His mother came from New York State and Mark was born near the Maple River in Shiawassee County, Michigan, on July 24, 1868, fourth of the five children of William Dunlap Voorheis and Emily (Goodrich) Voorheis. He grew up on the family farms. Her father emigrated from Ireland and Melissa E. (often Millie) Burgess was born in Canada on May 24, 1869, seventh of the nine children of Thomas and Abigail (Ludington) Burgess. She married Mark in Attica Township of Lapeer County, Michigan, on June 25, 1891, and they never had children. They lived at five different addresses in La Crosse during their brief stay there, Mark seems to have worked for others, and they were gone before the 1901 directory was compiled. Both Mark and Melissa were working as photographers in a Stockton gallery in 1910. They both were working in photography on their own account in 1930, Mark as a photographer and Melissa as an artist. Mark died at Santa Clara, California, on December 27, 1940, and Melissa died there on May 10, 1941.

Claude was born in Bloom Township of Wood County, Ohio, to natives of Ohio on April 10, 1890, the elder child of Harry E. and Clara M. (Risser) Vosburg. His sister Mavis was born in Ohio in March of 1897. Harry became a tall man with blue eyes and brown hair. He and his sister were living on the farm with their parents in 1910. "CLAUDE H. VOSBURG, PHOTOGRAPHER, ELLAKE, MICH." was stamped on the backs of many postal photographs, some postmarked in 1909 and 1910. As well as being stamped on the back, some cards were made from negatives on which had been lettered such captions as: "VIEW OF CONSTRUCTION WORK ON COOKE DAM ... VOSBURG PHOTO, ELLAKE, MICH." - "Cheese Factory, Hale, Mich." - "LONG LAKE STATION" and "SCHOOL BUILDING, LUPTON, MICH., VOSBURG PHOTO, NO. 328." Other post card photographs had "CLAUDE H. VOSBURG, ELLAKE, MICH." printed on their backs. Some of these were postmarked in 1911, and some had captions lettered on their negatives. Reva Eleanor Scott was born at Rose City, Michigan, on June 4, 1904, the elder daughter of L. Duffern Scott and Lucy K. (Sherrard) Scott. She married Claude about 1923, and their daughters were born at Rose City: Norma on October 24, 1924, and Betty in May of 1927. Byron was born in New York State to natives of New York on June 6, 1844, fourth of the six children of Epraim Jacob Vosburgh and Lodema (Wilcox) Vosburgh. He enlisted at St. Johns as a private in Company E of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry on September 12, 1862, and was mustered into the army with the regiment a month later on October 11. Each troop was mounted on horses of one color before leaving Grand Rapids on December 10, and after their arrival at Washington they were armed with Spencer repeating rifles, sabers and revolvers. The rifles were later replaced with lighter carbines. The regiment was assigned to the defense of Washington until Hooker's army moved into Maryland to head off Lee, and was first fired upon at Hanover, Pennsylvania, on June 30, 1863, its first action under Brigadier General Custer. It was in the famous cavalry fight on the right at Gettysburg on July 3, and attacked the Confederate army several times in Maryland as it was retreating toward Virginia. The Sixth fought in October of 1863 at Brandy Station and Buckland Mills, Virginia, before going into winter quarters at Stevensburg, Virginia. It took part in the Battle of the Wilderness on May 6, 1864, and then in twelve engagements during the next five weeks. Late in the summer of 1864 Byron was admitted to City Point Hospital near Washington with typhoid fever and chronic bronchitis. By September 14 he was in a United States General Hospital in Philadelphia. He spent some time in a hospital at Harpers Ferry, and from there was sent to Baltimore University Hospital, where his ailment was diagnosed as dropsy of the heart. He was transferred to a United States General Hospital at Wilmington, Delaware, and from there was discharged from the army on May 31, 1865. Sarah Mirenda Brown was born in Berlin Heights, Ohio, to parents from New York on September 19, 1846, the daughter of Smith Moody Brown and Martha (Fuller) Brown. She married Byron at Holly on March 17, 1866. Sarah gave birth at Fenton to Imogene in 1867 and to Zulema in 1869, but they both died in 1873. She gave birth at Fenton to Louis in December of 1871, to Byron late in 1872, to Winifred in January of 1874, and to George in November of 1875. Sarah gave birth at Fenton in June of 1878 to Helen, in 1879 to Lura, in February of 1882 to Harry, in December of 1883 to Frank, in February of 1887 to Isabelle, and in March of 1890 to Zula who lived for only three days. Byron was enumerated in 1870 and 1880 as a Fenton painter. He was periodically disabled by his heart condition and other medical problems, and applied for an Invalid Pension in 1879, citing affidavits from doctors in St. Johns, Ovid and Cadillac. By January 22, 1897, he had been completely prostrated necessitating almost constant care for five months and was able to get his pension increased from $14.00 to $17.00 per month. Byron died at Fenton on August 22, 1898, leaving Sarah with two teenage-old sons and an eleven-year-old daughter. Sarah lived on at Fenton until her death on January 12, 1923.

Egbert was born one-half mile east of Morrice to a mother from New York State on February 11, 1873, the only son of Henry H. and Ellen A. (Wells) Vreeland. His sister Effie was born two years later. Egbert attended the Morrice school, and lived nearly all of his life in the area. He grew to be six feet three inches tall with gray eyes and brown hair, and was called "Shorty" by almost everyone. The Perry and Bancroft studios were branches of his Morrice photography business, and the Perry gallery was open every Tuesday. Shorty rode a specially built bicycle to take photographs of newsworthy events. He made enlarged copies of photographs using a pencil in a pantograph, then filled them in with crayon which was rubbed with a chamois skin. This required much effort and made his prices for such work prohibitive. He and Bertha were married about 1900, and she was killed by a train on March 5, 1910. Shorty managed the local Union Telephone Company for a while before buying the company in July of 1918, when he located the switchboard in the front room of his photo studio. Anna. D. Doty was born in Ohio about 1886, the daughter of John and Elizabeth (Jackson) Doty. She married Egbert in Morrice on April 15, 1919, and they never had children. Anna was the operator for the Morrice Telephone Company in 1924 and 1926. Egbert advertised in 1922: "Make Memories Last. There is no more cherished memento of your school days than the PHOTOGRAPHS you received in exchange with your classmates. Call us up and make an appointment for a sitting. Kodak Printing and Enlarging. First class work at reasonable prices. Vreeland's Studio, Morrice, Mich." Shorty advertised in 1926: "... Photo Studio. See our line of wall paper." He was listed as the Owosso area representative for Consumers Power Company in 1924, 1926 and 1948, and as their electric troubleman in 1939. Egbert was the assessor of the village of Perry in 1932. He closed the photograph studio in November of 1934, and only rarely exposed a roll of film in later years. Anna, his second wife, died in 1957. Shorty traveled quite a bit after he sold the variety store in August of 1951, and later made many colored pencil drawings from his earlier photographs. He became ill early in November of 1965, and died from a stroke on November 29. Burial was in Rose Lawn Cemetery at Perry.

Jean was born to natives of Ohio on the family farm in Green Township of Gallia County, Ohio, on October 7, 1871, last of the six children of Ephraim Eddy Waddell and Esther Jane "Jenny" (Grayum) Waddell. She usually was called Jennie through 1910. Jennie and Mary had their sister Ella and her Husband, Henry W. Mills, as principals of Waddell & Mills, but they probably participated only financially. Waddell & Mills employed Wallace B. Curtis as a photograph operator. The living quarters of Jennie and her sister Mary had the same address as their gallery in 1900. Their father was with them in 1900, but had moved to Toledo by 1903. They were back on the Green Township farm with their father in 1910. Jennie and Mary were living with the family of Henry and Ella Mills in 1920 and 1930. Jean never married, and she died at Westerville, Ohio, on August 12, 1963. Burial was in Mount Zion Cemetery back in Green Township of Gallia County.

Mary was born to natives of Ohio on the family farm in Green Township of Gallia County, Ohio, on March 4, 1867, fifth of the six children of Ephraim Eddy Waddell and Esther Jane "Jenny" (Grayum) Waddell. Their sister Ella and her Husband, Henry W. Mills, were principals of Waddell & Mills with Jennie and Mary but probably participated only financially. Waddell & Mills employed Wallace B. Curtis as a photograph operator. The living quarters of Mary and her sister Jennie had the same address as their gallery in 1900. Their father was with them in 1900, but had moved to Toledo by 1903. They were back on the Green Township farm with their father in 1910. He was enumerated as widowed, though his wife married someone else and lived until 1933. Mary and Jennie were living with the family of Henry and Ella Mills in 1920 and 1930. Mary never married, and she died in Franklin County, Ohio, on March 11, 1942. Burial was in Mount Zion Cemetery back in Green Township of Gallia County.

| Charles was born to parents from New York State at Lapeer, Michigan, in 1861 or 1862, the elder son of the photographer Lucius N. Wade and his wife Julia B. (Brainard) Wade. His brother Benjamin was born at Lapeer on April 28, 1867. They were living in Georgia with their parents in 1880. E. J. Anderson had also been a Romeo photographer for a couple of years prior to his partnership with Charles. This advertisement appeared in a Capac newspaper early in 1891: "Wade & Anderson, photographers of Romeo, Michigan, have arranged to visit this place every Thursday to do work." Capac's local photographer, Charles A. Fox, retaliated by threatening to work Romeo for business, and by slashing his price for a dozen cabinets from $2.00 to $1.50 on Thursdays only. |           | 13 44 1m 222 |

He was married on October 15, 1832, to Rebecca Loueza Facer, who died on November 30, 1836, and on September 5, 1837, to Susan M. Fleming, who lived until 1889. During the later 1830s and the early 1840s he traveled through New York, Louisiana and Michigan painting portraits. He learned of the invention of the daguerreotype at Adrian, and purchased a camera with which to widen his field of portraiture. From 1844 to 1846 he was taxed as the owner of 80 acres near Adrian. He began building telegraph lines in 1847 from Detroit to Jackson, to Milwaukee and through Cleveland to Buffalo, and from Cleveland to Cincinnati and St. Louis. He was advocating consolidation in 1852, and became general agent of the Western Union Telegraph Company in 1856, when this firm controlled most of the midwestern network. He organized the California State Telegraph Company and the Pacific Telegraph Company, and put the pony express out of business with a telegraph line to Salt Lake City from the west. He became managing director and then president of the enlarged Western Union, but resigned because of illness in 1867. In Cleveland, he was recognized as an important civic leader and philanthropist. He died at Cleveland on August 9, 1890. |           | 11111 211111111 |

Lucius was born in New York State to natives of New York in the summer of 1836, third of the four children of Mrs. Betsy Wade and her husband. Betsey was married to David Wooden by 1850, when Lucius and his siblings were living with four Wooden children. He and Miss Julia B. Brainard were both 23 years old when they were married at Lapeer on June 4, 1859. Their son Charles, who is profiled above, was born in 1861 or 1862. On August 4, 1862, Lucius enlisted at Lapeer in Company K of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry, and later became chief bugler. He was mustered into the United States Army with the regiment at Detroit on August 29, and left the state on September 26, 1862. The regiment saw much action in Tennessee and Georgia, including battles at Stone River, Tennessee, in December of 1862, and at Chickamauga, Georgia, in September of 1863. From February through April of 1864, Lucius was on detached service with the 28th Kentucky Mounted Infantry. The Fourth Michigan Cavalry also took part in the battle of Kenesaw Mountain, Georgia, in June of 1864, the siege of Atlanta, Georgia, in August of 1864, and the capture of Jeff Davis in May of 1865. Lucius was mustered out of the army at Nashville, Tennessee, on July 1, 1865. At this time he was five feet nine inches tall with a dark complexion, black eyes and brown hair. Julia gave birth to Benjamin F. Wade at Lapeer on April 28, 1867. Lucius used a card imprint in the late 1860s that included this "NOTICE: The attention of the public is called to my India Ink, Water Colors, or Oil Finished Pictures, by which an old, faded or defaced picture can be restored and enlarged to life size if desired, and made as perfect as if taken from life. Prices reasonable. - The only rooms where this style of work can be done in this part of the State." Charles A. Kelley was a principal of Wade's Art Gallery. Lucius died of chronic diarrhea at Crescent City on November 23, 1888. His heirs included his sons Charles and Benjamin, as well as his widow. Julia received a military widow's pension until her death on June 19, 1904.

Lutellus was born in Pennsylvania to natives of Pennsylvania on October 11, 1859, first of the seven children of William and Susan Ann (Johnston) Wade. The Seymour, Indiana, photographer was identified as L. L. Wade. Henry Stronach was a professional photographer for more than fifteen years before establishing Stronach & Company in Menominee. Wade & Company were proprietors of the Cottage Gallery in Menominee. Her father emigrated from England, and Susana was born in Wisconsin to a mother from New Jersey in May of 1876. She married Lutellus about 1895, and their children were born in Wisconsin: Earl in May of 1896, and Lois in February of 1900. Earl died between 1900 and 1905. Lois married a man named Negley when she was 23, but she was back with her parents as a widow in 1930. Lutellus died in Cairo, Illinois, on June 19, 1934.

All of his grandparents emigrated from Germany and John was born to parents from Ohio in Summerfield Township on November 20, 1889, second of the five children of William and Julia Wagenknecht. His siblings were born in Michigan: William in November of 1884, Frederick in May of 1893, Martha in January of 1899, and Minnie in 1901 or early in 1902. John grew up on the family farm, and he became a medium-sized man with gray eyes and black hair. "JNO WAGENKNECHT, PETERSBURG, G PHO MICH" was stamped on the back of the eight by ten inch commercial mount of a photograph of a rural scene at a portable saw mill. Her parents emigrated from Germany and Hattie Therese Brose was born at Petersburg on October 30, 1892, first of the six children and the only daughter of Herman and Emma (Klut) Brose. Her brothers were born between 1894 and 1909. Hattie married John on April 10, 1912, and they were living in 1917 at Petersburg, which is in Summerfield Township. Hattie and John never had children of their own. By 1930 they had adopted Ethel Manning, who was born in Ohio in 1923 or early in 1924, and within ten years she was calling herself Ethel Wagenknecht. John lived until November of 1962, and Hattie died at Petersburg on January 29, 1968.

Frederik Jacobus Wagenvoord was born in the Netherlands on October 21, 1877, the younger son of Jippe Frederik Wagenvoord and Willenpje (de Bruin) Wagenvoord. His brother John William (later J. William) Wagenvoord was born there on February 14, 1874. William and Fred immigrated in August of 1892 to the United States, where Fred became a tall man with blue eyes and brown hair. He was naturalized a citizen of the United States at the Circuit Court in Lansing on October 21, 1902. The brothers founded Wagenvoord & Company in 1902, with William concentrating on bookbinding and manufacturing blank books while Fred stuck with his photography for a while. Fred advertised "Special Attention to Enlarging and Copying" in 1903. He visited the Netherlands in the autumn of 1907 to woo Agatha Antonia Van Geelkerker, who was born at Utrecht on April 2, 1881. He returned to the Netherlands a year later, they were married at Utrecht on September 24, and they arrived in New York City on October 5, 1908. Their children were born in Lansing: Frederick in 1909, Cornelius in 1911, Wilma on October 13, 1914, and Ann on September 17, 1923. Fred was employing several people in his Lansing Township fruit garden in 1910. He was Secretary-Treasurer of Wagenvoord & Company from 1916 or earlier until the death of his brother William in 1937, when Fred took his place as President of the company. Agatha took along their sons on a visit to the Netherlands in 1913, then she and Fred took along their daughters on a similar visit in 1931. Agatha died at Lansing on April 14, 1959, and Fred died at Okemos, Michigan, on January 16, 1969.

His father emigrated from Germany and Chester was born to a mother from Illinois at Kearney, Nebraska, on June 27, 1886, the son of Henry E. and Ida C. Wagner. His brother Stuart was born in May of 1885 and died as a child. Chester and his mother left Plattsmouth, Nebraska, for Germany early in July of 1903, apparently to settle the estate of his deceased father. They still were in Berlin in November of 1903, but intended to return to the United States within two years. Chester was listed as C. Earle, as C. Earl, as Chester E. and as Earle at various times in no particular sequence, though he settled upon Chester E. Wagner after 1931. He worked for Bissel College Photo Engraving prior to being rehired by Ford Motor Company in April of 1914. Except for three months in the spring of 1918, he seems to have worked continuously in the Photographic Department of Ford Motor Company as a helper with commercial photography until he was laid off in January of 1922. Her father emigrated from the Saxony region of Germany and Elizabeth C. Petit was born in Michigan in 1887, first of the seven children of Henry Chemin Petit and Barbara Mary (Mahrtens) Petit. She worked as a packer in a cigar factory prior to marrying Chester about 1915. Elizabeth gave birth to Eileen in July of 1918. Their home was in Ferndale from 1924 through 1941.

Clay was born April 2, 1860, the fifth child of John and Eliza Walker of Bothwell in Kent County, Ontario. By 1879 he was quite successful at getting orders in Bothwell, probably for portraits enlarged from photographs. On June 17, 1881, Clay and a partner, Jarvis Ford, agreed to have such enlargements made by the photographer C. A. Millard and the portrait painter M. H. Kerr, both of Detroit. Prices ranged from $5.00 for a 10 by 12 inch portrait in ink and crayon to $40.00 for a 36 by 50 picture, with 20 by 24 and 22 by 27 portraits priced at $14.00 and $15.00. Portraits in water colors were twenty percent more. Canada collected an ad valorem Customs Tariff of twenty percent on photographs and paintings at the time, so relatives and friends were coaxed into smuggling the finished portraits across the Detroit River. Clay was corresponding with a retoucher friend in Detroit, R. W. Harrison, about buying M. H. Kerr's interest in a photo enlarging business for $300.00, but apparently they never found the money. By 1881 Clay was being chided by friends for shifting about, and was being advised to settle down by his eldest brother who had established a shoe store in Sabetha, Kansas. Will, his next eldest brother, was probably Clay's partner in Brantford. On March 28, 1883, Clay married Elizabeth Jane Draper, who had been his bookkeeper. From 1885 to 1903, Lizzie bore him seven children, two of whom died as infants. Clay was very successful in Brantford, and became one of Ontario's most prominent photographers. Reports on the tenth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Boston in August of 1889 included: "J. C. Walker, Brantford, Ontario, exhibited some excellent bromides on Eastman paper, and large and small work on albumen paper. The cabinets were specially fine..." Facsimilies of medals were embossed and printed in silver on some of Clay's photograph mounts. They included "Gold Medal, Hamilton, 1891" and "First Prize, Toronto, 1893" as well as "Highest Award, Dominion Can., 1895." He also "... carried off the grand prize given by the Canadian Association in '94." and attended the annual PA of A convention at Buffalo in August of 1902. The Walker Studio in Brantford continued from 1920 until 1925 with Etta Walker as proprietor. By 1922 Clay owned several apartment buildings in Toronto. In 1938 he had a store there which he was trying to sell, and did sell by early in 1939. Lizzie died on February 17, 1952, and Clay died in Toronto on September 18, 1959.

Spencer was the second child and the only son of the photographer William J. Walker and his wife Lillie Belle (Allen) Walker. He was born at Bothwell, Ontario, on September 1, 1878, and he grew up in Detroit and in smaller towns in southern Ontario. Bertha E. Green was born in Michigan in 1880, the daughter of Richard and Hattie (Smith) Green. She came from Port Huron to marry John at Sandwich, Ontario, on September 2, 1899. Their daughter Edna was born at Detroit in 1911. Spencer worked for the Ford Motor Company from 1906 until 1916, becoming superintendent of all service stations in Detroit. He resigned in 1916 to organize the Walker-Saxe Motor Company, which by 1922 was the largest Ford dealer in Michigan. During the late 1920s Spencer was able to be of financial assistance to his father in his declining years.

Mabel was born at Bothwell, Ontario, on February 24, 1876, first of the three children of the photographer William J. Walker and his wife Lillie Belle (Allen) Walker. She grew up in Detroit and in smaller towns of southern Ontario. She probably did various jobs in her father's gallery both before and after working in her own gallery. In September of 1898 she married the photographer Charles H. Tremear, who had been a student of her father back in 1888. They moved to Morenci, Michigan, where Charles was the photographer until 1911. Three of their children were born at Morenci: Eva Maude in July of 1899, William C. in 1902, and Hannah Marjorie in 1908. They moved to Highland Park, where their daughter Elizabeth was born in September of 1917. Mabel was listed as Mrs. Eliza M. Tremear in the 1910 and 1920 census reports. Charles was a Ford auto worker until 1929, when he became the first tintypist at Greenfield Village. When Charles died in July of 1943, all four of their children were living; Mrs. Margery Daly of Detroit, Mrs. Elizabeth Lee of Detroit, William C. Tremear of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Maude Thomas of Detroit. Mabel died on March 21, 1958, and was buried beside her husband in the North Farmington Cemetery, survived by her daughters Elizabeth and Maude.

His father came from Scotland and Ralston was born in London, England, on January 16, 1841, though the 1850 and 1860 census reports stated that he was born in Scotland. He was eldest of the six children of George and Ruth (Briden) Walker. His family immigrated in 1843 to Canada, and in 1845 on to Auburn, New York. Ralston enlisted at Coldwater for three months as a private in Company C of the First Michigan Infantry on May 1, 1861. He was mustered into the army at Detroit on May 17, and was taken prisoner at Bull Run, Virginia, on July 21, 1861. He was later exchanged, and he was mustered out of the army and honorably discharged at Washington, D. C., on May 20, 1862. His Owosso cartes de visite were issued with two-cent revenue stamps and: "... If desired new Prints can be had from this Negative at any time. Card Pictures made from old Daguerreotypes or Ambrotypes in plain or vignette style." printed on the back. Ralston never married, and he was five feet three inches tall with a fair complexion, hazel eyes and grey hair when he was admitted on January 8, 1918, to the United States National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Leavenworth, Kansas. He was diagnosed with rheumatism and senility, treated, and discharged on February 21, 1918. Ralston was receiving a pension of $24.00 per month at this time. He seems to have been back in the National Military Home at Leavenworth when he died in the fall of 1922.

Will was born in a log cabin near Bothwell, Ontario, on June 25, 1849, the second son of John Bellinger and Eliza (Rickard) Walker. His elder brother Washington established a shoe store in Sabetha, Kansas. Another brother, Clay, became one of Canada's most prominent photographers. His sister Eva married Luzerne S. Greene, bookkeeper and then treasurer of a Detroit boiler works for fifty years. His other brothers, Sidney and Byron, were involved with photography before finding careers in other fields. In 1873 Will married Miss Lillie B. Allen of Dearborn, Michigan, and they later had six daughters and a son. Sidney C. Walker was his associate in Bothwell, as was J. Clayton Walker in Brantford. John Mabbett worked for Will as a photographer in 1887. In 1888, Will had seven or eight pupils who paid him for instruction in photography, but were permitted only to watch the Master Photographer at work. Will insisted upon performing every operation himself, and the students gained experience by making photographs of each other. Though the bulk of his business at this time was in paper photographs, Will had a sideline in tintypes made mostly for the Detroit News. Adolphus W. Greene, whose brother was married to Will's sister, was his partner in 1890 and succeeded him at 120 Michigan Avenue the following year. After Walker & Greene dissolved their partnership, Will was arrested on Greene's charge that he had stolen 150 negatives of prominent people. The court found Will innocent, and in June of 1891 he sued Dolph for $5000 as compensation for his shame and suffering. During the 1890s, Will and his brothers shared financial and other responsibilities for their father according to their capabilities. Will's move to Highgate in 1895 was made to establish a home which his father could share. Will's wife and her father-in-law, who was very difficult to get along with, did not speak to each other for months at a time. Will suffered psychologically and financially during these years. When he returned to Detroit, others were paid to care for his father at Highgate until 1903, when they refused to continue the arrangement. Charles H. Tremear had studied photography under Will in 1888, and came back in 1898 to marry his eldest daughter Mabel. Lillie died in 1922, and Will later married again. He survived his second wife and became Detroit's oldest active photographer. Will retired only two months before he died in Providence Hospital on September 1, 1929. Interment was in Woodmere Cemetery.

William was born in Michigan on June 13, 1884, and he became a medium sized man with dark eyes and hair.
Through 1920, listings usually included indications that he was black. William seems to have been the second African American to open a photographic business in Detroit, preceded only by Harvey Jackson. William's printing business was called the Waller Job Press and, like his photographic gallery, had the same address as his home. His nearest relative in 1918, probably his mother, was Hattie Nelson living up in Saginaw. Georgetta was born in Pennsylvania to natives of Pennsylvania in 1886 or early in 1887, and she married William about 1910. Both Georgetta and William

Charles was born in New York City on June 25th, 1829. He became a five foot six inch photographer with a fair complexion, gray eyes and dark brown hair, and served in the Pennsylvania Mounted Rangers at Baltimore, Maryland, prior to his enlistment. He was enrolled at New York City in May of 1861 as Captain of Company E of the 71st Pennsylvania Infantry. Charles contracted fever and malarial poisoning from exposure at Fortress Monroe in Virginia, and was honorably discharged in July or August of 1861 at Camp Hampton, Virginia. Anna was born in Pennsylvania to natives of Pennsylvania in June of 1845, she married Charles about 1862, and their daughter Eva was born in June of 1864. After Charles and Anna divorced Anna and Eva moved to York, Pennsylvania, where they lived for many years. Charles succeeded J. P. Greenwald in Adrian. His Temple of Art in Fort Wayne was opposite Court House Square in 1869. He advertised in 1873: “An Imposter. Having been informed that a man about 22 years of age is traveling from town to town, claiming to be my agent. This is to inform the public generally, that he is an imposter, as I employ no agents. When last heard from he was in Lima, Ohio. C. E. Wallin, Photographer, 18 West Berry Street.” He produced stereo views from the Fort Wayne gallery, which was up for sale in August of 1875. Emma was born in Pennsylvania to natives of Pennsylvania in April of 1853, and she married Charles in the 1870s. Their son, Charles M. Wallin, was born in New York State in August of 1879. Charles placed Chicago, Illinois, between Selma and Bowling Green in a list of places he had lived. His son Charles also was enumerated as a photographer in 1900. The Bowling Green gallery was offered for sale later in 1900 due to the death of Emma, who died on July 24 and was buried at Fort Wayne. The Bowling Green studio finally was sold in the spring of 1905.

