the National Photographic Association before its first annual meeting and exhibition at Boston in June of 1869, and used the NPA monogram on some of his card photograph mounts in the early 1870s. Later in 1869 The Philadelphia Photographer offered prizes for the best pair of negatives and prints submitted in three classes: portrait, composition and landscape. Edwin sent two cabinet portraits on glass 7 by 5 ½ of a lady with very dark hair and a white dress, making a difficult subject for the camera. The judges felt that he could have done better with the lighting and the exposure, and should have exposed the prints longer. Edwin was among the photographers who converged on Chicago and made stereoscopic views while the ruins were still smoldering in October of 1871. He also made stereo views of residences and public buildings at Niles, including views in Silver Brook Cemetery and a very beautiful series of snow scenes. He used the same advertisement in the Gazetteer for 1873 and in the 1873 and 1874 Premium Lists for Berrien County Fairs: "... Pictures IN ALL STYLES made at this Gallery, and Work Warranted Equal to the Best. I also keep constantly on hand a Large Assortment of Frames, Albums, Picture Cords, Nails, Glass, Mats, and in fact everything in the Picture Line. Give me a call." The lists included a Premium of $2.00 for the Best Collection of Photographs exhibited. Edwin attended both the inaugural convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in 1880 and the second annual convention at New York City in August of 1881, where he was elected vice president of the PA of A for Michigan. He was also at Milwaukee for the fourth annual convention of the PA of A in August of 1883. Early in 1893 Edwin moved into a new photograph gallery which had just been fitted up for him. He was elected second vice president of the Michigan Photographers' Association in 1898, and was still an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905.

His father came from Ohio and Franklin was born in Iowa to an Irish mother in December of 1863, second of the eight children of Christopher C. and Sarah Jacks. His brother Frederick was born in Minnesota about 1861, and six siblings were born in Michigan between 1867 and 1879. Her father emigrated from Scotland and Kate Ferguson was born in Muskegon to an Irish mother in September of 1867, and she married Frank about 1885. Their sons were born in Michigan: Francis in October of 1893, and Frederick in November of 1895. Frank advertised nationally in the summer of 1895: "WANTED - To rent gallery with privilege of buying. I have money and ability. Address F. S. Jacks, Muskegon. Mich." He advertised again two years later: "HELP WANTED - Some one to find me an empty gallery for rent; liberal cash reward and position when started...." Trade cards have survived for: "LATEST SOCIETY FAD. Being made with great success in leading studios of Boston and New York. Special Advertising Offer. 2 Photos for 10c. Or 6 For 25 Cents. JACKS. 204 and 206 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Come in the morning if possible." His move from Detroit to Muskegon to open a gallery was reported in the summer of 1899. The Saginaw photographer was identified as Frank or Francis Jacques, and in 1900 he employed May Weaver as a photographer. He was advertising again in October of 1905: "WANTED - A first-class all around man. Send photo and state salary...." Frank served as president of the Professional Photographers' Society of Michigan in 1914 and 1915, and was one of the fifteen photographers that received Salon Honors at the Cleveland convention of the Photographers' Association of America in July of 1916. Frank died at his Muskegon residence as the result of a stroke of paralysis at 10:30 in the morning of August 12, 1917, and his wife lived on in Muskegon until July of 1920.

Adelbert was born at Kalamazoo to parents from New York on April 18, 1887, last of the three children of George Jay Jackson and Rose Hill (Grosvenor) Jackson, and the brother of the Leonard W. Jackson profiled below. He became a tall man with brown eyes and hair. Maude Nellie Draine was born at Garrett, Indiana, on October 28, 1887, the younger daughter of Marshall and Mildred (Kalb) Draine. She married Adelbert about 1907, and their sons were born in Kalamazoo: Stanley on August 9, 1908, and Robert on July 28, 1911. Adelbert expected in 1917 to be exempted from military service because of his dependents, as well as defects in his sight and hearing. Maude died in Kalamazoo County on September 30, 1968, and Adelbert died in the Masonic Home at Alma up in Gratiot County on October 27, 1969.

Alfred was born on May 24, 1887, at Fleet in Lincolnshire, England, sixth of the eight children of George and Sarah Jane (Lambert) Jackson. He became a medium sized man with brown eyes and dark hair, and left his family behind when he immigrated in 1911. Violet was born in England in 1890, and she came to America and married Alfred about 1913. Their children were born in Michigan: Alfred in 1914, David in October of 1915, Alice about 1920, and Grace about 1922. Early in 1920 Alfred advertised: "PORTRAIT, COMMERCIAL and AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHY. 2D FLOOR. D. U. R. WAITING ROOM. 50 S. SAGINAW. Main Entrance from Inside...." D.U.R. stood for the interurban system called the Detroit Urban Railway. Alfred applied for United States citizenship between 1917 and 1920. He was naturalized by 1930, when he was commuting to his Pontiac studio from suburban Waterford Township.