His parents emigrated from County Cork in Ireland and William was born in Michigan in June of 1870, last of the seven children of Redmond and Margaret (McAuliff) Walsh. The Saginaw photographers were identified by only their given initials. Her father emigrated from Canada and Clara Worth was born in Michigan to a mother from New York on February 9, 1873, last of the three children of Willard L. and Adelia Margaret (Ketchum) Worth. She married William in 1899, and their children were born in Michigan: Kathleen in March of 1900, Willard in 1903, Margaret in 1904, and Leo in 1906. Clara died at Boyne Falls on November 18, 1910, and her children seem to have scattered and boarded or lodged with unrelated families. Kathleen was teaching in Alpine Township of Kent County in 1920, when Willard was a high school student in Grand Rapids, and Margaret was a student at Huntington, Indiana. His father emigrated from England, his mother came from New York, and Charles was born at Kinderhook, Michigan, on April 28, 1853. He was second of the eleven children of John and Abigail (Howell) Walter, though four of his siblings failed to reach maturity. Charles became a five foot eight inch man with brown eyes, black hair and a fair complexion. By 1880 Charles had a 25-year-old wife named Eliza who born in Michigan and was the same age as his sister Eliza. Their adopted son James was born in Michigan to German parents in 1877 or early in 1878. This was the last report of Charles' marriage, for he was enumerated as single in 1910 and 1920, and as widowed in 1930. A neat label on the back of the 8 by 10 inch mount of a photograph of a couple of fishermen with their wives, probably taken at Marble Lake, reads: "C. E. WALTER, PHOTOGRAPHER, Quincy, Mich. Negatives, stereo and single, made to order in any part of the world." On a mount of the same size with the same label was written: "Cascade School, Robt. Patterson teacher." In January of 1895 the Photo-American acknowledged receiving two fine stereoscopic prints from C. E. Walter, and in July of 1895 noted that two additional specimens had been received. From Ada, Charles published stereo views of an excursion steamer on Reed's Lake and of Michigan State Troops at Camp Eaton. His black hair had turned gray by August of 1900, when he applied successfully for a passport and intended to go abroad temporarily. In 1901 he made at least 55 stereo negatives in Sweden and 62 in Norway. He published a "Wholesale Price List Of Stereoscopic Views made from Original Negatives by C. E. Walter, Agricultural College, Michigan...." which included these Scandinavian scenes as well as views of Niagara Falls and Mackinac Island and a group of genre scenes. He sold the mounted views for 85 cents per dozen or $7.00 per hundred, unmounted views for 60 cents per dozen, and would make lantern slides to order. On the back of a 7 by 9 inch photo of the "Entrance Gate Pontiac Fair Grounds, 1901" was stamped: "C. E. WALTER, Photographer, AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, MICH. NEGATIVES, STEREOSCOPIC VIEWS, LANTERN SLIDES AND TRANSPARENCIES MADE TO ORDER. MAIL ORDERS RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION." Charles also produced a number of stereo views of Lansing and vicinity. He advertised locally in the summer of 1907: "C. E. Walter, Photographer, East Lansing - will go anywhere to make negatives to order. Landscape and commercial work. Bromide enlargements. Lantern slides and Transparencies." A multitude of post card photographs of Agricultural College, East Lansing, Lansing and nearby Pine Lake had "C. E. W." lettered on their negatives, and many of them were postmarked between 1907 and 1910. He advertised in the Michigan Agricultural College Carnival Program in the spring of 1909: "For Everything in Photography - From Portraits to Pictures of Athletic Events - Call on C. E. WALTER, Photographer, E. Lansing." His ad in the 1910 Carnival Program was: "REMEMBER When You Want Any Photos Made or Want any Photo Supplies Call on C. E. WALTER, East Lansing, Mich. - Developing and Printing for Amateurs, Instruction in Photography, and the use of Cameras Free to Beginners. PORTRAITS MADE AS YOU WISH THEM." Charles was living by himself in 1910, 1920 and 1930, and he died at Pascagoula on May 2, 1939.

She was born Mary Jane Spencer in New York State to natives of New York in November of 1858, the elder daughter of Andrew Jackson Spencer and Harriet E. (Gage) Spencer. Her sister Laura was born in 1866. Mary Jane was enumerated as Mary J. in 1860 and 1870, as Jane in 1880, and then as Jennie for the rest of her life and on her tombstone. His father emigrated from Germany and Harvey B. Walter was born in New York State in October of 1851, fourth of the five children of Barney and Katherine (Grannis) Walter. He married Jennie about 1874, and their children were born in Michigan: Spencer Barney Walter in March of 1878, Mary Bell Walter in 1881 (she lived only until December of 1886), Grace Walter in December of 1888, Glenn Wing Walter in November 1890, and Glee (Catherine) Walter in September of 1893. "JENNIE WALTER, Photographer, Corunna, Mich." was printed below 4 by 2½ inch images on 5 by 3¼ mounts. Her husband Harvey, who had been a Morrice lumber dealer, died on June 25, 1908, at Conway in Livingston County, Michigan. Jennie was sharing her home in 1910 with her daughter Grace, who was self employed as a seamstress, her son Glenn, who was a salesman in a retail drugstore, and her daughter Glee, who was a high school student. She was living by herself in 1920. Jennie died at Morrice in 1928, and interment was there in Rose Lawn Cemetery next to her husband

His father emigrated from England and James was born in Michigan to a Canadian mother in April of 1863, third of the five children of Adam and Mary (Ostrander) Walthew. His brother Thomas is profiled below. His brother George was born in Canada in 1861, his sister Caroline was born in Michigan in July of 1867, and his brother Arthur was born in Detroit in May of 1874. James was a principal of A. Walthew & Sons, Fresco & Scenic Artists, from 1882 through 1884. Her father came from New Hampshire and Idella Clemmie (usually Ida) Stanley was born in Michigan to a mother from Maine in November of 1860, last of the three daughters of Moses C. and Sarah P. Stanley. She attended the University of Michigan from 1880 until 1882. Ida married James on August 13, 1889, and they never had children. Ida was first listed in Monrovia without James in 1928, and then as his widow in 1930 and 1931.

Her parents emigrated from England and Katherine (usually Kate) Yates was born in March of 1860 at Guelph in what later became Ontario, second of the five children of Robert Thomas Yates and Susanna Yates. Her brother Robert was born in England about 1859, her sister Fanny was born in Canada about 1862, and her brothers Frank and Walter were born in Michigan between 1865 and 1868. Kate married Thomas at Saint Clair, Michigan, on January 24, 1881, and two of their children were born in Michigan: Earl in June of 1882, and Beatrice in September of 1888. Their daughter Dorothy was born in California in May of 1893. Earl was working as a photographer in 1900, and he was working as a painter with his father in T. A. Walthew & Son in 1907. Kate was keeping house for Thomas and other family members in 1920, but something happened to her a few years later. Jane (later Jennie) was born in Texas on April 22, 1877, and married first when she was sixteen years old. She was married to Thomas by 1930, and she was a resident of Capitola, California, prior to her death on January 1, 1972.

Frank was born in Ohio to a mother from Connecticut in March of 1857, the elder son of Andrew J. and Caroline F. Walton. His brother Clifford was born four years later, and in 1870 they were living in a large infirmary where their father was superintendent. Her parents emigrated from Scotland, Isabell was born in Canada in May of 1858, and she was brought to Michigan two years later. She married Frank about 1883 and their children were born in Michigan: Nora in January of 1885, Clifford in March of 1891, and Anna in August of 1896. Artemus Beach had been a professional photographer for almost two decades prior to forming his partnership with Frank. By 1910 Frank was divorced and lodging by himself. Ella was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in 1871, and she was first identified as Mrs. Ella G. Walton in 1922. She was described as Frank's widow in 1926. Ella was working as a Bay City nurse from 1931 until 1942 or longer.

James was born to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Walton in 1842 or 1843, and was raised on their Indiana farm. He began taking lessons in photography when he was 18. He and William Davis traveled through the country with a portable gallery for a time until James went with the 19th Michigan Infantry as a photographer in the fall of 1862. He returned to Aurora on November 5, 1863. He and 17-year-old Miss Fannie L. Plummer were married on December 17, 1865, and their son Clifford was born about 1869.

His father came from Rhode Island and Martin was born in Michigan in February of 1858, first of the seven children of William D. and Lucretia Walton. By 1880 his mother was a widow, and Martin was managing the family farm for her. Cora was born in Michigan in July of 1857 to parents from New York, eldest of the three children of James and Lorena E. (McCrossen) Bannister. She married Martin on February 10, 1886, and their children were born in Michigan: Hazel in July of 1888, Homer on November 1, 1891, and Kendall on September 16, 1894. "DEER CREEK DURING A FLOOD, ARMADA, MICHIGAN. Walton, Photo, Armada, Mich." was printed on the face of a post card photograph. Mrs. Cora A. Walton died in 1928, and burial was in the local Willow Grove Cemetery. Her father emigrated from England, and Ida was born in Michigan about 1859. She married first when she was 21 years old, and she was married to Martin by 1930.

The pictures taken at her Gallery are true to life, and Stand out like Statuary! Please call and examine specimens, and satisfy yourselves of the truth of this statement. St, Johns, August 5, 1864." An editorial paragraph in the same newspaper included: "As Mrs. Walker is a widow lady with three small children dependent upon her for support, we bespeak for her a liberal share of patronage by the public." Subsequent issues of the paper corrected the name to Walton, and her advertisements ran through May 5, 1865. Mrs. Walton married P. S. Morrison of Bingham Township on May 31, 1865.

Isaac and Mary A. Wambold came from Pennsylvania and were farming in 1870 in Wheatland Township of Mecosta County, Michigan. They still were living in Wheatland Township in 1879, and in its village of Remus in 1884. They probably were the grandparents of the photographer, who was identified simply as Isaac Wambold. Isaac Evan Wambold was born at Remus on November 24, 1890, and he became a medium sized man with dark blue eyes and light red hair. Her parents emigrated from Canada, and Irene was born in Oregon about 1895. She married Isaac early in 1917. Isaac entered the army on September 18, 1917, was promoted to corporal, and was honorably discharged on January 28, 1919. He and Irene seem to have moved soon after he was discharged to Oregon, where their children were born: Donald in 1920 or early in 1921, Shirley three years later, Beverly in August of 1926, and Jacqueline in December of 1928. Isaac was a widower by 1930, and he employed the widow Mrs. Eva P. Cleveland to keep house and care for the children. She brought along her daughter Margaret, who was about the same age as Shirley. Isaac and Eva were married within a few years. Isaac died on November 10, 1969, and Eva died a few months later on April 21, 1970. Both were interred in the Willamette National Cemetery at Portland.

Edward was born in England about 1844, and he seems to have remained single and boarded by himself throughout his stay in Detroit. Separate sources listed his gallery at 135 Michigan Avenue and at 131 & 133 Michigan Avenue in 1870. This gallery was situated at the corner of Michigan Avenue and Abbott Street, where Edward was succeeded in 1878 or 1879 by H. H. Hunter & Company.

William was born in Canada in 1854 or early in 1855. Ida was born in Canada seventeen years later, and she married William there about 1891. They immigrated to the United States in 1893. Two of their daughters were born in New York State: May in 1893 or early in 1894, and Stella in 1899 or early in 1900. Their daughter Eva was born in Michigan in 1907 or early in 1908. A post card photograph of a bridge over a sizable river was mailed late in July of 1909 and carried this message: "... I am working in W. H. Ward's Gallery here in Owosso now. This is a picture I took Tuesday, a bit of Shiawassee. Well, this is all for this time, so goodbye. Write soon. Earl."

Nine of the 96 women who exhibited photographs at the national convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in July of 1910 were from Michigan, and Mrs. W. H. Ward was one of them. Her first name was Ida, and she undoubtedly played a significant part in her husband's photography business..

Samuel was born in Ireland to English parents in February of 1849, and he immigrated in 1868. He never obtained United States citizenship. Lucy was born at Palmyra, New York, to a mother from Massachusetts in February of 1854, last of the eight children of William and Sarah Everson. She married Samuel about 1876 and their children were born in New York State: Christina in March of 1878, Jeannette in March of 1880, Lulu (later Lucy) in February of 1882, William in July of 1886, and Sarah in March of 1887. William H. Learned was Samuel's partner in 1884. Samuel may have spent a few months at Syracuse in 1900 before moving to Palmyra. When Samuel went back to Rochester in 1907, Lucy and their children seem to have stayed in Palmyra. Lucy still was living at Palmyra in 1930 with three of her daughters, and she apparently never got back together with Samuel. 21 Bly Street was the address of Samuel's residence from 1907 through 1937.

Thomas was born at Donegal in Northern Ireland on May 18, 1862, third of the eight children of William J. and Margaret (Strong) Wark. He immigrated in 1883, and he became a naturalized citizen of the United States as soon as possible. Some Wark & Swant cabinet mounts carried no information about the location. Thomas advertised "Photo Enlarging and Finishing in Crayon." in 1890, as well as "... The Finest Portrait Work Done in the City. A Specialty Made of Large Work. Photographic Work of Every Description. Satisfaction Guaranteed..." Some cabinet imprints placed his Art Studio on Main Street in Lake Linden, and it was on Calumet Street in 1895. Margaret Rich Heughens was born in Maine to parents from Nova Scotia on October 13, 1870, first of the three children of Charles and Eunice (Blair) Heughens. Margaret (sometimes Aggie or Maggie) married Thomas on March 31, 1891, at Lake Linden, where two of their children were born: William on February 13, 1892, and Esther on April 26, 1896. Their other children were born in Ohio: Helen on November 28, 1897, Elizabeth on April 13, 1901, and James on April 25, 1904. Thomas and W. S. Wark were principals of the Wark Art Studio in Marietta. Thomas had his son William as a farming partner in 1920. He became a widower when Margaret died at Cortez on September 24, 1949. Thomas lived on at Cortez until his death on January 6, 1961.

His parents came from New York State and Carl was born near Shelbyville in Wayland Township of Allegan County, Michigan, on May 14, 1878, the only child of George Melvin Warner and Jennie A. (Jessup) Warner. He became a tall man with blue eyes and dark hair. "CARL A. WARNER, Shelbyville, Mich." was stamped on the back of a 10 by 13¾ inch mount carrying a photograph of 51 students of many different ages standing with their mustachioed teacher outside the school. Pearl Gillespie was born to parents from Ohio in Cheshire Township of Allegan County, Michigan, on September 18, 1879, fourth of the five children of Martin Van Buren Gillespie and Sabrina (Morey) Gillespie. Pearl married Carl about 1903 and their children were born in Allegan County: Ruth early in 1905, Hubert on December 2, 1906, and Esther in 1909. All three were employed and living with their parents in 1930. Carl was serving as county clerk of Allegan County prior to his death at Battle Creek, Michigan, on November 30, 1939. Carlos was born at Orleans, New York, on October 5, 1847, fourth of the ten children of Ulysses and Eliza A. Warner. After graduating from the Canandaigua Academy and one year of teaching, in 1867 he began studying law in the Canandaigua office of J. P. Faurot. In 1869 he passed his bar examination before the Supreme Court of New York and became the partner of Faurot. He came to Detroit in 1872 and entered the offices of Moore & Griffin, later becoming a member of the firm. Alice was born in New York State to natives of New York in May of 1854. She married Carlos in 1873 and their children were born in Detroit: Kathleen in the spring of 1876, Emily in 1877, and Carlos (later Carl) in October of 1879. The law firm of Moore & Griffin became Moore, Canfield & Warner in 1875; then Griffin & Warner in 1883; Griffin, Warner, Hunt & Berry in 1888; Griffin, Warner & Hunt in 1890; and reverted to Griffin & Warner in 1893. Carlos established Warner, Codd & Warner in 1896. He was active in the Democratic Party. His wife Alice was a widow by 1920.

Horace was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on December 7, 1884, third of the four children of Horace D. and Mary Elizabeth (Briggs) Warner. His siblings also were born in Michigan: Sarah in 1878 or early in 1879, Harriet in December of 1882, and Eric in December of 1890. Horace was living with his parents in 1900, along with Harriet and Eric. "Made by H. O. WARNER HOLTON, MICH." was stamped on the post card backs of photographs, including one of a bashful hunter with his guns and his dogs. "H. O. WARNER" or "H O W" was lettered on the negatives of other post card photographs, some with "Holton, Mich." lettered on their negatives or press printed on the face of the card. The content ranged from street scenes and a salting station to rural homes. Some of the cards were mailed between September of 1907 and September of 1909. Horace became a tall slender man with gray eyes and hair that was gray by 1918. Bertha was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan early in 1883. She married Horace some time between 1910 and 1918, bringing along her son Ernest Edmonds from her earlier marriage. Ernest was born in Michigan in 1905. Bertha had returned to Pontiac from Nashville by 1930, when she was a widow working as a tailoress and sharing her home with her son Ernest, who was a truck driver.

His parents emigrated from Austria and Richard was born in Michigan in August of 1849, eldest of the three children of Franz (later Frank) and Pauline (Herkner) Warner. His sisters were born in Kent County: Mary about 1855, and Paulina (later Pauline) in December of 1859. His mother was a widow by 1860. Some early records were for Richard W. Werner. Celinda L. Bonney was born in Michigan to parents from New York in April of 1852, second of the eight children of Orris and Judith L. (Marks) Bonney. She married Richard in 1871, and their children were born in Grand Rapids: Lynne in April of 1874, Richard in November of 1875, Ferdinand in November of 1877, Emma in October of 1882, Glenn in October of 1887, and Melbourne in July of 1890. Richard and his family lived with his mother until 1885, when Richard became the owner of the home, and his mother was boarding with his family. Most, if not all, of Richard's employers between 1874 and 1922 were wholesale grocers. Richard died at Grand Rapids on January 1, 1930. Celinda lived on in Grand Rapids until her death on July 6, 1941.

Orr was born in Michigan to parents from New York on September 9, 1860, probably the elder daughter of John and Julia Orr. Her sister Caroline was born in Michigan in 1862 or early in 1863. Rosalia married William in Kearney on October 29, 1876. Their daughter Nora was born in Michigan about 1878, but they had no children that lived to maturity. Warner & Barwise advertised their Ground Floor Photograph Gallery. Joseph Barwise was a Traverse City photographer for a couple of years prior to forming his partnership with William, and he remained a photographer in the area through 1905. | His father emigrated from England and Harvey was born in Michigan to a mother from Vermont in April of 1855, sixth of the seven children of William C. and Emeline Warrant. Harvey was enumerated twice for the 1880 census: on June 9 at the home of his parents, and on June 12 as a picture agent boarding in the village of Sparta in Kent County. Palmiter & Warrant advertised in 1883 as artists in ink, crayon and colors, who did solar printing for the trade in their rooms in the third story over the First National Bank. This was the address used on most of their cabinet mounts. Charles Palmiter was a Kalamazoo photographer for two years before forming his partnership with Harvey, and he remained in the studio at 101 West Main Street as an artist for two years following the partnership. Emily was born in England to English parents in February of 1865, and she came to America with her family in 1869. She married Harvey about 1884, and their son Harold was born in November of 1889. Something happened to this first marriage and Harvey married again. Ethel was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio early in 1874, married first when she was 21, and by 1920 she was married to Harvey. Edward was born at Burnett Junction, Wisconsin, on May 15, 1862, to Job and Diantha (Kingsbury) Warren. His father was killed three months later in the Civil War, and his mother moved to Bay City, Michigan, where Edward grew up. He attended the public schools of Bay City and Mayhew Business College in Detroit. He was said to come to Detroit in 1882, where he was connected at times with Holcombe & Alvord, F. N. Tomlinson and C. H. Smith, all old-time photographers. He married Miss Bertha Alice Walker of Detroit on October 27, 1886, and they subsequently had three children. Clarence M. Hayes, Fred A. Goodrich and Fred A. Holt were his associates in C. M. Hayes & Company, which they carried on successfully when Edward pursued other interests. He tried selling insurance again, managed a mortgage company, was a stock broker, and was an officer of companies interested in Cuban plantations and in fruit from the Traverse City area. He acquired and sold 1200 acres in the upper part of Michigan's lower peninsula, and then dealt in Detroit real estate. During the 1920s he operated an office toilet supply company.

Frederick was born at Trumbull, Connecticut, on March 20, 1839, second of the four sons of Caroline C. (Parsons) Warren and Reverend Waters Warren, who was a Congregational minister. Fredrick was an itinerant ambrotypist in Vermont before he followed his parents to Michigan. The Twelfth Michigan Volunteer Infantry moved in October of 1864 to Du Valls Bluff, Arkansas, and was separated into detachments which were posted wherever needed throughout the following year. Frederick was 25 years old when he enlisted in Company E of the Twelfth on February 15, 1865. He undoubtedly experienced some of this detached duty, for he was discharged at Du Valls Bluff on May 27, 1865. Fred developed and patented a calculating engine, a precursor of the office calculator, shortly before his untimely death from tuberculosis on April 9, 1875. There is much information about him among the Warren family papers in the Michigan State University Archives.

George was born in 1833 at Nashua, New Hampshire, the son of John B. and Rebecca S. Warren. His family soon moved to Lowell, Massachusetts, where George attended the public schools. He had just finished high school when his parents set him up in the daguerrean gallery on Merrimack Street. They repaired and decorated the studio while George experimented with materials and methods in discouraging attempts to make creditable images of family and friends. Four months passed before George felt ready to open his gallery to the public. He became moderately successful as a daguerreotypist and received awards at local fairs in 1853 and 1856. With his move to 100 Merrimack Street in 1858 he took on a commission to make all of the photographs for Dartmouth College's first senior-class photograph album. George began to specialize in such work, and in 1859 provided class-album pictures for Princeton, Williams, Brown and Rutgers as well as Dartmouth. He was active in class-album work for nearly twenty years, contracting in most years with five or more colleges, including Harvard, Yale, Michigan, Wesleyan, Union, Amherst, Bowdoin, Trinity, Tufts, Hamilton and the United States Military Academy as well as those mentioned above in different years. He is best known for his Harvard albums between 1861 and 1877. Mary A. Caldwell was born in New York State to natives of New York about 1839, the daughter of James and Dolly Caldwell. She married George at Lowell on June 18, 1861, and their children were born in Massachusetts: Mary about 1863, Cornelia about 1868, George about 1872, Percy about 1873, and Lester about 1877. During the 1870s, parallel with the expansion of his Boston studio, George produced more and more portraits of celebrities and ordinary patrons, and his class-album work declined. He was killed by a train at the College Hill station in Medford, Massachusetts, on November 29, 1884. The title page of one of George's albums was inscribed: "Class of 1870, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor." The album was 14 inches high, 12 inches wide, and about 2 inches thick. It contained portraits of 12 faculty members, Robert the janitor, and 73 graduates, as well as 9 views of the campus. Each oval photographic print was mounted on the front of a specially printed heavy page with a blank back. A 9½ by 7½ rectangle of warm yellow or cream was printed on each white page, with "WARREN PHOTO" coming through in white at the lower edge of the rectangle.

His father came from the state of New York and Isam was born in Michigan to a mother from New Jersey late in 1846 or early in 1847, the only child of Elihu M. and Deborah C. Warriner. He went by his middle name for a while as a teenager. Emanuel J. Feighner was a photographer and artist at Nashville for four years prior to opening the gallery with Isam, and he remained a professional Nashville photographer until 1902. Isam still was single when he died at Battle Creek on February 23, 1877.

He was listed consistently as Leslie A. Wasson through 1910, and then as Alfred L. Wasson in all later records. He was born at Olcott, New York, to natives of New York in June of 1850, eldest of the three children of Thomas Little Wasson and Rachel Anna (Good) Wasson. His sister Viola was born in February of 1852, and she later married the Michigan photographer Elias W. Lyon. His brother Elmer was born in September of 1862, and he is profiled below. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Susannah (often Susan) E. Garner was born in Ohio in August of 1850, fourth of the eight children of Jacob and Hannah Garner. She married Leslie in 1872, and their children were born in or near Ithaca: John Elmer Wasson in August of 1876, Effie V. Wasson in October of 1879, Lula A. Wasson on July 5, 1884, Saran Belle Wasson on June 24, 1886, and Katherine Kay Wasson on October 17, 1888. John and Effie are profiled below. John was a widower by 1930, when he was back living with his parents. Alfred died at Ithaca on February 10, 1933, and Susannah died there several months later on December 28, 1933.