His parents emigrated from England shortly before Bradford was born in Ohio in July of 1853. He was the third and last child of William and Priscilla Jackson, and the brother of the William P. Jackson profiled below. Her father emigrated from England and Millie was born in Ohio to a mother from Vermont about 1855. By 1880 Millie had become the first Mrs. Bradford D. Jackson. Bradford attended the fourth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in August of 1883. As a landscape photographer he utilized stereoscopic, promenade and 10 by 12 inch formats. He published a series of views of the Grand River flood and log jam at Grand Rapids on July 26, 1883, and a series of over 100 Northern Michigan views. This was printed on the back of some of his cabinet mounts: "B. D. JACKSON, PORTRAIT & LANDSCAPE PHOTOGRAPHER, 103 Monroe Street, Grand Rapids, Michigan. All Styles and Sizes Portrait Work, From Cards to Life Size. Photos of residences, blocks, stores, mills, factories, all kinds of machinery, horses, cattle, cemetery lots and monuments, &c., made to order. Northern Michigan Views, a Fine and Choice Collection, Comprising Views of Mackinac Island, Fort Mackinac, Saint Ignace, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Harbor Point, Charlevoix, &c., for sale at Jackson's Gallery." Bradford boarded with his brother William during the early 1870s and succeeded him at 103 Monroe Street in 1884. He produced a composite photograph of the "A CLASS, Hope College, '89" by tacking up 24 individual cabinet portraits and photographing the arrangement. He employed Samuel A. Deter as a photo printer in 1886, Miss Nellie Reynders as a photo printer from 1888 through 1890, Newell S. Chase as a photographer in 1891, Mrs. Leonard J. Dolphin as a clerk in 1893 and as a photo printer in 1895, Thomas F. Loftus as a photographer in 1894 and 1895, Mrs. Edith L. Peeps as a photographer in 1898, and Miss Irene H. Benjamin as a photo printer from 1899 through 1901. Bradford advertised nationally early in 1895: "STAMP PHOTOS FOR THE TRADE. Photographers, why not, these dull times, offer with each dozen of your best cabinets a dozen, or two dozen, stamp photos. It pays! Send stamp for samples and price. B. D. Jackson, Grand Rapids, Mich." Bradford's second marriage was to Mrs. Cora E. Lester in March of 1900. Cora was born in Michigan to parents from New York in December of 1860, and brought along her seven-year-old daughter Ruth to share her home with Bradford. Cora was still living as a widow in Glendale in 1964 when Bradford's accumulation of prints and negatives was offered to a local library. About 750 prints and over 2000 negatives were noted, including post cards, stereographs and larger formats. The negatives were both glass and film. The subject matter was street scenes, buildings, events and much scenery, predominantly in southern California. No Michigan material was mentioned.

His father came from New York and Charles was born in Ohio to a mother from Pennsylvania in October of 1835, the only child of Morrice and Eunice (later Emma) Jackson. Her father came from Massachusetts and Mary A. Wade was born in New York in November of 1836, the only child of Ebenezer F. and Hannah Wade. She was a Corunna school teacher before she married Charles Jackson in 1856, and they never had any children. Charles produced tintypes as well as card photographs from Corunna. His gallery and furniture shop were at the corner of Shiawassee Avenue and State Street in 1876. He also wrote insurance and was a gifted musician. At one time he had his own band. He was the last known owner of Bradley Martin's famous violin. Charles played the violin for the last time only a week before he died. After Mary died in 1918, Charles lived at the Main Street home of Mrs. George W. McClellan. He was 89 when he died there on December 13, 1924, and he left more than $10,000 to Christ Episcopal Church. Burial was next to Mary in Corunna's Pine Tree Cemetery.

Jackson advertised locally late in 1852: "DAGUERREOTYPES. The undersigned respectfully addresses to the inhabitants of Tecumseh and vicinity, that he has taken rooms at the Michigan House, for the purpose of making miniature portraits. Having had long experience at the best Establishment in New York, together with one of the best and largest Camera you'll see, the undersigned flatters himself that he can suit the most fastidious. Ladies and Gentlemen are cordially invited to give him a call, and if they are pleased with his modus operandi, to sit and have their beautiful selves transferred to a silver plate set in Caskets of gold.

TO A LADY

If sometimes midst the haunts of men / Thy image from my breast may fade,
 The lonely home presents again / Thy cherished semblance, lovely maid.

His father came from Virginia and Harvey was born at Cleveland, Ohio, on March 26, 1876, last of the two children of James and Virginia (later Jennie) Jackson. His mother was born either in Virginia or in Michigan. Harvey moved to Detroit with his family when he was quite young, and became a short man with grey eyes and black hair. He was living with his widowed mother in 1900. Helen was born in Massachusetts to parents from North Carolina in 1878, and she married Harvey in 1905 or 1906. Their children were born in Detroit: Harvey in 1907, Helen in 1910, John in 1914, Lucinda in November of 1917, and Isabel in 1923 or early in 1924. Harvey was the first, and for several years the only, black person to establish a photographic studio in Detroit. From 1919 on, he emphasized picture frames and enlargements as well as his photography. He applied a small label to the back of some of his framed photographs: "HARVEY C. JACKSON, Photographer - Enlargements, Pictures, Frames. 474 Beaubien St. Ridge 2850-J, Detroit, Mich." His studio remained in the same location during 1920, while its address changed along with most others in Detroit. His photography was finally disrupted by his cardiac and stomach problems. Harvey was confined to his bed only shortly before his death in his Detroit home on March 15, 1957, at the age of 81. His body was cremated. He was survived by two sons and three daughters. One son was a high school history teacher. One daughter was a librarian and the others were teachers, one at the college level. There is a small group of Harvey's photographs in the Burton Historical Collection.