Elmer was born north of Buffalo at Olcott, New York, to natives of New York on September 19, 1862, youngest of the three children of Thomas Little Wasson and Rachel Anna (Good) Wasson. His brother Alfred Leslie Wasson was born in June of 1850, and he is profiled above. His sister Viola was born in February of 1852, and she later married the Michigan photographer Elias W. Lyon. Edna May Montague was born to parents from Vermont at Georgetown, Michigan, on May 23, 1864, the elder daughter of Ira W. and Amelia Electa (Brown) Montague. Her sister Norma Pearl Montague was born in September of 1874, and she later married the photographer Frank E. Welch. Edna married Elmer at Saint Louis, Michigan, on March 6, 1883. Their only child, Monta (later Montie) Clifford Wasson, was born in Michigan on November 10, 1884, and he is profiled below. It was reported early in 1899 that the Albion gallery which Elmer had purchased a few weeks earlier from F. J. Neal had been resold to a Mr. Welch from Ithaca, and that Elmer had purchased a studio in Bay City. Many post card photographs were made from negatives marked with "WASSON PHOTO" and a view number, the majority of them postmarked between 1911 and 1915. Similar postal views by M. C. Wasson were signed differently and have a much different print quality, so such cards from Bay City and nearby Auburn and St. Charles can be attributed to Elmer. His work seems to include postals from many towns along the western shore of Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron and in the northern interior of Michigan's lower peninsula: Linwood, Pinconning, Standish, Twining, Turner, Alabaster, Oscoda, Alpena, Hillman, Wolverine, Cadillac and Gladwin. Notable among them are a group taken April 6, 7 and 8, 1912, of high water on the interurban line between Saginaw and Bay City and of efforts to save the track, a bird's-eye view of the State Republican Convention locked out of the Bay City Armory on April 12, 1912, the carpenter gothic of the ward school in Standish, the gypsum quarry at Alabaster, and a view of the fire gutted Fraser Hotel in Bay City which Elmer mailed to his sister in January of 1907. He offered high class photographic work of all kinds in 1913. Elmer died at Bay City from hardening of the arteries on October 23, 1937. Mrs. Edna M. Wasson was enumerated as a portrait photographer in 1930, and as Elmer's widow was proprietor of the studio at 523 North Jackson Street in 1938. She died at Bay City on May 6, 1957.

His father came from the state of New York and John was born to a mother from Ohio at Ithaca, Michigan, on August 1, 1876, the only son and eldest of the five children of Alfred L. and Susannah E. (Garner) Wasson. His father and his sister Effie are profiled above. John was enumerated as a photographer twice in the 1900 census report: on June 19 at Ithaca with his sister Effie, and on June 27 in Newark Township with his parents and Effie. He became a medium sized man with blue eyes and dark hair. Her father came from Ohio, her mother emigrated from England, and Ida Mae Kemp was born on August 2, 1880, at Pontiac, Michigan. She was second of the four children of William Henry Kemp and Sarah Jane (Featherstone) Kemp. Ida married John in 1905 or early in 1906, and their sons were born in Michigan: Kenneth K. Wasson in 1908 and Charles Leslie Wasson in 1912. Ida was enumerated as a widow in 1920, when she and her sons were living with her father, and all of them were using the surname Kemp. Her parents emigrated from England, and Grace was born in the state of New York in 1888. She married John about 1909, and she gave birth to Raymond in 1911. John was back living with his parents in 1930, when he was enumerated as a widower.

His father came from New York State and Montie was born in Michigan on November 10, 1884, the only child of Elmer J. and Edna May (Montague) Wasson. He was listed as Monta as a child, and he was enumerated as Montague C. Wasson in 1910 at Missoula, where he and his parents were lodging with a family. By this time he had matured into a tall slender man with brown eyes and black hair. A post card photo showing a biplane high over the business section was entitled: "DEREMER'S FIRST FLIGHT IN BAY CITY - OVER WASH. AVE. - - © M. C. WASSON." Her parents emigrated from Norway and Esther M. Olsen was born at Frankfort, Michigan, on August 26, 1896, first of the three children of Alof B. and Hannah Olsen. After she married Montie at Bay City on August 28, 1920, she continued to teach in the public schools. Their only child, Edna Jean Wasson, was born in 1927 and died as an infant. His father and his maternal grandparents came from the state of New York, and Earl was born at Battle Creek, Michigan, on April 29, 1872. He was the only son of John and Jennie Waterbury, and his sister Grace was two years older. Some cabinet mounts have Earl's imprint on one side and that of Ebbie O. Schumaker on the other, both with the same address in Battle Creek. Her father was born in Pennsylvania, and Minnie was born in Canada to a Canadian mother in May of 1877, the daughter of Abraham and Mary J. Blake. Her siblings also were born in Canada: James about 1870 and Emma about 1874. Minnie was brought to the United States in 1878, she married Earl about 1895, and their daughter Gladys was born in Michigan in October of 1896. In June of 1900, Earl was lodging at St. Joseph, while Minnie and Gladys were living in Grand Rapids with Minnie's mother. Minnie divorced Earl, and about 1908 she married Samuel F. Garrison. Gladys still was using the surname Waterbury in 1910, when she was living in California with her mother and stepfather. Minnie died in Los Angeles on April 17, 1952. Gladys never married, and she died at Los Angeles on September 2, 1968.

| Cameron was born at Bath, New York, on August 9, 1852, eldest of the three children of Joshua Whitney Waterman and Eliza (Davenport) Waterman. He played for Yale in the college's first football game with Princeton, and graduated from Yale in 1874. After traveling Europe he purchased a farm on Grosse Isle in Monguagon Township where he spent the summers for the rest of his life. The experienced photographer Joseph E. Watson was his associate in Waterman & Watson, proprietors of the Grand Central Gallery. Elizabeth Hall Beach was born to a mother from New York at Pontiac, Michigan, on August 8, 1857, the daughter of Eben Charles Beach and Harriet (Hall) Beach. Cameron married Elizabeth at Detroit on February 12, 1878. Their sons were born in Detroit: Cameron Beach Waterman on December 20, 1878, and Ira Davenport waterman on June 28, 1883. The elder Cameron managed his farm, subdivided and sold his property in Detroit, and was an officer of a number of Detroit businesses. He purchased a yacht about 1879, qualified for a pilot's license from Buffalo to Duluth, and often sailed along the north shore of Lake Superior during the summer months. Cameron bicycled from Detroit through New York and the Atlantic states, and he took several bicycle tours of Europe. Later, he enjoyed two to four motor-car trips annually in the United States. Elizabeth died in Detroit on May 4, 1920, and Cameron died there on February 20, 1923. |           | 2 3 3 2 2 d 3 3 2 3 2 2 2 2 |

| Edgar was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on April 30, 1880, first of the three sons of Frederick and Anne (Taylor) Waterman. His brother Howard was born in Michigan in April of 1884, and his brother Roy was born in Nebraska in April of 1889. The family moved about 1885 to Whittier Township in Lincoln County, Nebraska, and then in October of 1895 back to Rose City, Michigan. Edgar became a medium sized man with blue eyes and brown hair. Her father came from the state of New York and Sarah was born in Ontario to a Scotch mother on February 14, 1880, last of the ten children of Martin N. and Jane (Burnside) Snook. Sarah was brought to the United States as an infant, and she married Edgar at Rose City on December 3, 1905. They never had children. Edgar was an organizer in 1919 of the Farmers Cooperative in Rose City, and he became the secretary/treasurer of the business. He and Sarah moved to Detroit in 1923, and they still were Detroit residents in 1933. |           | 1 2 3 1 1 3 3 2 1 3 3 1 3 1 3 |

| George was born in Pittsfield Township of Washtenaw County, Michigan, to parents from New York on February 23, 1854, last of the six children of Roswell and Sophronia Maria (Noble) Waterman. Her father emigrated from England, her mother emigrated from Ontario, and Ella Rebecca Rose was born in Michigan on November 5, 1858, the only daughter of John and Eliza (Verrill) Rose. Her brother Charles was five years older. Ella grew up in Ann Arbor and then on the family farm in Pittsfield Township. She and George married on September 23, 1880, and their daughter Leone was born on August 22, 1884. George purchased the Saline gallery of Lucretia A. Gillett in March of 1890, advertised it as "Miss Gillett's old stand," and operated it as a branch of his Ypsilanti business. In the spring of 1900, the Waterman's were sharing their home with three young female lodgers who were attending the Michigan Normal School. George advertised in a 1903 college yearbook: "WATERMAN, Artistic Photography. Medals awarded at state and national conventions." He was an active member of the Photographers' Association of America in 1905. His daughter died in September of 1911 at Colorado Springs, Colorado, and his wife died on May 16, 1917. George moved to Los Angeles in 1917 according to one source, so in January of 1920 he may have been briefly visiting in Ann Arbor, where he was rooming with a family. His father came from the state of New York and James was born in Ohio to a mother from New Brunswick in April of 1864, third of the six children of Nathaniel and Fanny Waters. He had two older brothers and three younger sisters. Belle Hovey was born in Michigan to parents from New York on June 24, 1866, the daughter of Mrs. Sybil H. (Robert) Hovey. Her brother Fred was two years older. Belle married James at Muskegon on December 13, 1886, and she gave birth in Michigan to Effie in August of 1888, to Louise (usually Louie) in December of 1890, to Genevieve in May of 1893, and to Horatio in July of 1895. Columbus, Ohio, had a photographer named J. E. Waters in 1898 and 1899. James and Belle were together in June of 1900, but both remarried in the following year. Belle married the lawyer Jerome Turner who was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan about 1858. Her father came from New York State, her mother emigrated from Scotland, and Maude A. White was born in Illinois in 1866 or early in 1867, the daughter of Frank and Jeanetta M. White. Her brother Frank was three years older. Maude married James in Chicago on September 18, 1901. The purchase of the Owosso gallery from John W. Paine by J. Edgar Waters was reported in the summer of 1903. Louie, Genevieve and Horatio Waters were enumerated twice for the 1910 Census: on April 30 in Chicago with their father and Maude, and on May 3 at Muskegon, Michigan, with their mother and her second husband. Horatio was living at Muskegon with in 1920 with his mother, who as a widow was listed as Mrs. Belle Waters. Belle died at Muskegon in 1925. James had retired with Maude to Florida by 1930, and he died in 1937.

Dike always was called by his middle name by his friends, and he usually was listed as Nathaniel D. Watkins in census and other formal records. His father emigrated from Wales, his mother emigrated from England, and Dike was born on August 10, 1841, at Evansburg, Ohio, fifth of the eleven children of Joseph H. and Henrietta Watkins. On August 5, 1862, when he enlisted as a private in Company A of the 96th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, he was five feet four inches tall and had a fair complexion, hazel eyes and dark hair. Near the end of September he was afflicted with dysentery in camp near Newport, Kentucky, and he was hospitalized at Covington before returning to his regiment on November 25, 1862, while they were en route to Memphis, Tennessee. After the battle of Arkansas Post the regiment returned to Young's Point, Louisiana, where Dike was again stricken with camp diarrhea on February 14, 1863. The regiment moved again to Milliken's Bend, Louisiana, where Dike was discharged for chronic diarrhea on March 20, 1863. He farmed for a while in Monroe Township of Knox County, Ohio. On May 2, 1864, he enlisted for 100 days as a private in Company D of the 145th Regiment, Ohio National Guard, and served until mustered out with his company on August 24, 1864. He lived in Delaware, Cincinnati, Hamilton and Mount Vernon, Ohio, before moving to Indiana in 1869, where he worked as a dentist and as a farmer at Marion and at Xenia. Jane Orilla Kimball, known as Jennie, was born in Ohio in November of 1847 and had been married to John W. Stillwell for only two months when he died in May of 1869. Jane and Dike were married on February 26, 1871, at Larwill, Indiana, and never had children. Most of his life, Dike was partially disabled by piles and diarrhea, and he filed for a pension in 1886. He was the village assessor of Farwell in 1906. Dike was a booster of the 1911 Farwell baseball team to the extent that he was included in the team photograph. He was enumerated without an occupation in 1920 and in 1930. Jennie died on September 20, 1924, and Dike lived until November 9, 1933.

His mother emigrated from England and Russell was born at Princeton, Ontario, on May 30, 1852, last of the six children of William H. and Mary Ann (Hadden) Watkins. His four brothers and one sister were born in Canada between 1837 and 1845. Russell came to Huron County with his family in 1873, and he was living with the family of his brother Edwin in June of 1880. Russell worked as a shoemaker for several years before opening his photograph gallery. "... Reproducing and Enlarging a Specialty. Copies of this Picture can be had Anytime. FIRST DOOR EAST OF THE POSTOFFICE, Bad Axe, Mich." was printed on some of his cabinet mounts. Most of the illustrations in the book cited were reproduced from Russell's photographs. Zellau Amber Eller was born in Michigan in April of 1873, eldest of the three children of Mrs. Izeta J. Eller and her Canadian husband. Zellau married a Canadian named John Galloway Simpson, and she gave birth on their farm in Sarnia Township of Lambton County, Ontario, to Wellington Clifford Simpson on July 18, 1889. Her second marriage, which was Russell's first marriage, took place about 1897. Clifford lived with Russell and Zellau at Bad Axe, and he came along when they moved to Detroit. Russell was a widower by 1920, when he was living with the family of a niece. He was living on the farm of a nephew in 1930, and he died in 1932.

Charles opened his gallery during the summer of 1875. In 1876 he was the only photographer in Cheboygan County. While Charles was preparing a plate for his portrait, one young man helped himself to what he took to be hair oil but was varnish. Similarly, a mother washed her child’s face with a handkerchief dipped in a basin of liquid sitting on the stove, which was a solution of nitrate of silver rather than the warm water she anticipated. No appropriate solvent was available for the varnish on the man’s hair or for the black complexion of the child, so they had to wear off.

Eltham (sometimes Ethan or Elthan) was born at South Would, Canada West, on February 6, 1844, to William E. and Rebecca E. (Bacon) Watson. He was the brother of James C. Watson, who became a photographer and a professor of astronomy, and he had an older sister and another older brother. The family immigrated in 1850 to Ann Arbor, Michigan. Eltham attended the University of Michigan in 1860, and then served in the United States Engineer Corps from 1862 through 1864. He graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Michigan in 1868. He and Miss Ellen C. McOmber were married on June 24, 1869, and their daughter Carrie was born in Michigan in May of 1870. The United States sent eight parties to observe and photograph the Transit of Venus from different points on the western rim of the Pacific Ocean. The party sent to Peking, China, was headed by Professor James C. Watson of the University of Michigan as chief astronomer with Professor C. A. Young as assistant astronomer. W. V. Ranger of Syracuse, New York, was chief photographer of this party with Dr. Ethan Watson of St. Joseph, Michigan as first assistant photographer and Benjamin J. Conrad of Ann Arbor, Michigan, as second assistant photographer. The other parties were similarly staffed. After weeks of establishing routines and drilling in them on the observatory grounds at Washington, D. C., the parties started in June and July of 1874 for their various destinations, so as to be in place for celestial events which would occur on December 8 and 9, 1874. Despite hazy and sometimes cloudy weather, the Peking group made all of the critical observations while Venus was traversing the Sun and exposed 99 photographic plates. Eltham died of paralysis at Northville on October 6, 1879. In 1880, Ellen was living in Ann Arbor with her daughter and was keeping boarders.

The Watsons were born in England, George about 1818 and Martha three years later. They married about 1842, and they had three children born in England: Ann about 1845, Joseph about 1846, and Mary about 1848. They immigrated in 1849 or 1850 to Detroit, where Joseph seems to have died as a child. Martha gave birth in Detroit to their daughter Martha about 1855, and to their daughter Ada in the summer of 1863. His partnership with George apparently was the only photographic business in which Thomas Chope ever engaged. It was noted in 1861 that George was moving to the photograph gallery of Gottshalk Grelling & Company. Emile Saint Alary was another artist with a little photographic experience. St. Alary & Watson's Photographic & Painting Gallery offered photographs colored in oil, pastel, and water colors, as well as pastel and oil paintings. "Copies can be had by sending the number." was printed on some of their cartes de visite, and from those mounts which were numbered they reached 795 before revenue stamps were required and at least 1263 with two and three cent revenue stamps. William H. Brummitt had extensive photographic experience in New York and Philadelphia prior to moving to Detroit, where he boarded with the Watson family, and he became a Pontiac photographer through 1894. Watson & Brummitt advertised in 1870: "PHOTOGRAPHS AND PAINTINGS ... Being practical Artists ourselves, and doing all our own work, we have the advantage over Galleries that have to employ Artists to do the work, who usually receive one-half the price of the picture, which we propose to let the public have the benefit of..." George used a similar advertisement in 1871. Their daughters Mary and Ada still were living with George and Martha in 1880.

His father came from Pennsylvania and James was born to a mother from Nova Scotia in Elgin County, Canada West, on January 28, 1838, first of the four children of William E. and Rebecca E. (Bacon) Watson. His siblings were born in Elgin County: Catherine in 1839, Edward in April of 1841, and Eltham (who is profiled above) in February of 1844. The family moved to Ann Arbor in 1850 to provide their children with superior educational advantages, and James proceeded to study Latin and Greek while employed in various offices. He entered the University of Michigan in 1853 and graduated in 1857. He was a student of and an assistant to Francis Brunnow, who came from the Royal Observatory in Berlin to be the first director of the observatory and professor of astronomy at the University of Michigan. In some classes, James was Brunnow's only student. The first graduate degrees granted on examination by the University of Michigan were the Master of Arts conferred upon James and the Master of Science conferred upon DeVolson Wood in 1859. Annetta H. Waite was born in the state of New York to natives of New York on June 6, 1836, first of the five children of Benjamin Whedon Waite and Lois Ann (Hicks) Waite. Annetta grew up on the family farm, she married James in 1860, and they never had children. An addition was made to the observatory about 1865 which included a residence for the professor of astronomy. James found 22 asteroids between 1863 and 1877, over one-fifth of the total number discovered in that period. He was awarded the La Lande Prize by the French Academy for the six he discovered in 1868 and the three he had found earlier. James was honored by a Ph.D. from Leipzig in 1870 and by an LL.D. from Columbia in 1877. J. C. Watson & Company made the usual studio portraits, including one of University of Michigan president James R. Angell, published stereo views of foreign countries and card photographs of Randolph Rogers statues and of the observatory, and employed E. C. Lewis as photographer. Benjamin J. Conrad was a principal of the company in 1872, and was the second assistant photographer in the party headed by James to observe and photograph the Transit of Venus from Peking, China. With seven other parties headed for other observation posts on the western rim of the Pacific Ocean, James' group of two assistant astronomers and three photographers spent several weeks polishing their routines at Washington, D. C., before leaving in June and July of 1874 for their destinations, so as to be in place for the celestial events of December 8 and 9, 1874. A detailed four-page description of their preparations, procedures, problems, observations and photographic results was written on December 10 and printed in Anthony's Photographic Bulletin three months later. Despite hazy and sometimes cloudy weather, they made all of the critical observations while Venus was traversing the Sun and exposed 99 photographic plates. James was a professor at the State University at Madison, Wisconsin, where he died suddenly on November 23, 1880. His body was returned to Ann Arbor for burial in Forest Lawn Cemetery, and it lay in state in University Hall until the funeral. Annetta lived on in Ann Arbor until her death in 1916.

Joseph was born in New York State to parents from Massachusetts on August 28, 1852, sixth of the eight children of Horace C. and Elizabeth Ann (Elliott) Watson. He was a proprietor of the Grand Central Gallery on Monroe Avenue from 1876 through 1882 with the exception of 1878, when Willis A. Nye managed the gallery for unidentified principals. Waterman & Watson were advertising in Mount Clemens and Pontiac, as well as Detroit, and were selling the Best Berlin Retouched Photographs for $2.50 per dozen in 1877. In addition to the usual card and cabinet portraits, from Monroe Avenue Joseph produced cabinet photographs of a mammoth clock and stereo views of a hall decked out for a Civil War reunion, as well as portraits on 8½ by 5¼ inch “Boudoir” mounts. Joseph attended the inaugural convention of the Photographers’ Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880, and was listed as a PA of A member in 1881. The first Detroit telephone directory was published September 15, 1878. Three years and five directories later, on September 1, 1881, Joseph became the first photographer in Detroit, and probably in Michigan, to have a published telephone number. He moved to 236 Woodward Avenue in September of 1882, and was advertising a first-class gallery in a good location for sale in December of 1882. Frank N. Tomlinson succeeded Joseph at 236 Woodward, operated as the Watson Gallery in 1884 and 1885, and advertised as the successor to J. E. Watson through 1891. Ida was born in Michigan to parents from New York in February of 1862, and she married Joseph about 1883. Their sons were born in Michigan: Joseph in April of 1886, and Horace in December of 1890. Joseph left Detroit in order to recover his health, and spent the later 1880s and the early 1890s ranching in Idaho and Oregon. He returned to Detroit in 1893 and began to use his early art training to produce portraits along the lines attributed to the “new school.” He gathered copies of great paintings into scrapbooks which he studied along with original paintings in the Detroit Art Museum and the works of H. P. Robinson. He had everything ready before the sitter entered the studio and was seated. A casual turn of the chair might improve the light or the pose. Using a bulb on a long tube and a silent shutter within the camera, he could move around the studio and hold the sitter’s attention until he secured the desired expression. The exposure was made while the sitter retained his natural animation, before the stiffness due to studio awkwardness set in. Joseph usually worked with an almost open light, facing north and glazed with ground glass, but some of his portraits exhibit great diversity of lighting. During the 1896 Photographers’ Association of America convention at Celeron, New York, Joseph was awarded a bronze medal for his entry in Class D. He served as secretary of the Michigan Photographers’ Association in 1896, and as president of the Michigan association in 1897. His portrait “Beatrice” was awarded the $150.00 prize for the best picture at the National Photo Paper Company’s Salon in 1897 at Springfield, Massachusetts. The local paper said of it: “In a display of over 2000 photographs it ought not to be an easy task to pick out the winning one, but in the Salon there was no doubt about it.” A photographic journal noted early in 1899 that Joseph had given up his Detroit studio and planned to locate in or around New York. Two months later the magazine reproduced a portrait “By J. E. WATSON, BALTIMORE.” Later in 1899 and twice in 1902 photographs were credited to J. E. Watson, New York. Some of Joseph’s employees were: Robert D. Chappee, retoucher in 1879; Charles R. Baker, photo printer in 1879; Lemuel A. Bracy, photographer in 1880; Francis A. Spencer, photographer in 1880; Sarah A. Watson, clerk in 1880; Frank C. Bracy, photographer in 1880 and retoucher in 1881; James Arthur, photo operator in 1882 and 1883; Richard W. Harrison, retoucher in 1882 and 1883; Charles E. Worden, retoucher in 1882 and 1883; George W. Bolsley, photo printer in 1883; Alban C. Butler, photographer in 1883; Maggie Deegan, assistant in 1883; and Edward A. Major, photo printer in 1883. A decade later his employes included: Alfred Rothschild, clerk in 1894; Andrew Rentschler, photo printer in 1894 and photographer in 1896 and 1897; Austin F. Mann, retoucher in 1895; Ella Shanahan, clerk in 1896; and Ernest W. Shemild, retoucher in 1896. Ida still was keeping house for Joseph in 1930.

Sarah was born in Massachusetts to natives of Massachusetts on February 3, 1838, second of the eight children of Horace C. and Elizabeth Ann (Elliott) Watson. She, Joseph and another younger brother were living in 1880 with their widowed mother, along with their adopted sister Minnie L. Kelso. Sarah and Minnie seem to have hit it off, since they still were living together in 1900, 1910 and 1920. Sarah rented their house on First Street in 1900 and 1910, and she owned their house on Gladstone Street in 1920.

One Wellington Watson served in Company E of the 73rd Illinois Infantry during the Civil War. In 1868 and 1869, this Wellington Watson often sent cabinet and carte de visite portraits to The Philadelphia Photographer, at first through the Detroit photographic supply dealer George R. Angell and later direct. The editor usually praised the posing and lighting, but was frequently more critical of the exposures and retouching. In 1869 this journal offered prizes for the best pair of negatives and prints submitted in three classes: portrait, composition and landscape. Wellington was awarded the gold medal in the portrait class for two cabinet size negatives of a seated lady on 6 ½ by 8 ½ glass plates. He joined the National Photographic Association late in 1869 or early in 1870. Wellington was still, or again, with Grelling's gallery when he sent more examples of his work to The Philadelphia Photographer in 1871. The editor noted that he had improved the lighting to achieve a better pictorial effect and needed only a little longer exposure to stand very high. Oppressed by business and domestic troubles, Wellington used poison to end his own life on April 14, 1877.

Wellington was born in the state of New York to natives of New York on April 4, 1866, second of the six children of Robert Howley Watson and Julia Ann (Buckland) Watson. His brother Earl was born in New York in October of 1864. His sisters were born in Michigan: Helena about 1868, Evelena about 1875, Minnie in April of 1880, and Lutia in March of 1885. Alice Lorraine Monroe was born at Kalamo, Michigan, to natives of New York on May 24, 1860, the only daughter of David Madison Monroe and Elizabeth (Browning) Monroe. Her brother Orley was born at Kalamo in November of 1867. Alice married Wellington at Kalamo on March 8, 1892. Their son Merle was born at Vassar on December 19, 1893. Some of Wellington's cabinet photographs from Vassar look as though they dated from the 1880s, rather than the 1890s. Only "WELLINGTON T. WATSON" was stamped on the backs of several of them. "W. T. Watson, Traveling Artist, VASSAR, MICHIGAN." was printed below the image on others. Alice gave birth in Maryland to Merwyn on February 6, 1897, and to Muriel on November 3, 1901. Alice died on February 27, 1909. The business at Salisbury in 1910 probably was called Watson & Williams, for 24-year-old Earl Williams and his wife Mollie were living in the other half of Wellington's home, and both Earl and Wellington were enumerated as photographers on their own account. His children were grown, and Wellington was living by himself in January of 1920. Pearl was born in the state of New York to natives of New York in 1900 or early in 1931, and she married Wellington twenty years later. Their children were born in Maryland: Robert about 1922, Norma about 1924, and Julia in January of 1930. They were living in 1930 in Pittsville, about ten miles east of Salisbury.