His father came from Ohio and Isaac was born in Illinois to a mother from New York on October 7, 1885, the younger of the two sons of Isaac and Amanda Jackson. His dress maker mother was enumerated as head of the family in 1900, while his father, fifteen years older and a stenographer or court reporter, was listed as her husband. Isaac matured into a stout man with green eyes and dark hair. Gertrude was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in 1885, and she married Isaac about 1905. Their children were born in Michigan: Orville in the spring of 1908, Gertrude in 1913, and Jerald in 1923 or early in 1924. From 1910 through 1923 the home of Isaac and his family was in Highland Park. They moved back into Detroit in 1924. Isaac maintained a studio in the Avenue Theatre Building at the northeast corner of Woodward and Jefferson Avenues from 1906 through 1921. The most common props used there for post card photographs were solid oak chairs and stands, but he also used a cardboard automobile with no attempt at realism. At 110 Woodward Avenue he seated some of his patrons in a very realistic prop vehicle. His postal imprints included: "I. D. JACKSON, ROOMS 3-4-5, 74 WOODWARD AVE., AVENUE THEATRE BLDG., DETROIT, MICH." and "... Duplicates made." Post card photographs of Detroit streets and parks with Jackson imprints were apparently made from the negatives of others, probably amateurs. Lawrence & Jackson were identified as jewelers in 1912. 74 became 416 Woodward Avenue when most Detroit addresses were changed during 1920. Edward J. Arthur was associated with Isaac in the I. D. Jackson Company and in the Hedges-Sarjeant Studio. About 1927 Isaac was an honorary member of The Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit.

He matured into a medium sized man with gray eyes and black hair. South Bend, Indiana, had a photographer named L. W. Jackson at 221 South Michigan Street in 1898. Cullen C. Packard and Leonard were proprietors of the Penny Gallery shortly before Packard's death on May 31, 1898. Leonard may have been associated with the gallery operated in the name of Mrs. Mary H. Packard in 1899. Estelle was born in Michigan in 1881 or 1882, and she married Leonard about 1899. Their children were born in Kalamazoo: Frederick in 1900 or early in 1901, and Beryl in 1904. The listing in the gazetteer for 1901 was for L. O. Jackson. "Photo by L. W. Jackson, Kalamazoo & Yorkville, Mich." was printed on the back of a postal photograph of three young women and three young men seated outdoors. Something happened to Estelle after 1910, and by 1918 Leonard was married to a lady named Ethel. Ethel M. Deyo was born at Hurley, South Dakota, to a mother from Indiana on September 16, 1890, the daughter of George and Phoebe (Cloud) Deyo. Frederick Jackson was out on his own by 1920, but Beryl was living with Leonard and Ethel, who never had children of her own. Leonard died at Des Moines on September 6, 1859. | Ralph was born in Plymouth County, Iowa, to parents from New York on September 11, 1879, fourth of the five sons of James D. and Anna E. Jackson. His father was a dentist. Ralph became an average sized man with blue eyes and dark brown hair. Blanche (later Irene) was born in Nebraska to parents from Illinois in 1886, and she married Ralph about 1906. Their children were born in Illinois: Donald in 1907, and Shirley in 1914. Ralph was enumerated as a commercial photographer in 1910, and his studio was at 5622 Broadway in 1918. "By R. E. Jackson, Chic" or "By R. E. Jackson, Edgew. Chic. Ill" or "Jackson Studio, Edgewater, Chic. Ill" or "By Ralph E. Jackson, Edgewater, Chic. Ill." or just "R. E. Jackson" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs along with rather large and "artistic" captions. Some of the negatives had numbers like 4, 6, 22, 30, 40, 60, 124, 128, 304, 609 and 1205. The pictures were of Sawyer and of Bethany Beach on Lake Michigan two miles west of the railroad through Sawyer. The earliest photos were mostly of Sawyer, were not numbered, and some were mailed in July and August of 1907. Most of the numbered photographs were of resorts and activities at Bethany Beach, with some postmarks between 1910 and 1921. Number 1205 was a Sawyer street scene with automobiles of the late 1920s or the early 1930s. | 1 31 33 111 3ttt 4ttt |     |

His father came from Ohio and Will was born in Wisconsin to a mother from New York on August 31, 1874, last of the two sons of Michael W. and Roxa A. Jackson. He became a medium sized man with blue eyes and dark brown hair. Will advertised in a photographic periodical in the spring of 1906: "WANTED - Position by steady, single, all-around man; Middle West or West preferred; open for work June 1. Address W. F. Jackson, Mayfield, Mich." He advertised again in the fall of the same year: "WANTED - To rent studio in northern states, or would accept position as capable, all-around workman and operator in north or west. Address W. F. Jackson, 214 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich." This was the address of the Detroit photographers Charles Hopp & Company. Will remained single and was living in 1900 and 1910 with his widowed mother. Elizabeth was born in Michigan in 1881, and she married Will about 1910. Their children were born in Michigan: Phillip in 1911, Richard in 1914, Robert in October of 1918, and Judith in 1922 or early in 1923. Olivet is located in Walton Township, and post card photographs such as those made from a negative on which "Walton Township Unit School Jackson Phgtr" was lettered probably were Will's work. He took a large camera a few miles south of Olivet on August 18, 1920, to photograph those attending a school reunion at Lee Center in Calhoun County. Will was enumerated as a photographer with a general trade in 1920, and as a landscape artist in 1930.

William was born at Keeseville, New York, on April 4, 1843, first of the seven children of George Hallock Jackson and Harriet Maria (Allen) Jackson. Emily was born in Maryland in May of 1844, and she married William about 1874. Their son Clarence was born in the District of Columbia in January of 1876, and their daughters were born in Maryland: Louise in March of 1880, and Harriet in February of 1882. William's early years in the east, the survey era, and his years in Denver have been the subject of several books and articles. He was on the first published list of members of the National Photographic Association in July of 1869. A book entitled Jackson's Famous Photographs contained eighty 11 by 14 inch reproductions of photographs of the World's Columbian Exposition, each copyright 1894 by W. H. Jackson. William received the first prize for landscape photography at the St. Louis convention of the Photographers' Association of America in July of 1894, shortly before he began a seventeen month tour of the world covering 100,000 miles. The Photochrom Company of Detroit bought out the W. H. Jackson Photograph & Publishing Company in the fall of 1897, acquiring William's negatives and his services as a photographer, while he received a comfortable salary and a substantial interest in the company. During the next few years William traveled from Boston to San Diego and from Quebec to Florida and Texas, taking photographs and promoting the color prints produced by Photochrom. A diary kept by a young man who accompanied him on a picture taking trip for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad through parts of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa in the autumn of 1898 has survived. William's life changed significantly in 1903. After many years in the field, he enjoyed the more routine task of managing a printing plant, the opportunity to spend more time with his family, and watching the growth of Detroit from a big town into the automotive capital of the world. The Detroit Publishing Company absorbed the Photochrom Company and concentrated upon printing quality post cards. When the business recession of 1920-21 and competition from less labor intensive printing methods finally forced the Detroit Publishing Company into receivership, William moved to Washington where he had access to archives important to his writing and painting. He moved to New York to become Research Secretary of the Oregon Trail Memorial Association. He usually returned to Detroit each spring to spend his birthday with his daughter, and often to visit Henry Ford and the photographer Charles Tremear. During such a visit in 1936, he arranged with Edsel Ford for his 40,000 glass negatives to be preserved by the Edison Institute. William lived fully the 99 years before his death on June 29, 1942.

William was born in England in July of 1844, eldest of the three children of William and Priscilla Jackson. He immigrated to Ohio with his parents and sister in 1863 shortly before the birth of his brother Bradford, who is profiled above. Civil War privates in the 187th and 189th Ohio Infantry and a drummer in the 155th Ohio Infantry each were named William P. Jackson. Alice was born in Ohio in 1850 or early in 1851, and by 1880 was the first Mrs. William P. Jackson. William's gallery was over the Star Clothing House about 1880. He was succeeded by his brother Bradford D. Jackson at 103 Monroe Street about 1884, and at 35 Monroe Street in 1895. Sarah (often Lizzie) was born in Illinois to parents from Ohio, and she married William about 1890. Their daughter Vivian was born in Washington in September of 1893, their son Glenn was born in Illinois in January of 1897, and their son Leonard was born in Washington in 1905. Sarah conducted a dress making business from their home in 1920. She was a widow in 1930, when she was living by herself right down the street from her son Glenn and his wife and daughter.

Moses McNaughton, his daughter Belle McNaughton, and Mrs. Anna C. Vail were directors of a corporation capitalized at $30,000 which was formed to establish the Jackson Art Gallery. Anna had been conducting a gallery in the same location, and she and Belle operated the Jackson Art Gallery. They advertised in August of 1876: "The JACKSON ART GALLERY will make their very best style of card photographs at $1.50 per dozen, for the next 30 days. This is the only time and cheapest rates that such pictures have been offered at in this city." Before the end of 1876, Frank C. Bracy had become proprietor of the Jackson Art Gallery, and had reduced the capital stock to $25,000. Frank continued the business in his own name at the same address through 1879.

An editor noted in April of 1901: "A very useful device for shading the lens during exposure, which we should have had years ago, has been introduced by the Jackson Lens Shade Company, Jackson, Michigan. This is a small, but well-made attachment, adjustable to any lens up to 5 by 7 inches or box (fixed focus) camera, and in any desired position, effectually screening the lens. Its usefulness in photographing in sunlight or outdoors generally, in interior or flashlight work where troublesome reflections are encountered, will be readily appreciated. The instrument has a graduated scale showing how far it may project without cutting off the light with any particular lens. At the nominal price asked for it (Fifty cents) the attachment should find a place in every amateur's equipment." This advertisement appeared a few months later: "Nicholson's Adjustable LENS SHADE (Patent applied for). It is endorsed by leading photographers and photo magazines. Its value in Flashlight, Marine and all outdoor work is unlimited. No. 1, 4 x 5 and 5 x 7 Folding Cameras and all Kodaks except F.P.K. Other sizes to order. No. 2, Magazine and Box Cameras. For sale by all dealers or sent by mail on receipt of PRICE, 50 CENTS. THE JACKSON LENS SHADE CO., JACKSON, MICHIGAN." Patent Number 698,999, Shade for Photographic Lenses, was granted in April of 1902 to Frank W. Nicholson of Jackson.