Detroit photographer ..... 1880 1
William was born on April 5, 1863, in Scotland, the birthplace of his parents, John Lawrence Watson and Jane Jean (Murdoch) Watson. His brother James was born in Scotland in May of 1855 and died there in January of 1857. His brother David was born in Scotland in January of 1857. His brother John was born in Ireland while his mother was vacationing there in January of 1860, and as a proud Scotsman he was embarrassed for the rest of his life about his place of birth. The family immigrated in 1869. John and his thirteen-year-old son David were working in an Au Sable saw mill in 1870. John and Jane and their three sons were together at Detroit in 1880, but the senior John died in Detroit in 1882. William died in Detroit some time prior to 1900 and probably before 1890. By 1900 his mother and both of his brothers were living in Los Angeles, California. 1

Frank N. Tomlinson purchased the gallery from Joseph E. Watson, and used this name in his advertisements and on his photograph mounts for a couple of years. One Watson Gallery cabinet portrait of this period is of Uricko Toro Tsuda of Tokio, Japan, who was visiting Detroit during the summer of 1884, shortly after he became the first oriental graduate of Michigan Agricultural College. A specially printed 5 ¼ by 8 ½ inch mount from the Watson Gallery carried a photographic copy of one of the paintings exhibited during the Detroit Art Loan in 1883. The picture's title was printed beneath the image, and comments about the artist and the painting were printed on the back of the mount. t

Theron was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio in 1862 or early in 1863, second of the seven children of Herman J. and Henrietta M. Webb. Her father emigrated from the English Isle of Man and Ada B. Kelley was born at Geneva in Ashtabula County, Ohio, on August 10, 1847, third of the five children of Robert and Catherina Kelley. She was living in 1880 at Painesville, Ohio, where she married Theron in 1886. Their son Shirley was born at Painesville in July of 1887, and their daughter Kathleen was born in Michigan in 1891 or early in 1892. "T. E. WEBB, Photographer, Cleveland, O., Mackinac Island, Mich., and Jacksonville, Fla." was stamped on the 3 by 5 inch paper folder protecting a tintype of two young men with boots on their feet and cigars in their mouths. Theron advertised in Alpena as a "Photographer in all styles" and as the "Leading Photographer. The Finest Finished 'Aristo' Photographs in the City $3.00 per dozen. Albumen Photographs $2.50 per dozen...." One of his cabinet portraits was of T. W. Simpson, Alpena master of the schooner Thio Voges. On a table beside Simpson was a large detailed model of his schooner. Another of his Alpena cabinet photos was of men peeling bark and stacks of logs outside a large ventilated building. Edward F. Forgason and Shirley Jay Webb were his associates in Cleveland. Theron died at his Elyria home on April 15, 1944. Burial was in Lake View Cemetery.

Webb, W. W.

- Lansing photographer .....1893 1
- Traveling photographers J. N. Wigle of Detroit and W. W. Webb of St. Thomas, Ontario, had been in Lansing for several weeks taking photographs of public buildings and points of interest when they were arrested September 9, 1893, on a warrant charging them with taking a photograph which would corrupt the morals of both young and old, for the purpose of sale, distribution and circulation, a state prison offence. They were accused of selling obscene photos in Lansing saloons, and charged specifically with taking a photograph on August 18 of Mrs. Emily Ketchum in her parlor while she was wearing nothing but a pair of shoes and a smile. Mrs. Ketchum, who was also arrested, was a fairly prominent Lansing resident and had recently been active in the W.C.T.U. She was past middle age and was not considered particularly beautiful. She denied posing for the photo while agreeing that it was taken in a corner of her parlor which included furniture made by her carpenter husband and a framed copy of the W.C.T.U. constitution and by-laws. The police had this photograph and the negative from which it was printed, and obtained a search warrant for the hotel rooms of the photographers, where they found a large number of bawdy pictures. Wigle and Webb claimed that the negative was not their work, and that the other nude photographs had been copied from noted oil paintings during their travels. They were held for examination on September 13. Local saloon keeper Henry Chapman provided surety for Webb's $150 bail, but Wigle was obliged to remain in jail. At the examination a young local photographer named Irving Cary testified that he had loaned some frames to Wigle and Webb, was in their hotel room to retrieve the frames, looked over their negatives and noted the one of Mrs. Ketchum. Knowing that people were looking for evidence against her, he took the negative and made a print from it. Later the city marshall demanded the plate and Cary gave it to him. Wigle was tried in Lansing on October 3, 1893, and his attorney claimed that although the pictures had been taken, they had not been distributed, sold or loaned by the defendant. The prosecutor apparently convinced the jury that Wigle had taken the pictures with criminal intent, for after brief deliberations Wigle was found guilty and was sentenced to a short term in the county jail. Webb was tried at Mason in January of 1894 on the same charge and was acquitted, probably because of evidence that Wigle had taken the Ketchum picture. Mrs. Ketchum was found guilty at Mason a few days later, but this verdict was overturned on appeal in January of 1895.

Andrew was born in Plymouth Township of Grafton County, New Hampshire, to natives of New Hampshire on June 3 1
17, 1836, fifth of the seven known children of Arthur L. and Ruth P. (Powers) Webster. He was single in 1860, but by 3 1
1870 he was married to Fannie who was born in New York State late in 1833 or in 1834. The Andrew J. Webster that 1 4
served in Company I of the Third Michigan Infantry and in Company I of the Fifth Michigan Infantry during the Civil 4
War was not the photographer. Andrew purchased the Constantine gallery of Noble Abrams and by May 26, 1870, was 4 2
"... ready to take the 'phiz' of all applicants, true to life.... the place to go for good Rembrandts.... Through the 2 kindness of Mr. Coffinberry,... offering ... Photographic copies of his great painting lately on exhibition in this town.... 2
Excellent Gems.... Copying and enlarging, and finishing in India Ink or Water Colors ... as good as can be made from 2 pictures: "First Class Ambrotypes and Gems made at Webster's.... Not the cheap kind but good ones.... there is nothing 2 more worthless than a poor one.... The best ... Photographs or Ferrotypes ... cheapest in the end.... No picture is perfect 2 unless the position, toilet and drapery are so arranged as to give a pleasing effect. And the ladies know that no one but 2 a lady can do it. Such an invaluable assistant may be found at Webster's...." He produced stereoscopic views from 2 5

Constantine, and he had the monogram of the National Photographic Association printed on some of his card 5 t photograph mounts. Something happened to Fannie, and Andrew married again about 1878. His bride was Caroline, t 1 who was born in Connecticut to natives of Connecticut in March of 1825. They never had children. In June of 1900, 1
Andrew had been unemployed for nine of the previous twelve months. He was a widower by January of 1920. Andrew 1 moved in 1929 to Oak Park, where he lived with the family of his nephew Glen Webster. He died in Oak Park on 3 1
December 17, 1930, and burial was in nearby Fairmount Cemetery. 3

| His father came from the state of New York, his mother emigrated from England, and Fletcher was born in Hadley Township of Lapeer County, Michigan, on February 22, 1854. He was second of the seven children of Edwin Baldwin Webster and Ann (White) Webster. The Frederick Arthur Webster and Harry Dorr Webster profiled below were his brothers. Her parents came from New York State and Polly Lucinda Herriman was born in Groveland Township of Oakland County, Michigan, on March 27, 1855, second of the four children of Seth L. and Polly Jane (Upton) Herriman. She married Fletcher at Lapeer, Michigan, on January 13, 1876. Polly's death on April 18, 1879, was associated with the birth of a son who did not survive. Fletcher advertised nationally in April of 1885: "SITUATION WANTED - As general assistant in a good gallery; can operate, retouch or print; no Sunday work. Address Fletcher Webster, Ortonville, Mich." Her father emigrated from Scotland, her mother emigrated from England, and Abigail Jane Anna Bruce was born on August 19, 1863, at South Dumfries in Brant County, Ontario. She was eighth of the ten children of Andrew Clark Bruce and Abigail Jane (Barker) Bruce, and she usually was called Annie. She married Fletcher at Lapeer on June 1, 1887. Fletcher died at Lapeer on December 17, 1888. Annie did not remarry and had no children, and she still was living in 1935. | 1 22 12 122 333 22222 |   |

His father was a native of New York, and his mother emigrated from England. In 1880 he was living with, and probably working for, his elder brother Harry who is profiled below. Fred registered from Michigan at the fourth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in August of 1883. Her father emigrated from Northern Ireland, her mother emigrated from Canada, and Charlotte (often Lottie) McCullagh was born at Memphis in Macomb County, Michigan, on January 19, 1862. She was second of the seven children of Thomas and Altha (Carroll) McCullagh. Lottie married Fred at Lapeer on August 7, 1884. Fred's ad in 1885 was for a "Photographic Artist. Children's Pictures a Specialty. Copying, Enlarging, Viewing, Crayon Portraits, &c. All Work Warranted First-Class...." His St. Johns cabinet photographs included a wedding party in front of the minister and individual portraits of the members of a brass band, each holding his instrument while seated on a high-wheeled bicycle. Fred opened a gallery in 1889 at the corner of Broadway and Twelfth Street in Oakland's main business center. Lottie gave birth in Oakland to Frederick A. Webster, Junior, on September 26, 1891. Photographic prints by Frederick A. Webster were bound into Oakland directories for 1892 and 1894. He was elected president of the Photographers' Association of California in 1903. Fred became less active in photography and was ill for months before his death on April 27, 1933. His mother emigrated from England, his father was born in New York State and grew up in Michigan, and Harry was born in Hadley Township of Lapeer County, Michigan, on May 13, 1852. He was eldest of the seven children of Edwin Baldwin Webster and Ann (White) Webster. Her mother emigrated from Scotland, her father came from Connecticut, and Anna Maria Fuller was born at Carleton Place, Ontario, on February 7, 1858, last of the five known children of Samuel and Esther Fuller. She married Harry at Otisville, Michigan, on May 16, 1877. Harry worked fifteen months for Charles A. Kelley before buying him out in 1879. A method suggested by H. D. Webster for retouching solar negatives was published in a photographic handbook in 1881. Harry was at Milwaukee for the fourth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1883. "Views in Lapeer and Vicinity, H. D. WEBSTER, Photographer" was printed on the mounts of stereoscopic views. Harry probably was a Laramie photographer earlier than is shown above, for Anna gave birth to Harold Dorr Webster at Laramie on June 2, 1889. Anna also was enumerated as a Cripple Creek photographer in 1900, and she probably played a significant part in her husband's photographic business. Harry was a member of the Photographers' Association of the Pacific Northwest in 1907. He was a widower by 1910, when he was living by himself at Pomeroy. Harry died on June 11, 1927, and burial was in a cemetery back at Flint, Michigan.

Thomas was born in Maryland Township of Otsego County, New York, to natives of New York in September of 1848, the elder child of Ebenezer and Margaret (Burnside) Webster. His sister Ida was born four years later. He married a woman named Ella and their son Charles D. Webster was born at Bay City on May 12, 1876. Ella died at Bay City about 1880. Isabel (once Bella) was born in Connecticut to natives of Connecticut in October of 1853, and she married Thomas in the spring of 1882. Their daughter Amelia was born in Bay City in July of 1886. Printed labels with "T. E. Webster, Amateur, Bay City, Mich." were pasted on the mounts of lantern slides of scenes in Belgium, France, Switzerland and other countries, in some cases over the label of "L. Black & Co., Manufacturing Opticians, Detroit, Mich." The slides were of various commercial styles, mostly in the standard 3¼ by 4 inch size, and they were numbered up to 405 on small round stickers. Isabel was keeping house for Thomas in 1920, but by April of 1930 Thomas was a widower and his widowed sister Ida was a member of his household.

His mother emigrated from Ireland and Thomas was born in Upper Canada (later Ontario) in June of 1860, last of the eight children of John and Margaret Webster. He was brought to the United States in 1866, and later became a naturalized citizen. Eleanor Venellia was born in New York State to natives of New York in October of 1866, and she married Thomas in the spring of 1886. Their first two children were born in Wisconsin: John in April of 1888, and Marguerite in November of 1890. Their other children were born in Michigan: the twins Earl and Harold in February of 1895, and Byron (later Harry) in August of 1897. They were living in 1898 at 745 Phoenix Street in South Haven. The sale by Thomas of the South Haven photography business to Frank H. Crouse was reported in March of 1900. Thomas died in 1921, and his burial was in McKinley Township of Polk County, Wisconsin. Eleanor was living in 1930 in Grays Harbor County, Washington, with the family of her daughter Marguerite, now Mr. August W. Rusch.

His parents came from New York or Pennsylvania, and Clarence was born in Michigan about 1857. He was single and living in a large hotel in 1880, and he belonged to the Photographers' Association of America in 1881. "STAR Photograph & Tintype Gallery ..." or "STAR PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY, C. L. WEED, 120 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Mich. Commercial Work a Specialty." was printed on card and cabinet mounts. These were used for portraits of ordinary people as well as for advertising or souvenir photographs of entertainers such as the Hurtt Family of musicians, Little Flora the child snake charmer, the living skeleton George Price, the very heavy Maggie Clark, May Heller the second sight seer, General Cardenas and other midgets. Her father emigrated from Ireland, and Clara was born in Michigan to a Canadian mother in 1869. She married Clarence in 1892 or early in 1893, and their children were born in Detroit: Harold on March 27, 1897, and Marian in 1904. Clarence was recognized as the founder when the Michigan Photographers' Association was organized in 1895, and he presented the association with the Founder's Cup, a silver loving cup for which the professionals were to compete each year until it was awarded to one photographer for the second time. He addressed the first convention of the MPA about "Platinum Toning" in January of 1896. During the second convention in Detroit a year later, there was "... an exhibition of a collection of pictures gathered by C. L. Weed, of the American Aristotype Company, showing the evolution in photography since the time of Daguerre to the present day. There will be shown pictures from each year since 1835; first, the silhouette, then the Daguerreotype, then the Ambrotype,... made on clear glass, colored glass, leather, black enamel paper, rubber, ivory, iron and tin; and photographs made as early as 1854, and each year since...." Clarence and his family were living in 1910 in a suburb of Louisville, Kentucky. His studio remained in the same location on Witherell Street during 1920, while its address changed along with most others in Detroit. At this time Clarence, Clara and their daughter Marian were living with the family of Clara's sister Mary, now Mrs. William H. Stanzell. Clarence was a widower sharing his home with his son and daughter in 1930, and he died in Detroit on February 14, 1939.

His father came from Maine, and Daniel was born in the state of New York to a mother from Massachusetts about 1836. He married a young woman named Jane who was born in Pennsylvania about 1842, and their daughter Martha was born in Pennsylvania in April of 1860. It was noted in 1860 that both Daniel and Jane were unable to read or write. Daniel served in Company F of the 151st Pennsylvania Infantry during the Civil War. Something happened to Jane and Daniel married a young woman named Lydia who was born in Pennsylvania about 1847. She gave birth in Pennsylvania to Albert about 1865, to Chloe about 1866, and to Clara about 1869. In 1870 Lydia was caring for Daniel's daughter Martha as well as her own three children. Something happened to this family and by 1880 Daniel was married to Nancy L. Boyce, who is profiled below. Nancy was enumerated as the photographer in the family for the census in 1894. She filed for a Widow's Pension in March of 1900.

| Her father came from Maine, her mother emigrated from England, and Grace was born at Chicago, Illinois, on May 6, 1894, the only child of George W. and Jennie (Leason) Weeks. Her grandfather gave her a box camera and a photograph developing outfit when she was fourteen. When he died in 1911, Grace came to live with her grandmother on three acres near Decatur. She had already been processing her own pictures, and soon was developing and printing photos as requested by her friends. She attended school at Decatur for one year, but then dropped out of high school because of difficulty with geometry. She opened a photo shop in 1921 in the basement of the GAR Hall on Phelps Street in Decatur. In 1925 her father purchased a building across the street for Grace, who moved her shop into it and the G. Weeks Photo & Gift Shop remained there for the rest of her life. She was an avid painter and photographer, and was characterized by her father as being married to her photo shop. To her photo service she gradually added cards, candy, gifts and novelties. Grace produced many post card photographs of Decatur including the wrecking of an old building, the toppling of a tall chimney, business street scenes and scenic views of nearby lakes, and she was still adding views in the 1970s. Her name does not appear on all the cards, but some have "FOR MORE PHOTO CARDS SEND TO G. W. PHOTO & GIFT SHOP, GRACE WEEKS, DECATUR, MICH." stamped on their backs. Grace suffered a stroke in June of 1980 and died in a Paw Paw hospital two weeks later on July 6, 1980. Her negatives and records passed through the hands of a dealer and were acquired by Western Michigan University, where the materials are being processed and a finding aid is being created. |           | 1 33 222222222 tt 2222 |

Avery was born to a mother from Connecticut at Prairieville, Michigan, on November 29, 1845, first of the eight children of Newton Revilo Avery and Hannah Elizabeth (Sanford) Avery. Her four sisters and three brothers were born between 1850 and 1870. Viola married James at Wayland on January 16, 1862. James enlisted at Kalamazoo as a bugler in Company C of the Eleventh Michigan Cavalry on October 7, 1863, and he was mustered into the army on the same day. James was promoted to chief bugler and spent some time during the summer of 1864 in a hospital at Lexington, Kentucky. He may have been transferred to the Eighth Michigan Cavalry on July 20, 1864. He was appointed Second Lieutenant of Company C of the 107th United States Colored Volunteer Infantry on January 27, 1865. Viola gave birth to Edward Ethelbert Weeks at Galesburg, Michigan, on October 17, 1865, and to Elizabeth Sarah Weeks at Centreville on July 18, 1875. James made his living as a musician, and he was characterized as an extremely temperate man. He first applied for a pension before 1890 and he still was submitting affidavits in 1895 testifying that he was disabled from manual labor at least fifty percent by diarrhea and piles. By early in 1902 James was almost totally blind and was attempting to get his pension increased to the $12.00 per month maximum. He died at the Minneapolis Soldiers Home on March 17, 1906, and interment was at River Falls, Wisconsin. |           | 777772 333 22 33 77 222222 |

Weems, Martha, Miss

Petoskey (Weems & Beardsley) PHOTOGRAPHERS ..... 1910 R

Weems & Marcena Beardsley came from New York and purchased the Petoskey studio of Mrs. Grace Chandler Horn in November of 1909. They sold it back to her in October of 1910, and had plans of going into business elsewhere. They roomed with the family of photographer Perry A. Fisher while in Petoskey. Martha was single and 23 years old and, like her parents, was born in Tennessee. 1 1 2 2

All of his grandparents emigrated from Germany. Walter was born in Detroit to natives of Michigan on August 16, 1889, last of the four sons of Phillip and Catherine (Schaefer) Weiler. His brothers were born in Michigan: Henry in June of 1880, Edward in February of 1882, and Charles in May of 1884. Walter became an average sized man with gray eyes and dark hair. Though Schram & Weiler were classified as photographers, their business was more accurately described as an art store. Neither Walter nor his partner, Edmund E. Schram, had previous photographic experience. Walter still was living with his parents in 1917, when he expected to be exempt from military service because of an injured knee. Martha Shultz was born in North Dakota on June 24, 1906, and she married Walter at Bowling Green, Ohio, on December 2, 1932. Their son Howard and their daughter Violet were born in Michigan. Martha died in a Mount Clemens hospital and Walter died in the same place just thirteen days later, on December 20, 1969, survived their son and daughter. Andrew H. Weiszer was born in Hungary to Hungarian parents in June of 1867. He immigrated in 1883, and he became a saloon keeper. Susan was born in Hungary to Hungarian parents in January of 1872. She immigrated in 1889, and she married Andrew in the same year. Susan gave birth to Ella in Michigan in November of 1890, to Frank at Cleveland, Ohio, on March 4, 1895, to Edward in Ohio on April 23, 1898, and to Stephen in Indiana in 1904 or early in 1905. In addition to her own family, Susan was providing in 1900 for seven Hungarian boarders who were day laborers between 24 and 37 years old. Joseph Babas apparently had professional experience prior to immigrating in 1906, for was a Detroit photographer for two years before forming the partnership with Susan Weiszer. Andrew Weiszer seems to have died about 1907, and Joseph helped Susan in terminating the saloon business. Joseph moved his photograph studio in 1909 from 2195 to 2210 West Jefferson Avenue. Four Hungarian families were housed at 2210 Jefferson Avenue in 1910, including Joseph Babas and his young second wife, plus Susan Weiszer and her three sons. Susan's son enlisted in the armed service of the United States on October 12, 1917. Her son Edward was living and working at 2210 West Jefferson Avenue in 1918, when he named Alexander Lamb of that address as his employer and as his closest relative.

Alvin (often Allie) was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in September of 1869, first of the two children of Alvin C. and Cynthia A. (Stimpson) Welch. His brother Freddie was born in November of 1879. Her father came from New York, and Mary was born in Michigan in February of 1872. She married Allie in 1891 or early in 1892, and their daughter Vesta was born in Michigan in February of 1894. On December 10, 1900, Allie filed a patent application on a Flash Light. He was granted Patent Number 673,184 on April 30, 1901. His device had the double acting trigger, the hammer and the grip of a pistol, with a covered chamber for flash powder projecting upwards in place of a gun barrel. The mechanism was arranged to uncover the powder receptacle as the hammer was rising, and to ignite the powder when the hammer fell. The Chelsea Manufacturing Company manufactured the Chelsea Flash Light Pistol as well as general novelties and hardware specialties. Alvin died at Wyandotte, Michigan, on May 15, 1914. Mary and Vesta were living in 1920 at Pontiac, Michigan.

Anson was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on November 17, 1875, fifth of the seven children of Henry O. and Marion Mary (Persels) Welch. He became a short man with blue eyes and dark hair, and he stayed on his parents' farm until he married. Lillian was born in Ontario to natives of Ontario on July 22, 1879, first of the two children of George W. and Ella (Lester) Morton. Her brother Samuel was born in Michigan in 1887. Lillian married Anson at Memphis on January 28, 1903. Their first three children were born in Richmond Township: Elmer M. Welch on November 15, 1903, Nina Belle Welch on October 7, 1905, and Leroy Welch in 1907. Their daughter Helen Elizabeth Welch was born in Memphis on March 22, 1914. In 1905 Anson advertised his "Photographic Studio, fine photograph and view work a specialty, a full line of picture frames and mouldings, pictures framed in the latest styles." The photographs reproduced in the 1912 yearbook of Memphis High School all were taken by A. L. Welch. They included views of the school and the town as well as portraits of the graduates, groups of juniors, sophomores, freshmen and sports teams, and action shots of sports events. Anson started hauling lumber in 1914 for his new Photo Gallery and Photo Play Theater at the corner of Main Street and Potter Street. He presented moving picture shows on Wednesday and Saturday evenings through 1919, when he sold the building to Will Potter. Anson died at Port Huron on November 15, 1943, and Lillian lived until December of 1961.

Frank was born at Sickles, Michigan, to natives of Michigan on August 18, 1876, second of the three children of Clark S. and Almira (Baker) Welch. His brothers were born in Rome Township: Alfred on October 22, 1874, and Llewlyn on January 30, 1886. Frank became a short slender man with grey eyes and brown hair. His purchase from Elmer J. Wasson (soon to be his brother-in-law) of the Albion gallery formerly operated by Frederick J. Neal was reported early in 1899. Her father came from Vermont and Norma was born at Pompei, Michigan, to a mother from Ohio on September 6, 1874, the younger daughter of Ira W. and Amelia Electa (Brown) Montague. Her sister Edna was born at Georgetown, Michigan, on May 23, 1864, and she later married the photographer Elmer J. Wasson. Norma married Frank at Bay City on March 22, 1900. Their only child, Carroll Stephen Welch, was born in Bay City on August 4, 1904. "The Welch Studio, Pontiac, Mich." was blind stamped into the 11¼ by 13¾ inch mount of an 8 by 10 photo of 29 men and a dog on the steps of the Oakland County Court House. "Frank E. Welch, Portrait & Commercial Photographer, Welch Studio, Pontiac, Mich. Crofoot Block, Phone 387J. Our Motto, 'A pleased customer is our best advertisement.'" was printed on negative envelopes. Norma was enumerated in 1920 as Frank's assistant in the studio, and she probably played a significant part in his photographic business. Frank also was selling picture frames in 1930, when he and his wife were living in Waterford Township. Frank had a heart attack in 1938, and he died at Pontiac on December 19, 1941. Norma lived on in Pontiac until her death on May 19, 1955.

Her father came from Vermont and Norma Pearl Montague was born at Pompei, Michigan, to a mother from Ohio on September 6, 1874, the younger daughter of Ira W. and Amelia Electa (Brown) Montague. Her sister Edna was born at Georgetown, Michigan, on May 23, 1864, and she later married the photographer Elmer J. Wasson. Norma married the photographer Frank E. Welch at Bay City on March 22, 1900. Their only child, Carroll Stephen Welch, was born in Bay City on August 4, 1904. Norma probably played a much more significant part in Frank's photographic business than is indicated above. Frank died at Pontiac on December 19, 1941. Norma lived on in Pontiac until her death on May 19, 1955.