Joseph was born in Canada in November of 1865, second of the six children of Frederick and Anna Joque. In 1867 he and his sister Mary accompanied their parents to Michigan, where their siblings were born. The George Joque profiled in a later entry was Joseph's brother. The surname was spelled Jock in the 1880 census report. Joseph became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1898, and he was providing a home in 1900 for his widowed mother, his sister Annie, and his brother Edward. Joseph finally married in 1910 when he was 44 years old. His bride was Anna (sometimes Annie), who was born in Canada in 1889. Their children were born in Michigan: Ernest in 1911, Geretha early in 1903, Edward (later Leo) in June of 1915, John in July of 1917, Clifford in November of 1919, Robert in 1920, Joan in October of 1926, and Frederick in January of 1929. Clifford died as a child.

Wladyslaw was born at Filipow, Poland, on July 12, 1883, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Witalis Jakubowski. He 2 immigrated in November of 1903, and became a naturalized citizen of the United States on November 29, 1911. He 2 was a five foot six inch man with gray eyes and dark brown hair who was sometimes listed as Walter, Ladislaus, 2 1
Wladislaus or Wladislaw, and in 1926 as William. He visited relatives in Poland from September of 1909 to March of 2 1910, and between February and June of 1914. Wanda was born in Poland in 1898, immigrated in 1915, and within a 2 1 year was married to Wladyslaw. Their daughter Sophie was born in Detroit on November 18, 1917. The Litynski- 1 2
Jakubowski Company had studios at 376 and 399 East Canfield Avenue, 1150 Chene Street, and 1525 Michigan d
Avenue in 1912. They may have consolidated at 1525 Michigan Avenue in 1913. The studios at 376 East Canfield and d 1150 Chene were reinstated in 1914, and 376 was replaced by 402 Canfield Avenue in 1915. Wladimer E. Litynski d was president of the company, George Ebling was vice president, and Wladyslaw Jakubowski was secretary-treasurer. d
"W. JAKUBOWSKI, 1525 MICHIGAN AVE., DETROIT, MICH." was printed on the post card backs of studio t portraits. Wladyslaw's parents died in Poland during World War I and left him an estate. He sold his photography t 2 business and left with his wife and daughter to settle the estate on May 27, 1920. They spent a month in England and 2 a week in Warsaw, and they arrived in Lowicz on July 12, 1920. The settlement took longer than expected, and 2 Wladyslaw had his passport extended twice so that it expired on October 5, 1921. His daughter Sophie fell ill in June 2 of 1921, and she died in March of 1922. In order to return to America he applied for a new passport through the 2 United States Consul at Warsaw, and it was issued on August 17, 1922. Apparently there were more delays and 2 4 extensions, for Wladyslaw sailed from Liverpool, England, on S. S. Montroyal and arrived at Quebec, Canada, on July 4 19, 1924. His partner in 1926 was Klemens Koltonski. 4 d

Don was born in Detroit on August 7, 1886, the only child of Samuel A. and Bertha D. James. He became a medium sized man with blue eyes and light brown hair. Florence M. Lodge was born in 1891, and she married Don about 1912. They had no children. Kenneth A. Arthur, son of the prominent photographer James Arthur, was Don's partner in the James-Arthur Company. They used two simultaneous locations in 1916. Don organized the Walsh & James Company, a real estate firm, in 1918 and was associated for the rest of his life with this company and its successor, the Walsh, James & Wasey Company. They maintained an office in Detroit's Penobscot Building until 1951 as well as the Birmingham office, and their slogan was: "Developer of Birmingham - Pioneer of Bloomfield Hills." Don served as the first mayor of Bloomfield Hills, and as president of the Detroit Real Estate Board, the Michigan Real Estate Association and the Detroit Boat Club. He was 88 years old when he died at his Bloomfield Hills home on September 26, 1974, survived by his wife. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery. 2 1

Mark was born on December 27, 1830, at Gilsum, New Hampshire, to Jessie and Charlotte (Smith) Jaquith. On September 19, 1859, he and 27-year-old Miss Charlotte Rolls were married at Trenton. Their daughter Maud was born on June 26, 1860. Mark was 6 feet ½ inch tall with a light complexion, grey eyes and light hair on November 8, 1862, when he entered service as First Lieutenant of Company D at the organization of the Ninth Michigan Cavalry. He had been commissioned Captain of Company G before he was mustered into the army with the Ninth at Coldwater on May 7, 1863. The regiment was armed with Spencer rifles and by July had taken part in the pursuit of General Morgan in Kentucky and Ohio. The Ninth Cavalry was with General Burnside when he crossed the Cumberland Mountains in Tennessee and took Knoxville on September 3, 1863, and on the expedition against Cumberland Gap. By the end of the campaign in East Tennessee the regiment was exhausted and was finding little food and forage. They had no replacement clothing or tents, and most companies had been dismounted. In the spring of 1864 they returned to Nicholasville, Kentucky, for new mounts and equipment. Mark had been afflicted with rheumatism during the fall and winter to the extent that he was often unable to perform his duties, so he resigned at Nicholasville on June 10, 1864, and was honorably discharged. He and Charlotte had a son named Mark who was born in 1874 or early in 1875 and died as a child. In the years that followed, the rheumatism not only incapacitated Mark for manual labor, but frequently kept him from performing light decorative painting. He was at times characterized as an artist. Mark died of senility at Trenton on November 25, 1913. Charlotte soon moved to Grand Rapids.

| Mark was born at Melrose, Massachusetts, to English parents on March 1, 1863, last of the seven children of Daniel and Mary (Mantz) Jefferson. He matured into a five foot ten inch man with grey eyes, light hair and a fair complexion. He went from Argentina in October of 1889 to Europe, and then from Le Havre, France, on S. S. La Normandie, arriving at New York on December 9, 1889. Her father emigrated from the Prussian region of Germany and Theodora was born at Independence, Texas, to a mother from New Hampshire on January 9, 1863, the daughter of Theodore A. E. and Elizabeth Augusta (Horne) Bohnstedt. She married Mark on August 22, 1891, and they had three children born at Lexington, Massachusetts: Geoffrey on July 4, 1893, Theodore on August 24, 1895, and Barbara on January 17, 1897. Their daughter Phoebe was born on May 22, 1898, at Cambridge, Massachusetts, and their son Hilary was born on August 10, 1900, at Gilmanton, New Hampshire, where the family was living while Mark was working in Brockton. Mark began teaching at the Michigan State Normal College in Ypsilanti in 1901, and Theodora died at Ypsilanti on November 6, 1913. Her father came from Wisconsin and Clara was born in Michigan to an English mother in 1887, the daughter of John Jason Hopkins and Jane (Buck) Hopkins. She married Mark on June 15, 1915, at Holland, Michigan. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Sally on March 28, 1916, and Mary in 1923 or early in 1924. Their son Thomas was born in California on August 2, 1920. Mark sailed from New York on S. S. Santa Ana on April 1, 1918, to study European colonies in Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay for the American Geographic Society. He returned from Buenos Aires on S. S. Vasari and arrived at New York early in August of 1918. Mark was cartographer in 1918 and 1919 to the World War I peace commission that negotiated the treaty of Versailles. He visited Central America seven years later, and returned from Cristobal in the Canal Zone to New York on S. S. Sixaola, arriving on December 30, 1926. Mark was head of the Geography Department in the Michigan State Normal College at Ypsilanti from 1901 until he was forced to retire in 1939 by a new state compulsory retirement law. A large group of his stereographs came on the market about 1980. "Prof. Jefferson, E.M.U., Ypsilanti, Mich." was written on the back of many of them. On the face of the mounts were written captions such as "May 8 '09 (9-12) Jewell's Creek, Looking down to Huron River" and "Grand Ledge, Coal Pit by River..." and "Looking South Forester, Mich. H Water 3 1/2' L. Huron waves cutting away, water muddy 7, 1929." Mark died at Ypsilanti on August 8, 1949. The Mark Jefferson Science Building at Eastern Michigan University was dedicated on October 24, 1969. | 5 15 22 33 15555 15 222 3433 44 tttt 54 |     |

Benjamin was born in London, England, in 1832 or 1833 and came to America in 1856. He spent a while at New York City and less than two years in Canada before locating at Rockland. Julia was born in Switzerland about 1842, and was brought to the United States in 1850. She married Benjamin about 1863, and their children were born in Michigan: Emma in July of 1865, William in 1867, Edwin in 1868, Walter in July of 1870, Ulysses in October of 1873, Francis in May of 1875, Lewis in July of 1877, Nettie in December of 1879, Benjamin in October of 1884, and Milton in July of 1886. Benjamin built up his stock at Rockland to include everything marketable, from a reaper to a packet of pins, dry goods, groceries, hardware, stoves and tinware, queensware, hats, caps, boots and shoes, ready-made clothing, sewing machines, threshing machines, farming implements, wagons, buggies, harnesses, glazed sash, blinds, doors, &c. The value of his stock came to average $30,000, and sometimes peaked at $50,000. To accommodate his customers he ran a passenger wagon to Greenland, six miles away, and to the neighboring mines. Despite the limited agricultural activity in the area, by 1883 he had sold four threshing machines, one reaper and eight mowers. He owned a farm of 250 acres with 100 acres under cultivation, as well as a tract of 14 acres in Rockland. Benjamin also acted as a broker, bought and sold government bonds, and held various local offices. For six or more years after 1895, one or more of his sons were proprietors of the store. Julia was enumerated as a Rockland widow in 1900, when her son Walter was the merchant.

His father came from New York and Halsey was born in Michigan on April 2, 1881, last of the four children and the only son of Halsey B. and Hattie Jenks. His mother seems to have died about the time he was born, and his father married again before Halsey was a year old. Halsey became a slender man with blue eyes and black hair. He and two sisters were living in 1900 with their father and their step-mother, Mrs. Katie Jenks. Her father also came from New York and Florence was born in Michigan on September 11, 1882, the daughter of George Walter Palmer and Maria L. (Suggitt) Palmer. She married Halsey about 1904, and their son Halsey was born in 1905. He was their only child. Florence was working for a knitting company in 1920, and was a saleslady in their grocery store in 1930.