Carl was born at Saint Johns, Michigan, to a mother from New York on February 17, 1887, the only child of Martin and Emily Lucretia (Pulfrey) Weller. His father was born in Michigan, and he became a physician and surgeon. "High School, St. Johns, Mich. C.V.W." was lettered on a clear stripe along the lower edge of the negative from which post card cyanotypes were made. The message written by his mother on one of these cards stated that Carl was the photographer. "Clinton Ave. St. Johns, Mich." and "M.E. Church, St. Johns, Mich." were lettered similarly on clear stripes on negatives from which postal silver prints were made and mailed between 1908 and 1910. Carl was valedictorian of his class, which graduated from Albion College in 1908. He then attended the University of Michigan and received his PhD in Medicine in 1913. Her parents emigrated from England and Elsie A. Huckle was born in Michigan on December 16, 1882, the only daughter and second of the four children of Reverend Thomas Gentle Huckle and Bertha (Walker) Huckle. She graduated from Albion College in 1909, and she married Carl on June 26, 1913. Their children were born in Ann Arbor: Thomas Huckle Weller on June 15, 1915, and John M. Weller on March 4, 1919. Carl received his MS in Pathology from the University of Michigan in 1916. Thomas, his elder son, earned BS and MS degrees from the University of Michigan, and then received his MD from Harvard in 1940. Thomas served in the U. S. Army Medical Corps through World War II, and he received the Nobel Prize for Medicine in 1954 for cultivation of the polio vaccine. Carl received an honorary ScD from Albion College in 1956, and he died from coronary artery disease on December 10, 1956. He was memorialized by the Carl Vernon Weller Professorship in Pathology at the University of Michigan Medical School.

George was born in Michigan to parents from New York on September 19, 1866, first of the three children of Orlando and Mary D. Weller. His brothers also were born in Coldwater: Nelson about 1869, and Erwin about 1871. Viola Maye (often Mayme) Porter was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio on March 15, 1879, the only daughter and last of the three children of Lorenzo D. and Isabelle O. (Swift) Porter. She married George at Detroit on January 1, 1898. Viola gave birth to Elmer at Coldwater on September 25, 1898, to Orlo in Michigan on September 18, 1900, and to Herbert in Michigan in 1902. Her daughters were born at Milan: Eva on May 2, 1904, Marribell in 1908, and Margaret in 1910. "C. F. NEEDHAM, Milan, Mich." was printed diagonally at the lower right corner of 7 by 3½ inch mounts for oval prints, and then "G. K. Weller, Portrait Photographer" was blind stamped over it at the same angle. George cut a 1½ by 1¼ inch oval opening near the center of a 5½ by 4 inch print of floral arrangements and placed it over a small portrait of an older woman on a 9 by 6 inch mount. "Weller" or "Weller Photo" was lettered on the negatives of postal photographs of Milan business streets and railway structures, and of the general store and the band at Azalia, five miles south. Dates between 1907 and 1916 were lettered on the negatives or postmarked on some of these cards. George advertised in 1915 that "Cloudy days are as good as Sunshine for Sittings." His home and his studio were usually at the same address. From 1916 to 1927 his wife Mayme was a Milan florist, and in 1922 their son Orlo D. Weller was identified as a photographer who was boarding with them. George was described as a retired chauffeur who was divorced prior to his death at Wyandotte, Michigan, on February 18, 1929. Burial was at Milan. Viola died at Dundee, Michigan, on December 10, 1960.

His father came from Ohio and Loyd was born to a mother from Missouri at Racoon, Indiana, on March 22, 1895, second of the three children of Albert A. and Rosa E. Weller. His brother Harry Russell Weller was born in Indiana in May of 1893, and his sister Vernia V. Weller was born in North Dakota in October of 1899. Copemish is in the northwest quadrant of Cleon Township. "Photo: Loyd Weller, Copemish, Mich." was typed on the post card backs of photographs, including one of five fairly young men in hats and vests and other clothing standing in front of a dark drape. Loyd mailed this card to his future bride, who was living in Traverse City in May of 1913. Her father came from New York State and Clara Meroa Hotchkin was born to a mother from Vermont in Wexford County, Michigan, on July 26, 1895, first of the three children of Jay Heman Hotchkin and Cordelia (Valencourt) Hotchkin. Her sister Elsie Harriet Hotchkin was born in February of 1897, and her brother Harold Heman Hotchkin was born in April of 1899. Clara married Loyd on June 2, 1919, and like her husband she was working as a bookkeeper in an office in 1920. She soon reversed the order of her given names, becoming Meroa C. Weller for the rest of her life. Meroa gave birth in Battle Creek to Robert Loyd Weller on May 25, 1923, and to Richard Albert Weller on January 9, 1925. Loyd seems to have founded Weller Built Homes for his sons, for Robert was Vice President and Richard was Secretary of the company in 1946. Robert was President by 1951, and Richard was Vice President by 1954 when Loyd had left the building company to his sons and concentrated upon his real estate business. Loyd died at Battle Creek in 1959. Meroa lived on at Battle Creek until her death on February 10, 1997, when she was almost 102 years old. Burial of both was in Memorial Park Cemetery at Battle Creek.

Orlo was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio on September 18, 1900, second of the six children of George K. and Viola Maye (Porter) Weller. His father had become a professional photographer by 1904, and he is profiled above. Orlo was living with his parents in 1910, in 1920 and in 1922. Mildred K. Speer was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio on July 26, 1902, eldest of the six children of Cloyd and Hattie (Baxter) Speer. Her family was living in 1920 at Wyandotte, Michigan, where Mildred was a stenographer for the McCord Company, and her father was a laborer in the shipyard. Mildred married Orlo. Mildred died on July 11, 1970, at Saint Petersburg, Florida. Orlo died in August of 1876 at Wickenburg in Maricopa County, Arizona, Archie was born in January of 1858 or earlier in the French region of Canada. He immigrated in 1884, and he never applied for United States citizenship. His surname was spelled Willett in the Michigan gazetteers, but was spelled Wellett on his photograph mounts, in census reports and in local directories. An advertisement in 1888 was for "H. WELLETT'S PHOTOGRAPHIC ART STUDIO, Bessemer, Michigan. - Photographs in all the Latest Styles. Pictures Enlarged and Colored. Pictures of Designs and Machinery a Specialty." Archie's second wife, Mary Chatrend, was born in Michigan to French Canadian parents in September of 1875, and she married Archie in January of 1900. Their sons were born in Michigan: Roy on September 16, 1904, and Gabriel on March 26, 1915. Roy was in the Industrial School for Boys at Lansing in 1920, but he was back living with his parents in 1930.

His father came from Vermont and Harvey was born at Tecumseh on May 28, 1873, second of the three children of Peleg J. and Jenette Mary (Terry) Welling. His siblings were born at Tecumseh: Clyde in 1871 or early in 1872, and Eva in May of 1878. Clyde died as a youth, and Harvey became a tall stout man with brown eyes and dark hair. "H. A. Welling, TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN." was printed on cabinet mounts below the photographs. One of these shows two seated young women with a frowning young man with a banjo seated on the floor in the lotus position in front of and between them. His face and hands and much of his clothing are dark, but the rest of the scene, including the ladies, is very light. "Taken Jan 1st, 1894. Minnie and Edna Cable, Harvey Welling" was written on the back of the mount. A photograph from Welling's Studio in Britton of two young children employing unusual rustic accessories and backdrop on a professional cabinet mount was inscribed: "Floyd and Hattie Allen, April 24th, 1895." All of her grandparents came from New York and Emma E. Clark was born at Jackson, Michigan, to natives of Michigan on January 1, 1878, eldest of the three children of Harmon and Phebe (McGraw) Clark. Her siblings were born at Manchester, Michigan: Nellie in April of 1880, and Elmer in July of 1883. Emma married Harvey in the spring of 1896, and their son Norval was born in Michigan on June 5, 1898. They had no further children, and Emma still was keeping house for Harvey in 1930. Harvey died in 1954, and burial was back in Tecumseh.

His parents emigrated from Canada and William was born in Michigan on July 4, 1883, the elder child of Samuel and Anna E. Wells. His sister Alva was born in December of 1887. William became a medium sized man with brown eyes and black hair, and he somehow lost the first joint of the middle toe on his left foot. Her mother emigrated from Canada and Edna was born in Michigan in January of 1887, second of the three children of George and Margaret Nash. Her brothers also were born in Michigan: Herman in October of 1884, and George in December of 1892. Edna married William in 1903. Their daughter Lucille was born in Onaway in 1904. Besides her husband, her daughter, and her brother Alfred, Edna was providing for four unrelated lodgers in 1920. She still was keeping house for William in 1930.

"Welper" was lettered along with captions like "Main St. Jerome, Mich." and "Res. C. D. Seeley. -3" on the negatives of post card photographs mailed from Jerome in the fall of 1911, and with captions such as "MAIN St. No. Adams, Mich." and "N. A. H. S." and "M.E. Church and Parsonage." on cards mailed from North Adams in May of 1913 and January of 1914. "-Welper-" was lettered on negatives from which other postal photos were printed, including one of the Mosherville Creamery and the Lake Roller Mills mailed from Mosherville in January of 1913. The photographer may have been Troy A. Welper, who was born in Michigan in 1888 or early in 1889. He was an Adams Township school teacher in 1910. Troy was living at that time with his 59-year-old widowed father, Miles E. Welper, and his 15-year-old brother, Floyd E. Welper. North Adams is in Adams Township, and Jerome and Mosherville are three to eight miles north of it. By 1920, Troy was operating a business college in Columbus, Ohio.

His father emigrated from Ireland and Forbes was born at Belleville, Ontario, on February 14, 1868, second of the five sons of John W. and Ellenor (Free) Welsh. He began his study of photography with LeClear in Detroit. He came to Albion in the spring of 1893 and purchased the finely equipped gallery of Harrison L. Burgess. His partner in Albion was Frederick J. Neal, who had eleven sisters. The youngest of these sisters was Edith M. Neal, who was born at Port Hope in Ontario to English parents on October 5, 1871, the daughter of John and Maria Neal. She came to the United States in 1885, and she married Forbes on October 15, 1895, in Vigo County, Indiana. Their children were born at Saint Joseph: Clarence on March 31, 1901, and Zillah on April 25, 1904. The surname sometimes was misspelled in directory listings as in this 1899 advertisement: "Have F. C. WELCH make your photos, they are up-to-date and never fade...." Forbes used cabinet mounts on which his name was spelled: "F. C. Walsh." He advertised nationally in the spring and summer of 1901: "FOR SALE - Half interest in my photograph business to young man of good character and good retoucher; reason, more than I can handle alone; for particulars ..." His sale of a half interest to Charles H. Benning was reported early in 1902. Late in 1902 it was announced that Albert A. LeClear, in association with F. C. Welsh of Detroit, was spending four thousand dollars in furnishing and equipping a fine studio at Grand Rapids. The announcement of the opening of LeClear's Grand Rapids studio did not mention a partner, and Forbes advertised early in 1903: "WANTED - To rent a neat, unfurnished studio in good, live town from 10,000 to 50,000 population; will take five or ten year lease of right place; references furnished. Address F. C. Welsh, 203 Monroe St., Grand Rapids, Mich." The opening of a studio with remodeled rooms and a new addition by Forbes at Muncie, Indiana, was reported in the summer of 1903. He advertised again in the fall of 1903: "FOR SALE - Studio in city of 35,000, all new six months ago; rent $30 per month, including steam heat and water; prices $4 to $8; up one flight of stairs; price $1,000; would sell half interest to good man, who would take charge. Address F. C. Welsh, Muncie, Indiana." Uriah Welsh, the partner of Forbes in Cadillac, is profiled below. Both of their children were living with Forbes and Edith in 1930, when Clarence was manager of a tire vulcanizing shop and Zillah was a grade school teacher. Forbes died at Sanford on February 15, 1931, and Edith lived on there until her death on May 14, 1961.

| At least one third of the gazetteers spelled his surname "Welch." His father emigrated from Ireland and Uriah was born in Ontario in 1865, first of the five sons of John W. and Elenor (Free) Welsh. He commuted to his Detroit job from his home across the river in Windsor, Ontario. Frederick J. Neal & Welsh were successors to Herbert L. Bragg, who became Uriah's partner in 1896. Herbert was succeeded in the partnership in 1899 by his widow, Mrs. Mildred Bragg. Mildred was born in Canada in July of 1858, and she brought along her eight-year-old son when she and Uriah married about 1900. Uriah helped to raise Raymond L. Bragg as his step-son. Both Mildred and Uriah became naturalized United States citizens. Forbes C. Welsh was the other brother in Cadillac, and he is profiled above. Walter E. Sours had been a professional photographer for ten years prior to becoming Uriah's partner. Welsh & Sours produced post card photographs of ice covered trees and downed telephone poles and lines on February 22 and 24, 1922, after the terrible ice storm. Their postal photographs also included "Aroplane Views" of Cadillac. Besides her husband, Mildred was providing in 1920 for four female lodgers. His father emigrated from the Baden region of Germany, his mother emigrated from the Bavarian region of Austria, and George was born in Clinton County, Michigan on September 26, 1857, the only son of Bernhardt and Elizabeth (Durst) Welte. His sister Julia Anna was born about 1866. By 1870 his father had died and his mother was married to Conrad Schiable. George met Clara Rosina Sibley while working on the farm of her parents, John Frederick Sibley and Mary Ann (Hepfer) Sibley. George and Clara were married on February 14, 1882. Their son Victor was born at Lansing in December of 1882, and he became a virtuoso trumpeter. He occupied first chair in Arthur Pryor's band and then in John Phillip Sousa's band during a tour around the world. Their other children were born in Michigan: Adeline in February of 1887, Agusta in January of 1889, Carl in November of 1890, Rhea in June of 1896, and Burton in June of 1899. In 1891 George purchased the Owosso gallery of the Moore Brothers. A year later George was a "PHOTOGRAPHER and Portrait Artist. No Poor or Cheap Work done at any price. Photos made on short notice of Opera Troupes and Traveling Men. Portraits made in India Ink, Water Colors and Crayon. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Best Photographs, from a Locket to a Life Size Bust. Best India Ink and Water Color Portraits made. A full stock of Fancy frames always on hand..." In 1896 he was "... The Leading Photographer and Portrait Artist in the city. Makes a specialty of making the new Aristo Platino Photos, large Groups, out door views. Portraits enlarged from old Photos in India ink, crayon, pastel, or water color, also carries the largest stock of cheap and fancy picture frames. You can get anything in the Art Line at Welte's that can be had in any large city, and at prices that suit the times..." The purchase of the Corunna gallery of Arthur J. Sutton by Welte & McLean of Owosso was announced in June of 1898. They were "Photographers and Portrait Artists. Manufacturers and Dealers in PICTURE FRAMES of all Styles and Sizes. Scenic and Commercial Photography a Specialty." That McLean & Schiable had succeeded Welte & McLean in the same studio was reported in September of 1899, when George advertised: "WANTED - Position by a No. 1 first-class all-around man; can handle any part of the work, also expert with the air brush. Would prefer operating. Samples sent on application, also any amount of references. Would rent a furnished gallery or work on shares with privilege of buying. 41 years of age, 16 years experience. Married. Address George Welte, Owosso, Mich." The same magazine stated that George expected to leave soon for Telluride, Colorado, and might locate there. In November of 1899 he was reported to be working at Louisville. In June of 1900 George was lodging in Louisville while Clara and their children were back in Owosso. The opening of an Owosso gallery by George Welte and Fred Schiable was reported early in 1901. George and Fred were half brothers with the same mother but different fathers. George was Owosso's Chief of Police in the early 1900s. From 1915 through 1922 he offered Ludington "... Everything in Photography from the Cheapest that is Good to the Best that is Made." When he retired from photography, George established a small ice house business in Ludington and sold his ice in Lansing. He died at Ludington on June 30, 1932. Clara died at Lansing on February 15, 1941.

Charles was born to Prussian parents in the German province of West Prussia in June of 1869, second of the four children of Ernst and Caroline (Schiller) Wendt. He immigrated with his family in 1872 and they came in 1876 to Sanilac County, where he grew up on the family farm. Her father came from Saxony and Emilie Amelia Schroeder was born in the Prussian region of Germany to a Prussian mother in August of 1871, first of the six children of Ferdinand and Maria (Klauss) Schroeder. Her family immigrated in 1873, and Emilie married Charles on April 17, 1895. They both became naturalized citizens of the United States in 1899. Their children were born in Michigan: Louisa in December of 1895, and Arthur about 1902. “C. J. Wendt, Artistic Photographer, Forestville, Mich.” and “C. J. Wendt, Artistic Photographer, Minden City, Mich.” and “C. J. Wendt, Artistic Photographer, Minden City, Forestville.” were printed on cabinet mounts. His purchase of the photograph gallery at Deckerville was reported in March of 1897. By 1906 Charles was the proprietor of Clear View Farm in Sanilac County, which was served by the post office at Minden City, and he was enumerated as a Delaware Township farmer in 1910 and 1920. His parents emigrated from the German state of Prussia and Gustav was born in Michigan in December of 1857, first of the seven children of Charles and Charlotte Werner. His brother Charles was born in 1859 and died as a child. Gustav, his four sisters, and his much younger brother Frank were living with their parents in 1880. John H. Taylor had at least a year of professional photographic experience before his partnership with Gustav, and he remained a Michigan photographer until 1917. S. P. Mosher was Gustav's partner about 1885. Charlotte was born in Ireland in May of 1862, and she was brought to America in the early 1870s. She and Gustav married about 1884, and their daughter Charlotte was born in Wisconsin in September of 1885. Their other children were born in Marquette: Florence in August of 1891, Arnold in December of 1892, and Earl in May of 1897. The Werners occupied the corner of Third and Main Streets in Marquette from 1888 until 1927, residing there while Gustav operated the galleries in Marquette and Ishpeming. "... Life Size Portraits in Ink, Water Color, Pastel and Oil. Views made of Residences." was printed on some of his Marquette cabinet mounts. Between 1885 and 1890 he produced stereoscopic views of Marquette and of ships in Marquette Bay. Studio portraits on post card stock, including a couple showing girls with their dolls, were blind stamped: "G. A. WERNER, ISHPEMING, MICH." He was doing Kodak finishing in 1920. Gustav was a widower by 1930, when he was retired and living with the family of his son Arnold.

| Reinhard and his wife, a portrait painter, came to Chicago from Paris, France, leaving behind a little daughter. In the spring of 1856 they were not meeting with success in Chicago, and were invited by William Saltonstall to spend a season with his family on Mackinac Island. On the island, Monsieur Wernigk took some photographs and taught French to the Saltonstall children, while his wife painted pastel portraits of every family member. In the fall, the Wernigks boarded the steamer Niagara for their return trip. The boat burned on September 24, 1856, in Lake Michigan before reaching Chicago, and the Wernigks were lost. Perry was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio in February of 1859, fifth of the eight sons of Daniel Rex Werts and Sarah (Burk) Werts. He grew up on the family farms. Perry had an associate named Towns in Werts & Company, and they advertised life-size crayons, photographs, locket and watch dial photos. Nellie Allis Payne was born at Solon, Iowa, to parents from Ohio in December of 1861, last of the three children of Joseph L. and Mary (Lake) Payne and their only daughter. She married Perry about 1891. He had Ed C. Springer for a partner in 1897, and he sold photographer's supplies in 1899. He and Nellie were living on Clinton Street above the photographer Will H. James and his wife in 1900, when they were providing a home in Iowa City for Perry's widowed mother. Something happened to Nellie, and Perry married for the second time. Cora Eleanor Tharp was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in October of 1868, the younger child of George W. and Clarissa Tharp. Her brother Lewis was two years older. Cora's first marriage was to Perry in Saint Joseph County, Indiana, on January 23, 1906. They never had children, and she and Perry were together until her death at Cassopolis, Michigan, on November 24, 1935.

His parents emigrated from England in 1869 and Fred was born in Grand Rapids on March 31, 1874, ninth of the ten children of Thomas and Elizabeth A. (Green) West. He attended grade school and Central High School in Grand Rapids, and he became a medium sized man with blue eyes and brown hair. Ella May Burcaw was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio on July 29, 1878, first of the two known children of Alonzo and Anna Elizabeth (Bryan) Burcaw. She and Fred were married in Kent County on October 28, 1898. Their children were born in Grand Rapids: F. Warren West in 1904, and Marion Elizabeth West in 1907. Fred was the first to photograph finished furniture with artificial lighting on special films developed for the purpose by Eastman Kodak Company. Fred was general manager of the James Bayne Company in 1918. The West-Dempster Company succeeded M. P. Thiele & Company at 303 Scribner Avenue northwest with Fred C. West as president, his sister Mrs. Alice Thiele as vice president, and Thomas Dempster Junior as secretary and treasurer. Like the James Bayne Company, they offered commercial photography, photogravure, engraving and printing. Photostats were added in 1925, and George B. Kingston became vice president in 1927. William G. C. Hubert was employed as a photo finisher in 1927 and 1928, and as a photo printer in 1930. The West-Dempster Company had an office managed by U. S. Newsom at High Point, North Carolina, from 1929 until 1941, and employed Charles Robert Hook, Senior, as a photographer there from 1932 to 1935. Warren West married about 1928 and prior to 1941 moved to Santa Monica, California. His parents moved to Santa Monica after Fred retired in 1943. Fred suffered a long illness before his death at his Santa Monica home on October 16, 1955. He was survived by his wife and children, and burial was at Santa Monica.

George was born in Oneida County, New York, to a mother from Massachusetts on November 28, 1845, second of the four children of Philander Bailey West and Fidelia (Mason) West. He had an older brother Charles and younger twin sisters. Adeline (often Della) Showers was born in Wisconsin in January of 1849, and she married George in 1865 at Brandon, Wisconsin. Their son Charles was born in Wisconsin during the summer of 1866. Six of the 25 illustrations in The City of Escanaba were reproduced from photographs by G. M. West, including views of a lumber schooner, a Mackinaw boat and the water works, as well as logging, hunting and fishing scenes. Adeline died in 1904, and George married Louella V. Simmons at Chicago in 1906. She died in 1908, and George married Lillian H. Carlisle in Florida in 1909. George became the general manager and principle investor in the Gulf Coast Development Company, which in 1907 created the new town of Panama City, Florida. The town was chartered in 1909. Over one hundred years later, George still was known as "the Father of Panama City." George died in Florida in 1926.

James was born on August 21, 1844, at Michigan City, Indiana, last of the six children of the prosperous dry goods merchant James Westervelt and his wife Catherine (VanBlarcom) Westervelt. His father died in 1847 at Niles, Michigan, where James opened a photograph gallery when he was no more than fourteen. He was five feet five inches tall with a dark complexion, brown eyes and brown hair when he enlisted at La Porte as a private in Company B of the 138th Indiana Infantry on May 11, 1864. He was treated for tonsillitis early in June, for diarrhea ten days later, and was hospitalized for chronic diarrhea at Indianapolis at the end of August. He was mustered out of the army and honorably discharged at Indianapolis on September 31, 1864. James married Miss 17-year-old Emma Fairfield Conklin on December 6, 1865, and they never had children. The couple soon left Niles as James pursued photographic business in various towns of southwestern Michigan. Note that he parked his photographic car on the public square at Cassopolis. The only printing on many card and cabinet mounts was "J. D. Westervelt, Photographic Artist." or "J. D. WESTEVELT, PHOTO. ARTIST." or simply "WESTERVELT." indicating the mobility that James maintained until he settled at Muskegon in 1875. Some of his cabinet photographs during this period were outdoor scenes. Woodcuts in an 1878 national newspaper of the late Jonathan Walker and of the Walker monument at Muskegon were made from photographs by J. D. Westervelt. Charles Van Buskirk was associated with James in the Art Parlors of J. D. Westervelt & Company. They advertised as "Artistic Photographers. Pictures in all styles, satisfaction given...." James attended the inaugural convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Chicago in August of 1880. When the new post office in Muskegon was projected, James succeeded in having the entire second floor planned and fitted for his use. During August of 1881 he moved in and opened "... the most elaborate and elegant suite of photographic rooms in the State." Many of the steel engravings in the 1882 History of Muskegon County were facsimiles of Westervelt photographs. Westervelt & Powe specialized in Cabinet and Panel Pictures and introduced the Imperial Cabinet Portrait. That James had sold his Muskegon gallery was reported in the fall of 1883. He was also a principal of Cromwell, Westervelt & Hammerton and of The Great Eastern Photographic & Advertising Company in Los Angeles about 1890. In many years, from one to three of his employees were identified in Los Angeles directories. James died from mistral insufficiency and chronic intestinal nephritis on February 27, 1918, and the body was cremated.

George was born in New York State to parents from New Jersey about 1833, second of the four sons of Gilbert and Hannah Westfall. Sally was born in New York to a mother from Connecticut about 1836. They were married by 1860, and they never had children. They were living in 1870 with the family of George's older brother Benjamin. Mrs. Sally Westfall seems to have been a widow at the time of her death in Kent County on January 20, 1899.

His parents came from Connecticut and Ralph was born in Ohio on January 14, 1837, first of the five or more 1 5 children of Sherman and Hetty Westover. One or both of her parents may have come from Pennsylvania, and Mary 1
 Ann was born in Ohio in December of 1840. She married Ralph in 1858, and she gave birth to seven children over the 1 years, but by 1900 only one of them was alive. Mary Ann died at Goff in March of 1909. Martha was born in Indiana 1 5 to parents from Ohio in 1857 or early in 1858, and she remained single until she met Ralph. They were married by 1
 April of 1910. Ralph was again a widower by January of 1920, when he was boarding at Goff with a young couple. 1

His parents, Jacob and Mary (Miller) Westrick, emigrated from the Bavarian section of Germany and the Alsace region of France, and Jacob was born at Saint Clair, Michigan, in October of 1861. He was enumerated on June 3, 1880, with an older brother and seven younger siblings who were living with their parents on the family farm. Jacob was enumerated again on June 16, 1880, boarding with the Meyer family in Saint Clair, where he was attending school. Her parents emigrated from Scotland and Jennie was born in August of 1866 at Oakland, Ontario, the daughter of Eddy and Sarah J. Malcolm. She married Jacob at Oakland on July 7, 1886. Their daughters were born at Saint Clair: Lytha in April of 1895, and Ethel in April of 1897. Jacob's gallery was on the east side of North Front Street in 1887 and in 1893, when it was the first shop north of the Pine River. Sometimes he was identified as John C. or Joseph C. Westrick. Jacob was city clerk in 1893, and he was a confectioner and the proprietor of a boat house from 1892 until 1895. He was dealing in notions and bicycles in 1910, and in groceries in 1920. Jennie died at Saint Clair in 1926. Ora was born at Newark, Ohio, to natives of Ohio on May 24, 1867, third of the five children of William and Hester Ann (Cramer) Mc Millen. Her second marriage took place in 1892. Ora and Jacob were married by 1930. Jacob died in Pinellas County in 1934, and Ora lived on there until her death in 1945.

Lewis was born in Ohio in February of 1825, probably eldest of the six or more children of David and Sally Wetmore. Julia was born in Ohio about 1832, and she had been married to Lewis for less than a year in September of 1850. She probably gave birth to Frank in Ohio about 1851, and to Martin in Michigan in 1852. Then something happened to Julia. Jane was born in New York State about 1830. She married Lewis, and their son Milan was born in Michigan in January of 1860. Jane was working as a dress maker eight months later. She gave birth to William in 1863 or early in 1864, and to Minnie in April of 1867. Lewis was a widower by June of 1900, when he was living with the family of his daughter Minnie, now Mrs. William Hudson. Lewis died at Pierson, Michigan, on January 20, 1902. Abel was born in May of 1830 in Vermont, Sarah was born in Ohio to parents from Pennsylvania in April of 1842, they married in 1858 or early in 1859, and their children were born in Michigan: Herbert in February of 1864, and Grace about 1871. Abel produced stereo views of Main Street in Northville, including one showing a corner of the photograph gallery. He was on the first list of members of the National Photographic Association, published in July of 1869. The NPA monogram was printed on Charlotte card photograph mounts from his Star Gallery over J. J. Richardson's store on the east side of Cochrane Avenue and from his Star Gallery reached through the second door north of the Arcade Block on Main Street, where fine India ink and colored work was a specialty. He produced stereoscopic views of Charlotte streets, and advertised in 1872: "All Work Strictly First Class at WHALEN'S STAR PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY, ... Pictures of all the various Styles and Sizes known to the Art; put up in best Manner. Photos finished in Ink, Water or Oil Colors. Frames of Every Kind on hand. Children's Pictures a Specialty...." He produced tintypes in 3¼ by 3¼ inch paper sleeves from Charlotte. Abel was enumerated twice for the 1880 census, once with his family in Charlotte, and again boarding with the family of Adam B. and Elizabeth Sherk in Caledonia. In Saranac he was a special agent of the Michigan Portrait Company and offered "Photography in all its branches; Enlarging a Specialty." Some Whalen & Flower cabinet mounts carried a bird's-eye view of 65 uniformed lodge members in formation on a Charlotte business street. During the later 1880s and early 1890s Abel served many southern Michigan towns, and "Whalen's Portable Gallery." was all that was printed on some card photograph mounts. "Whalen's 'Accommodation' Photo. Car." was all that was printed on other card mounts and many cabinet mounts. "Whalen's Studio, 1891." or "Whalen's Photographic Studio." was printed below other cabinet photographs, including one of the depot at Jerome, multiple views of the same person and a trick photo of a man listening to himself playing a guitar. "... Fine Cabinets a Specialty. Landscape work of all descriptions. We furnish fine Portraits in India Ink and Crayon. Old Pictures Copied and Enlarged." was printed on the back of some of his 1891 mounts. A photographic magazine commented in the spring of 1891: "Mr. Whalen sends a number of beautiful specimens of his ordinary work, as well as a few additional samples of his 'freaks.' He modestly bespeaks a generous judgment, because he works in a van, but he doesn't need to; the work is of high class, and might put to blush much that is produced under the most favorable circumstances.... The portrait entitled 'Retrospective,' that of an old man, nearly one hundred and four, seated and leaning on a staff, is perfect in composition, beautifully lighted, and the expression is truly expressed in the title.... If Mr. Whalen works under difficulties, he knows how to overcome them." The following month a similar photo of the old man was reproduced as a frontispiece and Abel was quoted as to how it was made: "My little studio has a top light of ground glass, about 6 by 8 ½ feet, side light 6 by 6 all screened with white muslin. The negatives were made about 11 A.M., fair day, on Seed plates twenty six degrees, about two seconds exposure, with Darlot whole plate lens, small stop...." Abel advertised nationally in the spring of 1893: "WHALEN'S FREAK PHOTOGRAPHS. At the solicitation of several photographers and the editor of Mosaics, I offered to further practically instruct my co-workers in producing 'Freak Photographs' - varied positions of one person on the same plate. I will supply specimen photographs; photographs of several shapes of openings used for vignetting groups like 'The Gentlemen of the Jury'; a photograph of the vignetting-box to be attached to the camera (which will enable anyone to construct one at little cost); and a photograph of the hand-rest needed in making 'Shaking Hands' groups. Full printed instructions will accompany the photographs for arranging the camera, the vignettters, the hand-rest, and the subject. To compensate for time and material, I will expect $5.00 with each order....I will guarantee clearness and complete instructions. I have found 'Freak Photographs' to be an immense 'take' as an advertisement. There is no end to their variety, and they can be made available to all classes of people...." In "the Gentlemen of the Jury" the same person is shown as an attorney, as the clerk of the court, and as all twelve members of the jury. The magazine later commented that Abel had "... made some very pretty 'triples' and 'quadruples' by his 'freak' method.... Those of children are especially pretty, and ought to touch the hearts and open the purses of any people having a photographer with the good sense to push them." One and two page articles by Abel appeared regularly in The American Annual of Photography: "Making Gold - A Good Investment" in 1890; "Practical Silver Printing" in 1891; "Accurate Trimming" in 1892; and "If" in the annual for 1894. The first article told how to prepare chloride of gold for toning, and the last presented a number of brief suggestions about developing and mounting prints. Abel advertised nationally early in 1893: "FOR SALE - 24 volumes of Photo. Magazines, and 20 volumes of Photo. Books, all costing $123, all in good order for $60. Who wants them? Several old volumes of Bulletin, gratis, with the lot...." His son Herbert was associated with Abel in Detroit as Whalen & Company.

Herbert was the son of the Abel J. Whalen profiled above and his wife Sarah A. Whalen, and he was born in Michigan in February of 1864. His sister Grace was seven years younger. Teresa was born at Charlotte, Michigan, to parents from New York on December 1, 1861, second of the four children of Philo and Martha (Tuttle) Collins. She married Herbert in 1885 or early in 1886. Their son Arthur was born at Detroit in July of 1891. Teresa and Herbert seem to have divorced and then remarried about 1904. Their daughter Gertrude was born in Illinois in 1905 or early in 1906. Arthur Whalen was providing a home in Du Page County for his widowed mother and her mother in 1920. Teresa died in Du Page County on February 20, 1939, and burial was in Woodmere Cemetery at Detroit.

His parents emigrated from Ireland and James was born in Oxford County, Canada West (later Ontario), in March of 1861, second of the seven children of Joseph and Eliza Whealy. He grew up on the family farms. Minnie Eva Wilson was born to natives of Ontario at Norwich, Ontario, in October of 1865, third of the four children of Solomon and Sarah Jane (Webster) Wilson. She married James in Norwich on March 15, 1886, and they immigrated in 1888. Their daughter Edna was born in Michigan in May of 1890. James advertised in the booklet prepared for a fair at the end of September in 1896: "TINTYPES - Jas. Whealy will be on the grounds at Capac during the Fair prepared to furnish the people with tintypes the entire three days." He advertised locally during the summer of 1899: "Special Bargain in Photos. I will give away Free with each doz. Cabinets, one Photo Button. Prices Right on all our Work. J. Whealy, Capac, one door south of New Western." By 1900 James had become a naturalized citizen of the United States. Edna moved from Michigan to Ontario with her parents. Minnie died at Caledon East, Ontario, on February 10, 1920, survived by James and probably by her daughter Edna.

Minnie Eva Wilson was born to natives of Ontario at Norwich, Ontario, in October of 1865, third of the four children of Solomon and Sarah Jane (Webster) Wilson. Her brother Isadore was born about 1860, her brother Charles was born about 1864, and her sister Alice was born about 1876. Minnie married the James Whealy profiled above in Norwich on March 15, 1886, and they immigrated in 1888. Their daughter Edna was born in Michigan in May of 1890. Minnie undoubtedly played a larger part in her husband's photographic business than is indicated above. Edna moved from Michigan to Ontario with her parents. Minnie died at Caledon East, Ontario, on February 10, 1920, survived by her husband James and probably by her daughter Edna.

Lucina was born in New York State to natives of New York in March of 1849, and she married the William H. Wheat profiled below in the spring of 1869. She never gave birth to a child. With the help of two live-in servants, Lucina and William were providing for ten boarders and probably a number of transients in 1880. For some reason a JE or EJ monogram was printed between "Wheat" and "301 W. Main St., Ionia, Mich." on cabinet mounts. Some of these had "MERELL & WILSON, Successors to" printed above the original impression. Alvin Irvin was born in Tennessee to natives of Tennessee in October of 1878. He was adopted by Lucina and William, and in 1900 he was laboring for William on the farm. Something happened to Lucinda between 1910 and 1920, for William had a different wife in January of 1920.

William was born in the state of New York to a mother from Massachusetts in November of 1848. He married Lucina in the spring of 1869, and they never had children. one of the ten boarders in William's hotel in 1880 was James K. Davison, who also was enumerated as a hotel keeper. James may have been William's partner. The photographers W. H. & L. A. Wheat were succeeded at 301 West Main Street in Ionia by the photographic partnership of Merell & Wilson. Alvin Irvin was born in Tennessee to natives of Tennessee in October of 1878. He was adopted by Lucina and William, and in 1900 he was laboring for William on the farm. Something happened to Lucinda between 1910 and 1920, for in January of 1920 Mrs. Orinda C. Wheat was identified as William's wife. Orinda was born in New York State to natives of New York in 1847. She and William were providing a home in 1920 for her daughter Pearl and Pearl's Irish husband Patrick J. Walsh. William was a widower by 1930, when he was sharing his home with his widowed step-daughter Pearl D. Walsh.

His father came from New York, his mother emigrated from England, and George was born in Illinois in 1859, second of the five children of George M. and Elizabeth Wheaton. He was boarding in 1880 with the family of Louis R. Newman, who managed the Union View Company in Lansing and the company of the same name in Rochester, New York. George was single in 1880, and by 1885 he had a wife named Naoma who was born in Ohio about 1862. This marriage did not last. Her father came from Ohio, and Glendora was born in Indiana to a mother from New York in 1880 or early in 1881. She married George about 1898, and they had no children twelve years later. George was enumerated twice on the same day for the census in 1910, so the Los Angeles enumerator must have received his information from Glendora. George was recorded as divorced in 1920, when he was lodging with a widow; and as a widower in 1930, when he was boarding with a couple.

The only E. Wheeler residing in Clinton County in this era was Emma Wheeler. Emma was born in Michigan to parents from New York in October of 1847. Harry Wheeler was born in Ohio about 1831, and his second marriage was to Emma about 1867. Emma gave birth to Joseph Wheeler in February of 1868, and to Dora Wheeler in May of 1870. They were living in August of 1870 in Bengal Township of Clinton County, about ten miles south of Maple Rapids. There Harry was working in a saw mill, and Emma was caring for his 14-year-old son as well as her own children. Emma was a widow by 1880, when she and her children were living in Fowler, seven miles southeast of Maple Rapids. Emma was living at Detroit in 1900 with the family of her daughter, now Mrs. Ray A. Frank was born at Dowagiac on January 1, 1878, last of the three children of Roscoe B. and Eva (McCaise) Wheeler, and he became a tall stout man. Cora Geraldine Trout was born in 1879 at Cleveland, Ohio, the daughter of Frank B. and Clara (Thompson) Trout. She married Frank at Lakewood, Ohio, on November 20, 1902, and their daughter Virginia was born in Pennsylvania in June of 1908. Frank was enumerated as a widower in April of 1930, when he still was providing a home for his daughter Virginia. However, his wife Cora was back living with him by April of 1940. Frank prospered financially, for in 1940 he was employing a live-in couple that functioned as a butler and a cook. Frank died in Los Angeles on August 26, 1941.

His only brother was born in 1855 and died in February of 1856. Old pictures could be enlarged and fine finished in ink at the Photograph and Gem Gallery of L. F. Wheeler in 1874. Lavern took many stereoscopic views of Tecumseh's business district, residences and public buildings, the River Raisin, Devils Lake and Sand Lake, and several views "... of the wreck of the Grand Stand, on the County Fairgrounds, Adrian, Lenawee County, Mich. Oct. 2nd, 1879." He also made stereo views at Camp Crosswell of the First Regiment of Michigan State Troops. "Lavern F. Wheeler, Ionia & Tecumseh, Mich." was printed on the mounts of a series of stereoscopic views of Ionia. "Wheeler's Canadian Views. L. F. WHEELER, ARTIST, TECUMSEH, MICH." was printed on the back of some stereo mounts. "Don't steal this view from Lavern F. Wheeler" was printed on the mount of a portrait stereograph of a young lady, and the view was inscribed: "Stolen from L. F. Wheeler." Lavern was single in 1880, when he was living with his widowed mother. Some of Lavern's stereo views were stamped "From the SUNBEAM STUDIO, Tecumseh, Mich." which was how Lester F. Abrams later designated his gallery about 1900. Mary M. Mitchell was born in Steuben County, New York, to natives of New York on August 10, 1856, last of the three children of Henry L. and Ellen H. (Hazen) Mitchell. She married Haviland S. Wolverton at Ionia on December 23, 1878, and she gave birth to Henry M. Wolverton in Montcalm County on May 1, 1879. Something happened to Haviland, and when Mary married Lavern at Ionia on May 26, 1887, she brought along Henry. Mary gave birth in Chicago to Lavern F. Wheeler in July of 1888, to Steven (later Percival) M. Wheeler in April of 1893, and to Zora E. Wheeler in November of 1899. Beneath the image on a 5½ by 8½ inch commercial mount was written: "825 Walnut St., Chicago, Ill. Where LaVern F. Wheeler, Jr., was born; July 26th, 1888." Lavern and Mary were living with their elder son at Paw Paw in 1910 and at Watts in 1920. Mary was a widow by 1930, when she was living with the family of her daughter Zora, now Mrs. Louis A. Ritter. James was born in Illinois to natives of Illinois on November 17, 1885, third of the eight children of Lafayette and Lora Wheeling. He became a slender man with brown eyes and brown hair. Her father emigrated from Quebec, her mother emigrated from Ireland, and Alice R. Contis was born in Minnesota on September 12, 1887, first of the five or more children of Alfred J. and Belle C. Contis. Alice married James about 1908, and like him, she was working for The Brunswick Company as a photographer in 1909. Their son James R. Wheeling was born in Minnesota on October 18, 1910, and their son Joseph R. Wheeling was born in Michigan on March 20, 1913. After his partnership with James, Stanley J. Breugh was a photographer in 1915 and 1916 at London, Ontario. Alice and James were together in 1923, but in 1925 and 1928 they were living a couple of blocks apart in Twin Falls. Alice was listed as a widow and a Twin Falls grocer in 1930, when James was lodging with a Boise couple. Alice died in September of 1971 at Detroit, Michigan.

His parents came from Massachusetts and Everett was born in Ohio about 1836, the son of Jonathan and Sarah C. Wheelock. He became a five foot seven inch man with a dark complexion. He was identified as Everitt J. Wheelock in 1860, when he may have been working for the daguerreotypist Perley M. Jeffers. Everett enlisted at Baltimore, Maryland, on October 1, 1861, as a musician in the Sixth Michigan Infantry. He was discharged at New Orleans, Louisiana, on September 19, 1862, when most regimental bands were mustered out of the Union Army. Her father emigrated from Ireland, and Elizabeth was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in August of 1847. She married Everett in 1868, and their sons were born in Allegan County: George in June of 1869, and William in 1874. Everett was a patient in the United States Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, from October 3, 1894, to March 28, 1895; from July 6, 1905, to August 29, 1905; and from June 23, 1908, to July 24, 1908. He left the Home each time at his own request. Everett probably spent the intervening periods in the Michigan Soldiers' Home, for he was not enumerated at Allegan with his wife and son in 1900, and he died at Grand Rapids on March 1, 1911. Elizabeth was a toilet article saleslady in 1900 and an agent for novelties in 1910. Her son George never married, and he was sharing her Allegan home in 1900, 1910 and 1920. Her widowed son Will was back in April of 1930 living with Elizabeth, who died at Allegan on July 6, 1930.

His father emigrated from Nova Scotia, his mother emigrated from Ireland, and William was born in August of 1841 at Adrian, Michigan, second of the seven children of William and Margaret (Hudkins) Whidden. Something happened to his mother, and by 1860 his father was married to an Irish lady named Ann. William was 5 feet 6 inches tall with a light complexion, light hair and blue eyes when he enlisted from Ionia County at Grand Rapids as a bugler in Company D of the Third Michigan Cavalry on October 19, 1861. Late in November of 1861 the Third left Grand Rapids for Missouri where they joined General Pope's operations against Island Number Ten. They were under fire for several days at New Madrid, Missouri, where the water was very bad and they had much sickness and many deaths. They stayed at New Madrid through March, and then took part in the siege of Corinth, Mississippi, until the end of May, 1862. The Third fought September 19 in the battle at Iuka, Mississippi, and at Corinth on October 3 and 4, 1862, they pursued retreating rebels for 75 miles and took many prisoners. During a charge on November 18 near Ripley, Mississippi, William was thrown from his horse. His left ankle was broken, his left hip was fractured, his left kidney was injured, and until May of 1863 he was in the regimental hospital at Jackson, Tennessee. After several months in a hospital at Memphis, Tennessee, he was transferred to the Benton Barracks hospital at St. Louis, Missouri. In July of 1864 he was moved to a hospital at Detroit, Michigan, from which he was discharged on October 14, 1864, at the expiration of his three year term of service. He married about 1866 and his first wife died on November 30, 1872. Miss Jessie H. Merrill was born in Maine in September of 1844 and came from Centralia, Illinois, to marry William at Lake Harbor, Michigan, on November 7, 1873. His first application for an invalid pension was filed in December of 1879. By 1888 he was unable to work, required a cane to get around and needed the strongest glasses made. He began to receive a pension in the autumn of 1890. One year later a doctor found him to have diseased eyes and to be lame, his left leg with atrophied muscles and shortened by an inch, and recommended an increase in his pension. William died of consumption at Muskegon on December 17, 1897, and burial was in Muskegon's Oakwood Cemetery. All of William's eight children were living at the time of his death, but only six were alive in 1900. They all were born in Michigan: Juna in October of 1874, Robert in March of 1884, John in April of 1885, Alice in September of 1886, Hester (later Grace) in March of 1889, and Alger in March of 1892. Jessie received a widow's pension and an allowance for the children who were under 16 years of age until her death from tuberculosis at North Muskegon on February 7, 1903.

His father came from the state of New York and David was born in Orleans Township on May 24, 1861, second of the five children of Horace and Harriet E. (Easton) Whipple. Mercy (later Myrtie) Borden was born in Easton Township of Ionia County, Michigan, to parents from New York on September 28, 1864, last of the seven or more children of Daniel and Mercy Borden. She was boarding with the Whipple family in 1880, when she was an apprentice to David's mother as a dress maker. She married David in 1883 or early in 1884, and their sons were born in Michigan: Avolin on May 24, 1885, and Glen at Lansing on January 11, 1892. "Whipple Photo" or "Whipple" or "Photo by D. E. Whipple, Kalkaska, M." was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of logging operations, logging camps, logging trains and steam skidders, saw mill fires in 1910 and 1911, ice harvesting and delivery, road building and snow rolling, house building, business streets, depots, a Farmers Parade in 1910, a Gleaners picnic, Fourth of July in 1912, trout streams, lake shores and people. The photos were taken near Grayling and at Portage Lake in Crawford County; at Fife Lake in Grand Traverse County; at Ivan, Kalkaska, Leetsville, Manistee Lake, Sigma, South Boardman, Spencer and Stearns in Kalkaska County; at Houghton Lake in Roscommon County, and on the Manistee River in Wexford County. Many were postmarked between 1909 and 1912. Something happened to Myrtie, and David married again about 1916. His bride was Susanah (later Suzanna), who had a German father and was born in Pennsylvania in 1868. Suzanna and David were together in 1930, but David was enumerated as a widower in 1940.

His parents emigrated from England and Charles was born in Michigan on July 15, 1878, fourth of the eight children of Edwin and Elizabeth White. He had three older brothers, one younger brother, and then three younger sisters. Charles became a slender man with grey eyes and brown hair. Caroline Mabel Morgan was born in Essex County, Ontario, on October 11, 1881, the elder child of William E. and Sarah Jane (Hurst) Morgan. Her brother William was born in November of 1883. Her mother died in 1890, and her father married Catherine Van Riper in September of 1893. The family moved to Detroit in 1894. Caroline married Charles about 1905, and their children were born in Michigan: Julia in 1906, Eloise (later Caroline) in November of 1918, and Charles in November of 1920. Some photograph mounts were blind stamped "SMITH, 305 Genesee Ave., Saginaw." and then over-stamped "White & Wilson, Saginaw, Mich." Charles employed Edwin Blackwell as an assistant photographer in 1909. The annual convention of the Professional Photographers Society of Michigan spent March 19, 1912, with skylight and darkroom demonstrations at the Charles E. White Studio. That evening C. A. Beckman and Charles were hosts for a banquet and smoker at the Elks Temple in Saginaw, where Charles spoke on "Proofs." The following day Charles was elected to the Advisory Board of the Society. From 1914 until 1924, Charles offered "Everything in Photography." His second studio in 1924 was in the White's Cornelia Street home. The junior Charles was studying photography with his father in 1940. The senior Charles still was occupying the studio in 1952 which was erected by the Goodridge Brothers seventy years earlier, and was described as "one of the real veterans of the Saginaw commercial photography field."

Charles was born to parents from Tennessee at Ruby, Texas, on August 23, 1893, second of the three sons of Abe and Martha Jane (Mayfield) White. His brother Fletcher was born in 1889, and his brother Joseph was born in 1905. Charles was working in a photograph gallery from the time he was sixteen years old, and he became a tall slender man with grayish eyes and black hair. Her parents emigrated from England and Ethel E. Parr was born in Indiana in August of 1891, last of the six children of Joseph and Margaret Jane (Gregory) Parr. Her two brothers and three sisters were born between 1882 and 1890. She married Charles about 1912, and they never had children. Ethel was her husband's assistant photographer in Galveston, and she undoubtedly continued to play an important part in his photographic business. The C. F. White Studios remained in the same location during 1920 while the address changed along with most others in Detroit. Charles was president of the Tiffany Photographic Studios and of Tiffany Studios Incorporated, with Joseph Parr as vice president until 1938, and Ethel E. White as secretary-treasurer. In 1934 they claimed that "Tiffany's Distinguished Photographs are of the Highest Achievement." Charles died in Detroit on June 14, 1962. Ethel died at Santa Monica, California, on December 20, 1962.