His father emigrated from Scotland, Isaac was born in New York State on October 26, 1833, and he spent most of his early manhood as a farmer. He and Miss Mary Ann Wiles were married at Fenton on September 16, 1860, and later had four children. Oscar C. Jenks was born January 8, 1862; Frank I. Jenks was born September 14, 1863; Ida Belle Jenks was born November 3, 1867, and John Jenks was born in 1873 or 1874. At Cohoctah on October 5, 1863, Isaac enlisted in Company B of the Eleventh Michigan Cavalry, and he was mustered into service as a wagoner at Kalamazoo two days later. While attending a water call early in March of 1864 at Lexington, Kentucky, his horse fell into a ditch throwing Isaac onto his right shoulder and severely injuring it. He was confined to the regimental hospital for two months or more, and was unable to return to field duty while he remained in the army. He was hospitalized at Knoxville, Tennessee, in May and June of 1865, and was mustered out of the service from there on June 16, 1865. Not many years later he lived for eighteen months at Lexington, Kentucky. By January of 1875 he had worked as a farmer, clerk and artist since leaving the service, and was 5 feet 5 inches tall with a light complexion, brown hair and blue eyes. His Fenton gallery was located on Leroy Street in 1881 according to another listing in the same source. Many of his photographs had his name and a date in a corner, ranged from the late 1880s to the 1920s, and included some of the best late 19th century views of Lexington. "I make a specialty of Animals, also Residences, Groups, Landscapes, &c." was printed on some of his Lexington cabinet mounts. Some time prior to 1908 Isaac had lived for a while in Virginia, and in 1915 he and his wife had been living together for 55 years. Isaac was enumerated as a widower in 1920, when he was living with the family of his daughter Ida and her husband, Thomas E. Rix. By 1922, he was nearly blind and was frequently incapacitated by hemorrhages from his lungs so that he required the constant help of an attendant. Isaac died at Lexington on January 10, 1925.

James was born in Massachusetts in October of 1831, second of the three sons of Edwin and Sarah Jenney. Mary was born in New York in 1831 or 1832, and she married James about 1854. Their sons were born in Michigan: Edwin in 1855 or 1856, Herbert in September of 1859, Charles in 1863 or 1864, and Arthur late in 1870. Herbert died as a child, and Mary seems to have died soon after Arthur was born. Mrs. Julia E. Smith was born in England in August of 1839, and she brought along her sons Frederic and Charles when she married James about 1878. Julia gave birth to George L. Jenney in August of 1880, and to Frederick G. Jenney in September of 1886. "Jenny, Photographer, Flint, Mich." was printed on the back of some cartes de visite. Two cent revenue stamps were affixed to these and other cartes de visite from Flint by James, and photographs with the same back mark included street scenes and post mortem portraits of babies. He seems to have worked in Flushing only in September of 1865. Cartes from the late 1860s were from "Jenney's Mammoth Sky Light Gallery, Flint, Mich." and "Jas A. Jenney, Portrait and Landscape PHOTOGRAPHER, Flint, Mich." was printed on the backs of some of the last card mounts he used there. His stereo series "In The Pineries" consisted of 37 or more views of logging operations in Lapeer, Midland and Tuscola Counties, some dated in 1872. From Flint he also published stereoscopic series of Glen-Wood Cemetery and other local scenes, Mackinac Island, the North Shore of Lake Superior, winter fishing on Saginaw Bay and views along the St. Clair River. Jenney & Miller continued the Flint, Lake Superior and Mackinac views, expanded the St. Clair River series, and published winter views of Beaver Lake. James exhibited a large collection of stereoscopic views of Michigan scenery at the Saginaw County Agricultural Fair in the fall of 1874, and was awarded a First Premium for his stereo views at the Michigan State Fair held at East Saginaw a month later. He published many stereoscopic views of local scenes from No. 129 Jefferson Avenue in Detroit, with "Detroit in 1875" printed on some of the mounts. Another label on stereo views of DETROIT SCENERY listed 38 scenes which were "Photographed & Published by J. A. Jenney, Room No. 20 Merrill Hall. Publisher of General Michigan Stereoscopic Views, including Scenes of Lake Superior, Mackinac, St. Clair River, Lumber Camp Scenes, and of the principal Cities of the State. Special attention given to Photographing Residences, Machinery, etc." A third label headed "DETROIT SCENES. Second Series..." listed views numbered from 39 through 75 published from Room No. 20 Merrill Hall, corner Jefferson and Woodward Avenues. These same views were published with the imprints of many different Detroit merchants: George R. Angell, Arnold & Willyoung, J. M. Arnold & Company, Louis Black & Company, W. H. Boothroyd & Company, A. J. Brow, William Davey, Dean Brow & Godfrey, Deans Brow & Godfrey, Hallett Brothers, Benjamin C. Hills & Company, Reid & Hills, James Roach, James A. Roys, Russell House Bazaar, Russell House Book Store, Lyman E. Stowe, Arthur Tredway & Company, John Willyoung and David P. Work. James published 33 stereo views of Adrian for art store proprietor Charles A. Conklin, 25 views of Ypsilanti for druggist Frank Smith, and stereo series of Ann Arbor, Lansing, Lake Orion and Orchard Lake, as well as more views of the St. Clair River, Lake Superior and Mackinac Island. Some of his views of Ludington were produced for the local merchants Andrew & Pierce and some were dated 1878. He also produced a sentimental Chicken Series. The Burton Historical Collection includes an eight-page list of Jenney stereo views. By 1910 Julia had returned to Detroit as a widow with her sons George and Frederick.