Charles was born in the state of New York in the summer of 1819. Mary Ann was born in Vermont about 1820, and she married Charles about 1843 in Oakland County, Michigan. Their son Orrin was born at Pontiac about 1845. Their other sons also were born in Michigan: Thompson about 1847, Albert about 1849, and Lyman about 1851. Charles received the premium for the best case of daguerreotypes exhibited at the Oakland County Fairs in the fall of 1853, 1854 and 1855. The premium usually was two dollars. He advertised in 1856: "PICTURES of CHILDREN taken at WHITE'S GALLERY in from 2 to 5 seconds sitting on bright days. Bring the LITTLE ONES... DAGUERREOTYPES ... AMBROTYPES - At WHITE'S GALLERY may be found beautiful specimens of this art. Call and see." Mary Ann was no longer with the family in 1860. His parents, Heman F. and Jane (Buskirk) White, were natives of Ohio and pioneer settlers of Allegan County, Michigan, where Darwin was born in February of 1872. Agnes L. Perkins was born in Michigan in March of 1874, and she married Darr in 1898. They had no children. Darwin was a prolific producer of post card photographs, primarily between 1907 and 1911 according to the post marks. "THE WHITE POST CARD CO., ANN ARBOR, MICH." was usually printed on the post card backs of some studio portraits and many views. Some of the photographs were nicely tinted, and many had a distinctive black stripe across the bottom containing the title and number of the view. Later cards substituted a light stripe across the bottom with similar information. Ann Arbor views included business streets, schools, churches, the depot, the river and several of Island Park. University of Michigan scenes included the diagonal, Newberry Hall, several fraternity houses, Ferry Field and the 1907 football team from a Rentschler negative. Chelsea views included the main street, factories, churches and the old folks home. Ypsilanti views included the high school, several buildings of the State Normal College, Cleary Business College, the depot, the river and a few parks. There were White postal photographs of Detroit's Belle Isle and Jackson's main street, and of many different scenes at Hague Park, just south of Jackson. He advertised in 1920: "FINE PHOTOGRAPHS, PORTRAITS and FRAMES" and in 1921: "FINE PHOTOGRAPHS, COLORED PORTRAITS, HAND CARVED FRAMES. 'Why pay the up-town price?'" His wife probably participated in the photographic business regularly, but certainly as a photo printer in 1920 and as a photographer in 1930.

His parents came from Connecticut and George was born in Pennsylvania in August of 1828, eldest of the nine children of the carpenter Daniel White and his wife Nancy. Olive was born in 1834 at Ashley in Delaware County, Ohio, fourth of the six children and only daughter of Calvin and Rachel (Green) Cowles. She married George about 1858, probably at Burr Oak, where she gave birth to Alice Estella White in October of 1859, and to Edward (usually Eddie) White about 1865. George was awarded the premium for the best ambrotype exhibited at the 1874 Ionia County Fair. Something happened to Olive, and by 1880 George had a 39-year-old wife named Mary, who was born in Ohio to parents from New York. He also had a stepson Charles the same age as his daughter, and a stepdaughter Ellie the same age as his son. In June of 1880 Estella was a teacher, Eddie was a grocery clerk, Charles was a printer, and Ellie was apprenticed to a milliner. Sebastian S. Peckinpough and George applied for a patent on September 25, 1883, and were granted Patent No. 296,443 on April 8, 1884, covering a Photographic Plate Holder and Case. Peckinpough's rights under this patent were assigned to George, whose gallery was on the southwest corner of Michigan Avenue and Pine Street in 1884. George was a widower by 1900, when he was boarding with a young Jackson couple.

James was born in Genesee County, New York, on May 24, 1837. He was a five foot six inch farmer with a light complexion, blue eyes and light hair when he enlisted at Jamestown, New York, as a private in Company B of the Ninth New York Cavalry on September 25, 1862. He was discharged on a Surgeon's Certificate of Disability at Harwood Hospital in Washington, D. C., on January 8, 1863. His first wife had died at Peoria, Illinois, and he married Miss Mary T. Wheeler at Napoli near Randolph, New York, on August 27, 1863. Their daughters were born at Randolph: Clara in 1864 or early in 1865, and Nellie two years later. James "... opened a gallery at Randolph, and put in the first skylight ever used in that section of the State. He came to Port Huron in 1869 and established his present business...." Gray & White produced cartes de visite as well as stereoscopic and other views. James exhibited specimens of the Rembrandt style of photograph showing marked contrasts of light and shade in the fall of 1870, probably at the St. Clair County Fair. An 1881 advertisement was for "J. M. WHITE, Artistic PHOTOGRAPHER.... Extra Retouching a Specialty. A new and Finely Equipped Gallery. A Splendid Stock of Frames...." During the early 1880s, James took many stereo views of Port Huron and vicinity, particularly of the industry and shipping along the St. Clair River in warm weather and of the ice choked river in winter. He also took a series of stereo views along the Au Sable River, one hundred miles to the north, apparently while on a hunting and fishing trip with friends. His 1888 advertisement proclaimed: "... All Pictures Taken by the Instantaneous Process. Pictures Copied and Enlarged to any Size and Finished in India Ink, Water Colors, Oil or Crayon. Also an Elegant Line of Picture Frames always in Stock." The 1890 ad for J. M. White & Company, Photographic Establishment and Art Store, used most of the same words. The year was printed on most of the cabinet mounts they used from 1891 through 1896. Miss Jennie Howe boarded with the Whites in 1880, when she was enumerated as a photographer, and she was James' partner in J. M. White & Company in 1893 and 1895. They employed Miss Gussie Wells as a retoucher in 1893. When the Michigan Photographers' Association was organized on January 15, 1895, James was elected treasurer of the association. During the 1896 convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Celeron, New York, White & Company were awarded a bronze medal for their entry in Class D. James was the only principal of the J. M. White & Company in 1897, when he advertised: "... Life Size Portraits, Frames, Mouldings and Easels...." A book reproducing the work of prominent photographers said of James about 1897: "Better known by the boys as 'Uncle Jim,' he works in his beautiful studio for a while, then takes his dogs and guns and off to his ranch in the sunny south. Such is the reward of good, honest work." He was reported to have leased his gallery for a term of years, with his successor taking charge on August 1, 1898. Mrs. Jennie H. McGruer was his associate from 1906 until 1909, and was rooming with the Whites in 1910. James was receiving a pension of $15 per month when he died on June 2, 1911. He left no young children, and Mary applied for a Widow's Pension based upon his military service. Mrs. N. T. Lucia was identified as manager of J. M. White & Company at 1102 Military Street in 1912 and 1913.

His father came from the state of New York and Jeffrey, often spelled Jeffery, was born to a Canadian mother at Saginaw, Michigan, on November 20, 1883, the elder son of Charles Adams White and Margaret L. White. His brother Thomas, who is profiled below, was born in New York State in February of 1886. His parents divorced, and his father married Isabelle Munn about 1896. Jeffrey and Thomas lived with their mother through 1910. Jeffrey took his first picture about 1897 with a candid camera which resembled a salmon can. He grew into a medium sized man with blue eyes and light hair. Jeffrey and his brother Thomas were partners in White & White until 1915, when Jeffrey became sole proprietor of the studio in the Detroit Saturday Night Building on Fort Street. He named as his nearest relative in 1918 his mother, who had remarried and was now Mrs. Margaret O'Neill, and was living about fifteen blocks away in Detroit. The Jeffrey White Studio was in the Marquette Building on Congress Street, and in the Insurance Exchange Building on Elizabeth Street. Jeffrey was proprietor or president of the business throughout its existence. William J. Wuerth became manager of the studio in 1917, and was also secretary-treasurer of the firm after 1918. Jeffrey's father Charles A. White was vice president of the company from 1919 through 1927, though after 1921 he lived in Boston, Massachusetts. Her parents emigrated from England and Cora B. Hopkins was born in Missouri in 1884 or 1885. She was working as a stenographer in a Detroit real estate office in January of 1920, and she married Jeffrey later in the year. Cora gave birth to Audrey E. White in 1922 or early in 1923. Jeffrey became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921. Long before color film was available, he began taking color pictures with his one-shot color camera which had three plate holders, mirrors and basic filters so as to simultaneously expose three regular panchromatic glass plate negatives. Enlargements from these three negatives were transferred to film and then bathed in red, blue and yellow dyes. The dye transfer pictures gave a perfect rendition in color without loss of detail. Jeffrey produced the first photographic automobile advertisement in color, of a Pierce Arrow parked in front of a Buffalo mansion. His enlargements in color were used in the General Motors exhibit during the Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago in 1933. His color portrait of Henry Ford was commissioned by a national magazine. Audrey was living with her parents in 1940. Jeffrey still was working in Detroit in 1962, only two years before his death on February 24, 1964, when he was 80 years old.

His father came from Ohio and Jesse was born in Camden Township to a mother from New York on May 21, 1863, last of the four children of Volney and Martha Jane (Braman) White. His three sisters were born between 1849 and 1854. Her parents emigrated from the Prussian region of Germany and Christine Lena Stoll was born in June of 1869 at Adrian, Michigan, eighth of the ten children of John Daniel Stoll and Henriette Maria (Scheidt) Stoll. Lena married Jesse at Hillsdale, Michigan, on August 3, 1895. Their sons were born in Michigan: Volney in February of 1896, and Russell in March of 1899. Lena was working in a clothing store as a tailoress in 1910. Jesse died in Detroit on April 13, 1917. As keeper of a lodging house, Lena was providing in 1920 for both of her sons and three male boarders, all five of whom were gainfully employed.

Thomas was born in Ohio to German parents early in 1857. He was enumerated as divorced in 1910 and as single in 1920. Probably due to the anti-German sentiment built up during World War I, in 1920 he said that his parents were from England and Pennsylvania. He told the census enumerator in 1910 that he had been out of work for 26 of the previous 52 weeks. Some of his work at this time may have been for Coloma photographer Mrs. Ella M. Hamilton.

Wallace was born to parents from New York in Otsego Township on April 19, 1842, third of the four children of Nathan N. and Lucy (Eaton) White. He was called Stowe W. White as a child. Wallace had a sister and a brother born in the state of New York between 1831 and 1834, and a brother born in Michigan about 1844. Her father came from New York, and Julia was born in Michigan to a mother from Pennsylvania in November of 1846. She married Wallace about 1865, and they never had children. Wallace made tintypes as well as cartes de visite at Otsego. Joseph Lindsey, who is profiled above, was Wallace's initial partner in Kalamazoo. Wallace and Lucy were sharing their home with Joseph and his wife in 1870. White & Lindsey were identified as photographic stock dealers as well as photographers in 1871. "PERRY'S GALLERY, Kalamazoo, Mich., W. S. White, Operator." was printed on some card photograph mounts. Wallace advertised locally in the summer of 1873: "THE OLD MADE NEW. W. S. White, having purchased the old Baldwin PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY, lately occupied by Mr. Perry, and thoroughly refitted the same, is prepared to do all kinds of work in his line in the very best style of the art..." His work included portraits in ink, water colors and oil. In addition to studio portraits, some of his card photographs were of dogs and of a pig, and one of his cabinets was of a log residence. His rooms at 1 South Main Street were described in 1878 as the handsomest and best adapted to their purpose of any in the state, specially arranged and provided with all the usual requisites for a first-class photographic studio. In the spring of 1880 a photographic journal published a full-page letter from Wallace describing his business philosophy, methods and results. He advertised in 1883: "... Finest Work and Best Gallery in the City. I keep a large assortment of Stereoscopic Views of Northern Michigan, Rome City (or Island Park), Ind., and of Kalamazoo. Commercial Work a Specialty. Also Dealer in Microscopes and Microscope Accessories." He took stereo views of Bay View, Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Mackinac Island, Petoskey, Sault Ste. Marie and Wequetonsing in northern Michigan, thirteen of Rochester, New York, scenes at Detroit, Gull Lake, Holland, Portage and Schoolcraft, a series along the Kalamazoo River, and views of furniture manufactured at Grand Rapids. He manufactured and sold lantern slides made through a microscope and from engravings of Civil War battles. He was identified as the manager of White's Military Band as early as 1893. Wallace died at Kalamazoo on April 28, 1921.

William was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in 1867, the son of William and Adelaide White. His half-brother Otis was born in Indiana in 1862, and his sister Carrie was born in Michigan about 1872. William was disabled by 'lyonovitis' in 1880. Maude was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan early in 1886, and she married William about 1902. They never had children. Maude was working in her husband's studio as a saleswoman in 1910, when William had a thirteen-year-old apprentice named Otto Seyfert.

His father came from Missouri, his mother emigrated from France, and William was born in Wisconsin or Illinois or Missouri about 1831, the only son of Thomas S. and Bridgett (Devo) Whitesides. His sister Cornelia was born in 1821. Mary Watwangan was an Indian born in Wisconsin in 1836, who married William in Missouri in 1850. Their son John was born in Wisconsin in 1853, and their other children were born in Michigan: Benjamin about 1858, Mary in 1860, Rosa about 1865, Ellen about 1867, William in February of 1872, George in September of 1873, and Daisy about 1876. Benjamin died as a child. Samuel Bailey & Whitesides published stereo views of "The Picturesque of Lake Superior" and dealt in frames and stereoscopes. C. B. Brubaker & Whitesides were prolific publishers of the same series of "Gems of Lake Superior Scenery" from negatives by B. F. Childs which were published by C. B. Brubaker from Houghton and from Marquette, and by Child's Art Gallery from Marquette and much later from Ishpeming. During the 1870s, William published stereo views in his own name from Marquette and from Ashland, Wisconsin, and stereographs of Michigan scenes from Duluth, Minnesota. In Ironwood, he employed Miss Gertie Richards as an artist and his son George as a photo printer in 1892, and his son William as a photographer in 1893. "Whitesides, PHOTOGRAPHER, IRONWOOD & BESSEMER, MICHIGAN." was printed below the image on some cabinet mounts. Most imprints and directory listings were for William Whitesides, but a Houghton listing and a Duluth imprint were for William W. Whitesides, and some Ironwood listings were for William D. Whitesides. William died at Ironwood on April 30, 1895, and his wife Mary lived until 1910. Their youngest daughter Daisy was registered in June of 1898 by the La Pointe Agency in Wisconsin as a member of the Bad River tribe of Chippewa Indians.

His father came from New York and Henry was born in Michigan to a Canadian mother in October of 1863, first of the three children of John H. and Jeanette Whitmore. Her father also came from New York, Alice was born in Michigan to an English mother early in 1885, and she married Henry about 1902. Their children were born in Michigan: Clare in September of 1904, Verne in January of 1907, and Helen in July of 1909. "W & P" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of Concord, Munith, Pinckney, Springport and Stockbridge. Some of the cards were mailed in 1909, 1910 and 1911. Henry's partner in 1909, Harry J. Pulling, continued a photographic career for more than a decade. Henry advertised in 1914 and 1915: "Real Estate, Loans and Insurance, Farms a Specialty, Deeds and Mortgages Drawn, Notary Public with Seal....." He had his own business through 1921, but by 1828 he was selling for a firm that offered construction as well as real estate and insurance. Alice worked in a corset factory from 1920 until 1947. She was providing a home in Jackson for Verne and Helen in 1930, when Henry was not to be found. Alice was identified in 1935 as Henry's widow, and she still was living in Jackson in 1960.

Lewis was born in Ohio to parents from New York in May of 1863, last of the four children of William Y. and Hellen W. Whitnall. His father was a whip and glove manufacturer. Flora was born in Michigan to Daniel S. and Eliza A. (Geanang) Avery on January 9, 1864, and she married Lewis in 1885 or 1886. They had no children. William St. John was associated with Lewis in the Excelsior Art Company. Flora's brother, the photographer Bert H. Avery, was living with the Whitnalls in 1920. Flora still was living in Long Beach in 1940, when she was enumerated as the widow of Lewis B. Whitnall. She died in Los Angeles County on February 16, 1948.

| Ambrose was born in New York State to a mother from Vermont on March 2, 1850, eldest of the seven children of Willard and Eliza Ann (Bullard) Whitney. Flora A. Menter was born in Michigan in August of 1856, and she married Ambrose in December of 1874. They had two sons and three daughters born in Michigan between 1875 and October of 1891. Ambrose made a specialty of children's photographs about 1885. He was enumerated as a carpenter in 1900, while Flora was enumerated as the photographer, so she is profiled below. They were living with their elder son Lloyd in 1910, along with two of their daughters. The same two daughters were living with Ambrose and Flora in 1920, and now one of them had a daughter of her own. Ambrose died in Chicago on July 25, 1924, and burial was back in Hartford on the next day. |           | 1 22 12 1t 1111 33 |

| His father came from New York and he was born Cortez J. Whitney in Michigan on January 7, 1876, second of the three children of David H. and Binsa (Brush) Whitney. He also had two older Whitney half-brothers. Corty became a medium sized man with blue eyes and hair that later turned grey. The projected opening of the Lake Odessa gallery by Whitney & Barnes was reported in the spring of 1898. George a. Shampang was a Lake Odessa photographer before his partnership with Corty, and for a decade after it. He probably was replaced in the partnership by his neighbor Benjamin Garlinger. Corty's sale of his interest in Whitney & Garlinger to Rollin H. Stocum and his return to Nashville to open a gallery was reported early in 1899. Grace was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in April of 1881, first of the six children of David M. and Carrie Isabella (House) Wells. she married Corty in 1897 or early in 1898, and their son Vivian was born in Michigan in May of 1900. Corty and Grace divorced about 1915, and Corty was left raising their son on his own. Her father came from New York State and Anna Genevieve Wheelock was born in Saint Louis, Missouri, to an Irish mother on November 23, 1884, first of the four children of Elias Mann Wheelock and Adelia M. (Fleming) Wheelock. Anna married Carl C. Sage in June of 1907, and she gave birth in Michigan to Dorothy in 1909, to Harold in 1910, and to Kenneth in March of 1912. In an unusual switch, Grace (Wells) Whitney was married to Carl C. Sage and Anna (Wheelock) Sage was married to Corty J. Whitney by 1918. Anna brought along her three children and Vivian still was at home, so Corty had a full household in 1920. They were together in 1930, when Anna was enumerated as a trained nurse, and her two sons still were at home. Corty was not to be found in 1940, when Anna was a nurse in a convalescent home and was providing a home in Albion for her son Kenneth and his wife. Corty died at Marshall, Michigan, on May 1, 1949, and Anna died at Battle Creek on November 27, 1961. After Carl C. Sage died on April 9, 1949, Grace married David John Eckinger and lived until January 12, 1961. |           | 1 41 54 22m 11 22 11 511 555 11 441111 555 |

Edwin was born in Michigan to natives of New York on March 17, 1860, eldest of the three children of Edwin Henderson Whitney and Jennie M. (Downs) Whitney. His sister Jennie was born in January of 1864, and his brother Louis was born in April of 1872. The gallery of Cassey & Whitney was at 101 South Washington Avenue. Henry G. Cassey was a Lansing photographer for four years prior to his partnership with Edwin, and then for eight years following the partnership. Kate was born in the state of New York to natives of New York in May of 1865, the daughter of William Irving Latimer and Olivia Spencer (Cobb) Latimer. She married Edwin on October 19, 1887, and their children were born in Oregon: Edwin Latimer Whitney in April of 1890, and Helen L. Whitney in June of 1892. Helen was living with her parents in 1920, when they were providing a home for Kate's widowed father. Helen still was with them in 1930. Edwin died on February 22, 1940, and in April his widow Kate was living alone in the same house they had occupied ten years earlier.

Her father came from Connecticut, her mother came from New York, and Flora was born in Michigan in August of 1856, fifth of the seven children of Homer and Ann (Barnes) Menter. She had four older brothers, one younger brother that died as child, and a younger sister. Flora married Ambrose Z. Whitney (who is profiled above) in Van Buren County, Michigan, on December 5, 1874, and their son Lloyd was born in Michigan a year later. Flora gave birth in Michigan to their son Leo in May of 1878, and to their daughters Vie in June of 1880, Iva in May of 1885, and Ora (later Maria) in October of 1891. Flora undoubtedly took a more significant part in her husband's photographic business than is indicated above. She and Ambrose were living with their son Lloyd in 1910, along with their daughters Iva and Maria. The same two daughters were living in 1920 with Ambrose and Flora, but the younger one had become Mrs. Maria Young and brought along her five-year-old daughter Anna. Harrison Rogers married Iva about 1924, and soon found that he had added to his home not only a wife, but a mother-in-law, an aunt, a sister-in-law, and a niece. Flora died in Chicago on March 12, 1944.

She was identified as Fern a little more often than she was identified as Mabel. She was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in May of 1882, fourth of the six children of Lemuel Parkhurst Whitney and Louisa Jane (Reed) Whitney. Her sister Pearl is profiled below. Fern was boarding in 1900 with a young Grand Rapids couple. Charles William Brown was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in March of 1880, second of the five children of William F. and Anna S. Brown. He married Fern about 1909, and their children were born in Kent County: Clayton in 1910, Shirley in 1911, Robert in July of 1913, and Elizabeth (later Betty Lou) in 1924 or early in 1925. Charles was an interurban motorman in 1910, but he soon became a general farmer. He was a watchman at a furniture factory in 1940, when he and Fern still were living on the farm but their son Clayton was doing the farming.

He probably was born Morace Ottowell Whitney, but most records are variations of Morris Otto Whitney. He was born in Michigan on June 12, 1874, the only child of Willard and Eliza Ann (Bullard) Whiney. By 1880 his mother was married to Jasper Farnsworth and they were living on his farm. Katherine was born in Michigan on May 26, 1875, first of the five children of Edward Bannister Phillips and Jerusha Elizabeth (Reynolds) Phillips. She had a half-sister that was five years older. Kate (later Catherine) married Morris at Bangor on December 26, 1898. Their daughter Irene was born in Chicago in 1908, and their daughter Katherine was born in Michigan in 1910. Otto's sale of his interest in the McLean Gallery to John T. McLean was reported in March of 1902. The dissolution of the partnership of Day & Whitney and the retirement of Mr. Whitney were announced in the fall of 1903. M. P. Thompson and Otto were the proprietors of the Whitney Engraving Company at Hartford in 1904. A store in Benton Harbor advertised in May of 1923: "STEP LIVELY LADIES! BE ON TIME! AND LOOK HERE MOTHER!! A PHOTOGRAPH OF YOUR BABY ABSOLUTELY FREE. We have arranged with M. O. Whitney, expert child photographer, to be with us for a limited time only, and during his stay, we will make and present to each mother who visits our store FREE OF COST OR OBLIGATION, one photo of her child, providing the child is under seven years of age, and accompanied by parent or guardian. Mr. Whitney has photographed thousands of babies, is fond of children, knows just how to catch their best expressions, and record them permanently. THIS IS AN OPPORTUNITY WHICH NO MOTHER CAN AFFORD TO MISS...." Three days later it was: "117 SMILING LITTLE BABIES sat before Mr. Whitney Saturday and Today. MR. WHITNEY IS THE EXPERT CHILD PHOTOGRAPHER –whose services we have engaged for a limited time only and who will make and present to each mother who visits our second floor a photo of her child, providing the child is under seven years of age. Leonard was born in New York State to natives of New York on May 9, 1875, the only child of George W. and Cordelia E. (Eaton) Whittaker. He grew up on the family farm, and he became a medium sized man with brown eyes and black hair. Gertrude was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in 1873. She married Leonard about 1902, and they never had children. Early in 1903 a photographic journal devoted a full page to one of Leonard's photographs, and reproduced two others on a second page along with these comments, which followed some rather sharp criticism of the work of another photographer: "Quite different are the five sent by L. G. Whittaker of St. Louis, Mich.; here the outlines are beautifully soft, giving a roundness and relief that is very good. Particularly is this to be seen in the picture of the baby in the tub, which has been selected for publication in the Ladies' Home Journal. Although the background of this picture is quite as dark as any of Mr. Brodie's pictures, there is none of the harsh cutting line where flesh and background meet. The others are equally good and show that Mr. Whittaker has a thorough command of a good light, his modeling is soft, round and harmonious and the flesh tones are exceptionally good. The plump little baby lying upon a cushion being as good an example of flesh tones as I have seen; nothing hard about any of them, the flesh looks as if it would dimple under the pressure of a finger." Leonard's purchase of the St. Louis gallery from R. C. Holcomb was reported in the spring of 1904. A dime sized circular blind stamp with "Whittaker's Studio, St. Louis, Mich." was used on some post card photographs, and "WHITTAKER ARTIST" was scribed into or lettered on the negatives of others. The subjects included St. Louis streets, parks, churches, trees downed by a wind storm, a company picnic, a street fair and city hall decked out in flags and bunting. Postmarks ranged from 1909 to 1912. Leonard's parents were living with him and Gertrude in 1920, when Leonard and his father were associated in the real estate business. Gertrude still was keeping house for Leonard in 1930, but by 1935 he had a different wife. Mabel was born in Michigan on August 7, 1878. Zimmerman was either her maiden name or her previous married name, and her mother's maiden name was Clark. Mabel and Leonard were living in the same house in 1940 that they had occupied in 1935. Leonard died in Los Angeles on November 10, 1946. Mabel died there on September 11, 1968, and her burial was in Saint Louis, Michigan.

His father came from Missouri and Olin was born to a mother from Illinois on November 16, 1895, at Merchantsville, New Jersey, the elder child of Leonidas Olin Whittier and Mable E. (Fisher) Whittier. His sister Libbie was born in Missouri in August of 1897. Their family moved first to Chicago and then to Grand Rapids in 1905. By 1910 Olin was living with an aunt and uncle. He quit school in the eighth grade and founded the Camera Shop, renting the small store on Cherry Street for $9.00 per month. He became a short man with blue eyes and light brown hair. Mildred D. Dolan was born in Michigan to a mother from Wisconsin on January 25, 1897, last of the seven children of Charles Wilson Dolan and Cora Emily (Fisher) Dolan. She married Olin in Grand Rapids on January 28, 1916, and she gave birth in Michigan to Bentley in October of 1916, to Wilson on October 16, 1918, and to Susanne on September 30, 1926. Bentley died as a child. Mildred's brother Bernard F. Dolan was associated with Olin in the Photo Service Shop until 1929, when Olin became sole owner. For a while in 1927, both the Division Avenue and Monroe Avenue locations of the Photo Service Shop were active. Olin's son, Wilson D. Whittier, joined the business in 1945 following service in World War II, and bought out his father in 1957. In 1969, the firm had branches in Vandenberg Center and in Holland, and was doing a large wholesale business in photo-finishing. Olin was an avid partridge hunter. In retirement, he and his wife spent their summers in Grand Rapids and their winters in Florida. Olin was 73 when he died after a brief illness at Blodgett Memorial Hospital in Grand Rapids on May 3, 1969. He was survived by his wife and son and daughter. Interment was in Oak Hill Cemetery. Mildred died at Grand Rapids on February 1, 1991.