Frank was born in Michigan to parents from New York in July of 1857, the son of George W. and Zilph Jennings. 1 4
His sister Flora was born in March of 1860. By 1870 his mother and sister were gone, and his father was married to a 1 lady named Sybil who was five years younger than his first wife. Frank soon had a half-sister Jennie and a half-brother 1
Morton born between 1870 and 1874. Dora Sarah Brooke was born in Ohio in August of 1858, first of the five 1 4 children of Alfred John Brooke and Louisa E. Brooke. She married Frank about 1882, and their children were born in 4 1
Michigan: Nina in October of 1883, and Fred in February of 1889. The Park Gallery also was listed at 222 G R & I 1 2

John was born at North Fairfield in Huron County, Ohio, on October 2, 1845, second of the three children of Daniel G. and Mary A. Jennings. He was a five foot five inch clerk with a light complexion, blue eyes and light hair when he enlisted at Mansfield as a private in Company H of the 163rd Ohio Infantry on May 2, 1864. For some reason, he was discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, on September 9, 1864. He also served from March 29, 1865, until May 8, 1865, as a private in Company B of the 198th Ohio Infantry. He moved to Michigan in 1866. Carrie M. Limebeck was born in New York to a mother from Massachusetts in 1837 or early in 1838, the daughter of John and Eleanor Limebeck. She was a teacher of French and mathematics before she married a man named Purdy. Carrie was a widow and back to teaching school by 1870, when she and her widowed father were living with her brother George and his wife. John Jennings was boarding with this family in 1870, and he married Mrs. Carrie M. Purdy at Lansing on June 29, 1871. Early in 1878, John's portrait studio was opposite the State Printing Office, as was the gallery of Charles H. Mead. The printing on the back of C. H. Mead stereographs included: "... Enlargements made from any kind of pictures, in Crayon, India Ink, or Oil Colors, and satisfaction guaranteed. Prof. J. S. Jennings has charge of this branch, which is sufficient assurance that the work will be well done..." Printed on some cabinet mounts was: "PERMANENT ARTOTYPES. The Most Beautiful Pictures Made. Mead & Jennings' ART STUDIO, Lansing, Mich. Exclusive Licensees for the beautiful and permanent Artotype printing process, in Lansing." They offered 24 Artotypes for the same price as 12 cabinet photographs. Mead & Jennings advertised stereoscopic views of the Capitol, the Agricultural College and the State Reform School, as well as portraits from life or from old pictures in oil, ink or crayon. Apparently John's marriage did not last for many years, for he was sharing a bachelor residence with a Cleveland druggist in 1880. John was receiving a Veteran's Invalid Pension of $12.00 per month when he died at Cleveland on September 27, 1909. His remains were brought to Lansing for interment at Mount Hope Cemetery.

Niels was born in Denmark in June of 1855, he immigrated in 1872, and by 1900 he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Maren crossed the ocean in 1875, and she married Niels in 1880 to become Mrs. Maren Kirstine Jensen. Their children were born in Michigan: Willie in May of 1881, Emma in August of 1885, Nina in October of 1888, Mary in March of 1891, Clara in February of 1894, Henry in March of 1897, and Ellen in April of 1900. Two of the several Howell card imprints used by Niels located his gallery over Mrs. F. D. Sabin's millinery store. He advertised nationally late in 1885: "FOR SALE - The leading gallery in Livingston County, Michigan, at a reasonable price. Gallery is fitted with the best of everything; north light; best location; county seat; one opposition; population 3,000; good farming country. Address, with stamp, N. P. Jensen, Howell P. O. Drawer 643, Livingston County, Mich. No postal cards noticed." Niels advertised again for three weeks early in 1886: FOR SALE - One of the best paying galleries in the State of Michigan, at a bargain if taken soon; population 3,000; two railroads. Address at once, Drawer 643, Howell, Mich." Cabinet sized mounts were blind stamped "Jensen, Fowlerville, Mich." in script, as was the 11 ¾ by 13 ¾ inch commercial mount of a photograph of a threshing crew posed in front of a barn. Some studio portraits in the post card format were embossed "JENSEN'S - FOWLERVILLE, MICH." Fowlerville's photographer from 1922 through 1927 was J. Jensen. An outstanding 17 by 14 inch composite photograph of 1923 graduates from Fowlerville High School was signed "Jensens '23." The portraits of 24 graduates and faculty were arranged very effectively in hexagonal cells. Mrs. Maren K. Jensen was enumerated as proprietor of the Fowlerville gallery in 1930.