William was born Wilhelm A. Wicht in Germany on March 9, 1860, and he immigrated in 1881. Wicht & Rosenbaum were proprietors of the Great Western Portrait Gallery, book merchants and publishers of The Independent and of Detroit Rundschau. William's partner Julius Rosenbaum is not known to have had previous experience, but a few years later he was in photographic businesses at Superior, Wisconsin. Julia K. Herning was born in Michigan to German parents in July of 1859, and she married William in 1885 or early in 1886. They had three daughters born in Michigan: Elsa in April of 1887, and the twins Hedwig and Gertrude on April 16, 1888. Gertrude lived only until 1902. Julia gave birth to Willie in Wisconsin on April 8, 1890, and to Grace in New York State on December 29, 1896. William died in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, on July 16, 1916. Julia was living at Cleveland in 1920 with her daughter Hedwig and her husband, Eben Martin. She was living in 1930 and 1935 with her widowed daughter Elsa and two grandsons at West Palm Beach. James was born at Rochester in Kent County, England, on November 15, 1850, eldest of the three sons of Thomas and Charlotte Susanna (Quaife) Wickenden. His father died on January 1, 1861, and his brother Robert (who is profiled below) was born six months later. James immigrated to America in 1869. Lucy A. E. Wales was born in Ohio in 1856, second of the three children of Oscar and Sophronia Wales. She married James on April 5, 1876, and their sons were born in Ohio: Leroy on March 26, 1877, Ernest on October 9, 1878, and Rollin on June 4, 1880. James became a naturalized citizen of the United States in 1879, and he succeeded his brother Robert as a Dundee photographer about 1882. In addition to card, cabinet and panel portraits, James produced stereoscopic views of Dundee. Lucy died at Toledo in 1894, and two of his sons still were living with James in 1900. Lillian was born in Ohio to parents from New York in December of 1861, last of the three children of Leonard D. and Phoebe H. Robinson. She was the childless widow Lillian B. Parks prior to her marriage to James about 1902. Lillian was working as a stenographer in a law office from 1907 through 1920. James was working for the B. F. Wade Printing Company in 1907 and in 1912. James died at Toledo on April 28, 1932, and Lillian died later in 1932.

Robert was born at Rochester in Kent County, England, on July 8, 1861, six months after the death of his father. He was last of the three sons of Thomas and Charlotte Susanna (Quaife) Wickenden. Robert immigrated in 1873, and he was living in 1880 with his widowed mother in the home of a Methodist minister for whom she was keeping house. Note that the surname of his photographic partner in Dundee was the same as his mother's maiden name. Robert was succeeded in Dundee by his brother James. Some mounts "From Wickenden's Photographic Studio, Dundee, Mich." carried photographs that could have been made by either Robert or James. In the Lucas County Court at Toledo, Ohio, on January 21, 1883, Robert was naturalized a citizen of the United States. Ada L. Ahier was born on Jersey in the Channel Islands of England on February 12, 1866. She married Robert soon after she immigrated to America in 1885. Their son Alfred was born in the United States on March 7, 1886. While they were living in Paris, Robert boarded the ship City of Chicago at Liverpool, England, and arrived at New York City on October 5, 1889. Some of their children were born in France: Alice on March 9, 1888, Yvonne on April 18, 1890, Henry on June 18, 1892, and John on June 18, 1896. Outremont is a suburb of Montreal. Their last children were born in Canada: Robert in 1901 or early in 1902, and Marguerite two years later. They had moved to the United States in 1906, and it was Ada and their children that were enumerated in Connecticut in 1910, when Robert was not to be found. Robert left Liverpool on the vessel Mongolian and arrived on August 30, 1913, at Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he was residing. He boarded the S. S. Espagne at Bordeaux, France, on January 25, 1919, and arrived at New York City on February 7, 1919. Robert died on November 28, 1931.

| George was born in Germany about 1868, and he immigrated in 1883. He was a naturalized citizen of the United states by 1900, and he remained single and lived alone according to all available records. He advertised nationally late in 1906: "FOR SALE - Well located studio in prosperous Southern Michigan town of 15,000 population. Equipped from stamp to 14x17 size; cameras and lenses first-class. Best skylight in city - northern exposure; city water and gas; low rent. Fine opening for a good workman. Big bargain for someone...." A 9 ¾ by 7 ½ inch photograph of Mackinac Island entitled: "Old Indian Trail" was copyrighted by G. H. Wickman in 1907. A neat impression of the block house over "WICKMAN, MACKINAC" was blind stamped into postal photographs. Some of his post cards were made from negatives exposed by J. S. Desy of Mackinaw City. Florida post cards were copyrighted by G. H. Wickman, and later cards of Florida scenes were imprinted: "Photo by Wickman, Boca Grande." George seems to have spent all of his winters at Boca Grande between 1920 and 1940 or longer, and to have maintained a seasonal photography and curio business there. He became the largest retailer of post cards on Mackinac Island. Cards from George's negatives were press printed by German firms until World War I, when he established an exclusive arrangement with Curt Teich in Chicago. One of the things produced by Curt Teich was a mailable package of twenty 2¼ by 3½ inch views of Mackinac Island with printing that included "G. H. WICKMAN, MACKINAC ISLAND, MICH." in very small letters. George worked on Mackinac Island through the 1930s and 1940s until he sold the business to Robert Benjamin about 1950. |           | m1 2222 33 tt 44 55 111 666 tt 77 |

Several early records were for the surname Weidman. His father emigrated from the Wurtemberg region of Germany, his mother emigrated from the Saxony region of Germany, and Emil was born in Michigan in November of 1866, fourth of the six children of John B. and Amelia Widman. All six were living with their widowed mother in 1880. The very experienced photographer John J. Gibson was Albert's partner in both Battle Creek and Jackson. Their Jackson patrons were advised to "Take the Elevator." Jackson employees of Gibson & Widman included Edith Blanche Griswold as a clerk and retoucher from 1891 to 1893, and Miss Lou V. Willson as a retoucher from 1893 to 1895. Albert sold his photographic art studio in Jackson to Albert Raphael Thomas of Ann Arbor early in 1895. Her father came from Connecticut, her mother emigrated from Germany, and Cordelia was born in Wisconsin in October of 1852. She married an Englishman named William Hennesey, and she gave birth to William, Corina and Martin between 1873 and 1881. Cordelia was a widow by 1900, and she married Albert in June of 1901 in Lake County, Indiana. Her daughter Corina was living with Albert and Cordelia in 1910 and 1915. Cordelia still was with Albert in 1925, but he was a widower by 1930.

Asa was born at Sickels, Michigan, on March 24, 1887, the youngest child of A. Mason and Edith A. (Wright) Wight. Edith died late in 1891 and he was raised by his father's second wife, Ella. She was his photographic associate in 1904. Asa became a short man with brown eyes and brown hair, and in 1917 and 1920 he was identifying himself as Ace E. Wight. He served in World War I. Her father emigrated from Austria and Wilhelmine Bertha Mitzel was born in Detroit to a mother from Indiana on October 30, 1890, third of the six children of Gustav G. and Henrietta C. (Roser) Mitzel. She married Asa in 1916, and their sons were born in Michigan: Robert in June of 1917, Leonard in April of 1919, Allen in 1920, and Thomas in July of 1921. Leonard died as a child. Wilhelmine died in Gratiot County in 1925. Ettie Liddle was born in England on August 22, 1877, and she immigrated in 1915. She married Asa in June of 1927, and she helped to raise his three sons, all of whom were out on their own by 1940. Asa died in Gratiot County on October 19, 1947, and Ettie died there on April 9, 1950.

Bert was born at Sickels on February 17, 1882, the fifth and last child of Sheldon and Mary Ann (Weaver) Wight. His siblings were Charles, Alma, Florence and Fred. Bert became a slender man with blue eyes and light hair. One of the reasons that his father entered the business was Bert's interest in photography, so he probably worked in the Sickels gallery before they moved into Elsie. He definitely worked in the Elsie studio from the day his father opened it for business. Her father came from New York State and Nettie A. Derry was born in Michigan in 1884, one of the five children of Albert and Mary A. (Williams) Derry. She married Bert on January 14, 1902, and their sons were born in Michigan: Clifford Albert Wight on December 14, 1902, and Harold Clifton Wight on April 5, 1908. "PHOTO BY WIGHT, ASHLEY" was lettered on the negative of a post card photograph of a barn near Ashley that was destroyed by wind on June 23, 1910. Bert owned a wooden building in Ashley with his studio above the store he rented to a grocer. Fire broke out in an adjacent building about two o'clock on the morning of July 20, 1912, and spread to several buildings before it could be controlled. Bert's building and studio contents were consumed. Beyond the $600.00 insurance on the building, he lost about $300.00 on the structure and nearly $500.00 on his uninsured stock and equipment. Bert was a widower by 1930, when he was providing a home in Saginaw for his sons, both single salesmen. Bert died at Saginaw on June 12, 1954.

Her Parents came from Delaware and Ella was born in Fulton Township on October 20, 1869, fifth of the seven children of Benjamin and Hannah Cousellor. She married Alexander Mason Wight about 1892. Mason's first wife had died in October of 1891, leaving him with five children between 4 and 16 years old. The two eldest girls left home and the older boy died shortly before his fifteenth birthday in 1894. Mason died in September of 1903, and his youngest child, Asa, became Ella's partner in the photograph studio. Ella married Archibald A. McBride about 1907, and he continued the Merrill studio until 1915. They moved to Flint and then to Los Angeles, California, where Ella died on May 15, 1942.

Fred was born in Sickels on July 17, 1877, fourth of the five children of the photographer Sheldon Wight and his wife Mary Ann (Weaver) Wight. He became a medium sized man with gray eyes and light brown hair. Her father emigrated from Scotland, and Pearl Reed was born in Michigan to a mother from New York in September of 1881. She married Fred in 1897, and their son Roy Alton Wight was born in June of 1898. Roy died on August 5, 1904, and his burial was at Ithaca, Michigan. Something happened to Pearl. Her father came from New York State and Juaneita (usually Neita) Turner was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in August of 1887, last of the three children of Silas D. and Mary E. (Bolds) Turner. Neita married Fred on November 1, 1908, and their children were born in Michigan: Alton Roy Wight on May 26, 1912, and Pauline G. Wight in 1914. Fred was enumerated as a farmer in 1900 and as a house carpenter in 1910. After the death of his father in 1919, Fred was proprietor of the Elsie photograph studio for a couple of years. Nieta operated an Elsie beauty parlor in 1930 and 1940. Fred died at St. Johns on August 10, 1958. Interment was in Elsie's Riverside Cemetery. Sheldon was born April 22, 1847, at Lawrence in Lorain County, Ohio, third of the five children of Leonard and Parthena (Sheldon) Wight. He was called Leonard as a child. The family moved in 1858 to Benton Township in Eaton County, Michigan. At Jackson on December 22, 1863, saying that he was 18, Sheldon enlisted for three years in Company F of the Sixth Michigan Cavalry and was mustered on the same day. He kept a diary during his service in Pennsylvania and Virginia, and was at Appomattox when Lee surrendered. Sheldon transferred to Company K of the First Cavalry on November 17, 1865, and was sent west to help build Fort Laramie in Wyoming. His diary describes the struggles with the Indians, the ague, and the constant search for food and a little comfort. His unit visited Salt Lake City before returning to Detroit where he was discharged on June 30, 1866. Her father came from Pennsylvania and Mary Ann Weaver was born in Wood County, Ohio, on July 8, 1847, sixth of the seven children of Abraham and Susannah (Conser) Weaver. She and Sheldon were married at Charlotte on November 18, 1866, and in 1867 they bought 80 acres in Hamilton Township of Gratiot County. Sheldon went ahead to clear land and build a cabin on the banks of the Bad River, while Mary followed in a buckboard drawn by a team of oxen with their possessions and two-week-old Charles, their first baby. She arrived to find that hunting and fishing had been so good that the cabin walls were only a few logs high. When Mary cooled down she let Sheldon use the glass from a picture frame for the only window in the cabin. He later built a large home on the farm with an open third floor where dances were held with Sheldon playing a variety of instruments. Mary gave birth here to Alma in November of 1869, to Florence in September of 1875, to Fred in July of 1877, and to Bert in February of 1882. Six of their 80 acres were incorporated into Sickels when the village was platted and recorded in 1882 for the proprietors, William Sickels and Sheldon L. Wight. Sheldon was a justice of the peace for Hamilton Township in 1870, township treasurer in 1881 and 1882, township clerk in 1884, and on the board of review from 1886 through 1892. The planing mill run by Sheldon and his brother Mason made window sash and many kinds of furniture. He took up photography for pleasure and had a dark room in his home long before he erected the "Photograph Gallery" sign in his front yard. He began commercial photography from his wagon, touring the surrounding countryside to capture individuals, families, farms, weddings and funerals with his camera. Health problems and the death of his brother led to his giving up farming and milling to concentrate upon photography, and about 1904 he bought out the gallery of H. W. Tuttle at nearby Elsie. Sheldon's son Bert worked in the Elsie studio from the beginning, and later opened his own studio at Ashley. Sheldon was a prolific maker of post card photographs of Elsie and vicinity, particularly between 1907 and 1909, including several of scenes in Ashley. He pictured the inside and the frontage of his studio and many other businesses in this format, as well as the main street crowded with buggies and with autos. From July through October of 1908 he recorded the construction of the powdered milk plant, from making the cement blocks to raising the smoke stack. He took many photos after a snow storm on April 29, 1909, many along the Maple River, and others of barn raisings and street fairs. He made a laminated wooden ball over two feet in diameter for use as a studio prop and experimented with multiple exposures, exaggerations, and other trick photography. He taught his grandson Vern to use the darkroom and helped Vern build a photographic printer. After Mary died on January 4, 1912, Sheldon married a lady named Ruth. He continued the business and pleasures of photography until his death at Elsie on May 26, 1919. His great-granddaughter recently published a 238-page biography of Sheldon.

Elias was born at Warren, New York, to natives of New York on May 12, 1836, the son of Cyrus Delos Wightman and Sophia B. (Isham) Wightman. He enlisted at Jordansville, New York, on November 23, 1861, as a corporal in Company I of the 81st New York Infantry. He was mustered into the United States Army on February 21, 1862, and he was mustered out for disability at Newport News, Virginia, on April 7, 1862. One E. B. Wightman maintained a branch photograph gallery about 1865 at Ilion, New York. Caroline (sometimes Carrie or Clara) Howard was born at Union, New York, on July 13, 1844, the daughter of Nathan and Fanny (Bayliss) Howard. She married Elias about 1872, and their daughter Ethelyn Estelle Wightman was born in Michigan in 1874 or early in 1875. "E. B. Wightman, Photo. Artist, Fentonville, Michigan. Florida Stereoscopic Views for sale." was printed on the mounts of stereo views of De Land and other Florida places. Caroline died at Fenton on April 28, 1887, and about a year later Elias married a young lady named Kittie. She was born in Michigan to parents from New York in October of 1868, and she gave birth to Ila Mae Wightman in February of 1891. Ethelyn married David A. Titus at Fenton on August 9, 1892. Kittie was keeping house for Elias and Ila Mae in 1900, but then something happened to her. Jessie A. Thomas was born in Michigan to English parents in September of 1865, last of the seven children of William S. and Elizabeth (Stephens) Thomas. Her marriage to Elias in 1904 or early in 1905 was her first and his fourth. Ila Mae was still at home with Elias and Jessie in 1910. Elias died at Fenton on September 30, 1912.

Eli was born at Homer, New York, to natives of New York on July 11, 1844, seventh of the twelve children of George Ransome Wightman and Mary (Crandall) Wightman. His father was farming in 1850, but had become a physician by 1860. Eli still was living with his parents in 1870. "E. P. Wightman, Photographic Artist, Galesburg, Mich." was printed on the pasters holding tintypes into carte de visite sized paper frames. Frances Isadora Vincent was born at Lyme, New York, to natives of New York on May 13, 1847, the daughter of Chauncey Gibbs Vincent and Polly Ann (Allen) Vincent. She married Eli at Burlington, Iowa, on June 21, 1872. Eli advertised locally early in 1874: "E. P. WIGHTMAN, Photographer. PHOTOGRAPHS and AMBROTYPES Taken in the BEST STYLE Known to the Art. Dealer in Albums, Frames, Passepartouts, etc., etc. FARRAND BLOCK, Evert, Mich." The printing on some of his Evert photograph mounts stated that he had "... Albums, Cases, Oval and Square Gilt and Walnut Frames, Etc. Constantly on hand." Frances gave birth at Evert to Edith in June of 1874, to Dora Mae in November of 1876, to Franklin in February of 1878, to Clara in 1881, and to Louise in June of 1886. Eli sold the Evert photographic business to Theron F. Nix. He supplemented his jewelry business with sewing machine sales in the early 1880s, and by breeding cattle in the 1890s. Frances died at Evert on October 9, 1893. Her father came from New York State and Pernetta Mae (usually Nettie) Heath was born in Illinois to a mother from Ohio in July of 1869, the daughter of George and Lovina Heath. She remained single until she married Eli in the spring of 1896. Nettie helped to raise his younger children, but gave birth to no children of her own. Eli and Nettie were living in 1920 with the family of his daughter Louise, now Mrs. James C. Story. Eli died at Waycross on March 23, 1920.

Harry was born in Michigan to parents from New York on May 5, 1870, first of the three children of William Alonzo Wightman and Celestia Melinda (Swaddle) Wightman. His sister Elizabeth Ruby Wightman was born at Coloma, Michigan, on November 24, 1871, and his sister Maude Wightman was born in Michigan on July 18, 1879. Blanche Tibbits was born to a mother from Massachusetts at Plymouth, Michigan, on October 4, 1873, last of the three daughters of Levi M. and Amelia (Kellogg) Tibbits. She married Harry at Kalamazoo on May 17, 1897, and their son Clifford Buell Wightman was born at Chicago on September 18, 1906. Eugene F. Collins was a Mount Pleasant photographer for fifteen years prior to his partnership with Harry, and then for nearly forty years afterwards. Peritonitis attacks were frequent with Harry, and during a fit of vomiting his stomach was ruptured by the intense strain, which proved to be fatal the following evening on November 22, 1910. He was survived by his wife, his son, his mother and his sisters, all residents of Mount Pleasant. His sister Elizabeth was called Bessie by her family, and she never married. She became a respected artist in charcoal, water color and oil, and she served as head of the Department of Fine Arts at the Central Michigan Normal School in Mount Pleasant from 1900 until her retirement in June of 1937.

Traveling photographers J. N. Wigle and W. W. Webb had been in Lansing for several weeks taking photographs of public buildings and points of interest when they were arrested September 9, 1893, on a warrant charging them with taking a photograph which would corrupt the morals of both young and old, for the purpose of sale, distribution and circulation. They were accused of selling obscene photos in Lansing saloons, and charged specifically with taking a photograph on August 18 of Mrs. Emily Ketchum in her parlor while she was wearing nothing but a pair of shoes and a smile. Mrs. Ketchum, who also was arrested, was a fairly prominent Lansing resident and had recently been active in the W.C.T.U. She was past middle age and was not considered particularly beautiful. She denied posing for the photo while agreeing that it was taken in a corner of her parlor which included furniture made by her carpenter husband and a framed copy of the W.C.T.U. constitution and by-laws. The police had this photograph and the negative from which it was printed, and obtained a search warrant for the hotel rooms of the photographers, where they found a large number of bawdy pictures. Wigle and Webb claimed that the negative was not their work, and that the other nude photographs had been copied from noted oil paintings during their travels. They were held for examination on September 13. A local saloon keeper provided surety for Webb's $150 bail, but Wigle was obliged to remain in jail. At the examination a young local photographer named Irving Cary testified that he had loaned some frames to Wigle and Webb, was in their hotel room to retrieve the frames, looked over their negatives and noted the one of Mrs. Ketchum. Knowing that people were looking for evidence against her, he took the negative and made a print from it. Later the city marshal demanded the plate and Cary gave it to him. Wigle was bound over to the circuit court for trial, with his bail increased to $200. He was tried in Lansing on October 3, 1893, and his attorney claimed that although the pictures had been taken, they had not been distributed, sold or loaned by the defendant. The prosecutor apparently convinced the jury that Wigle had taken the pictures with criminal intent, for after brief deliberations Wigle was found guilty and was sentenced to a short term in the county jail. Webb was tried at Mason in January of 1894 on the same charge and was acquitted, probably because of evidence that Wigle had taken the Ketchum picture. Mrs. Ketchum was found guilty at Mason a few days later, but this verdict was overturned on appeal in January of 1895. Jeduthen was born in Canada in May of 1849. Priscella was born there in May of 1853, and she married Jeduthen about 1871. Their four sons and two daughters were born in Canada between October of 1872 and January of 1891. Their eldest son immigrated in 1892, and the rest of the family came to the United States in 1895. Priscella was a widow by 1910.

His father came from Connecticut and Horace was born on the family farm in North Hampton Township of Summit County, Ohio, on April 9, 1846, last of the five children of Otis Evelin Wilcox and Annis Wilcox. He was a five feet two inch printer with a light complexion, brown hair and blue eyes when he joined Company H of the 41st Ohio Infantry as a drummer on October 20, 1861. They rendezvoused at Cleveland and served at Camp Wyckliff in Kentucky, where Horace was stricken with chronic diarrhea and ulceration of the bowels. He was discharged for disability from the camp at Columbia, Kentucky, on November 1, 1862. He was enrolled at Wellington in Company C of the 86th Ohio Infantry on June 6, 1863, and served as a drummer until his discharge with his company at Cleveland, Ohio, on February 10, 1864. Her father came from Virginia and Jerusha Ann Aliff was born in Portage County, Ohio, on April 9, 1848, last of the four children of David and Lucinda (Canfield) Iliff and their only daughter. Jerusha was living in June of 1870 on the farm of relatives less than fifteen miles east of Kent, where Horace was a photographer, and very close to Charleston, Ohio, where they were married on October 30, 1870. Their children were born in Michigan: Grace at Reading in July of 1871, Wilber at Coldwater in March of 1873 (he lived only four months), Horace (later Clayton) at Brutus in April of 1876, and Alice at Petoskey in December of 1883. "From the Photographic Studio of H. M. WILCOX, Nos. 512 and 514 State St., Petoskey, Michigan. This Negative will be carefully preserved for future orders. A complete assortment of views of Petoskey and vicinity constantly kept on hand. Out-door grouping a specialty. Orders for viewing promptly attended to." was printed on the back of 5¼ by 8½ inch mounts for photographs such as a bird's-eye view of the railroad tracks and depot. "Wilcox" was lettered on photographs with post card backs, including one of a captive bear. Horace was enumerated in April of 1910 as a scenic photographer. "H.M.W. Photo" was penned on a photograph of a nativity scene at a Petoskey church in 1910, with "FOLEY STUDIO, PETOSKEY, MICH." printed on its post card back. By 1925, Horace's mind and memory were gone and he required constant attention. He died on September 15, 1926, and was buried at Snover.

His father came from Vermont and Jefferson was born in New York on August 14, 1829, second of the four children of Jefferson and Ann Wilder. Janette was born in New York State to parents from Connecticut in August of 1836, third of the four known children of David and Mary Waterman. She married Jefferson at Chesterfield in Macomb County, Michigan, on January 8, 1854. Their children were born in Michigan: Eugene J. Wilder in 1855, Nettie E. Wilder on May 28, 1861, Katie A. Wilder on December 26, 1864, and Jarvis Ray Wilder on December 17, 1874. Eugene died prior to 1900. Jefferson was 33 years old when he entered the service at Pontiac as First Lieutenant of Company C of the 22nd Michigan Volunteer Infantry on August 14, 1862. The regiment left Pontiac on September 4 by rail to Detroit, by boat to Cleveland, and by rail to Cincinnati, then marched across a pontoon bridge to Covington, Kentucky. There they prepared for battles that didn't happen and built fortifications. For another month they marched and counter marched in north central Kentucky to protect towns around Lexington from threats of Confederate cavalry attacks. From October of 1862 through February of 1863 the regiment was in a miserable camp near Lexington where many men, including Colonel Wisner, died from disease. Jefferson was transferred to Company D on December 15. He considered himself incompetent to perform the duties of his office and resigned on February 21, 1863. He was assessed as a traveling photographer in May of 1864. He re-entered the army in July of 1864 as Second Lieutenant of Company A of the 29th Michigan Volunteer Infantry. This regiment was organized at Saginaw, and left there on October 6, 1864, for Nashville, Tennessee. Sent immediately to Decatur, Alabama, it arrived there at the same time the enemy attacked. The men of the 29th marched into the rifle pits under a galling fire with the coolness of veterans. Though outnumbered three to one, the defenders of Decatur withstood attacks on October 26, 27 and 28 and retained their positions. Jefferson's back was injured on November 1, 1864, resulting in piles which afflicted him through the spring of 1865 while on detached duty at a block house at Cumberland Tunnel, Tennessee, and for the rest of his life. He was promoted to First Lieutenant on April 30, 1865, with his commission back dated to January 19, 1865. The regiment was mustered out at Murfreesboro, Tennessee, on September 6, then paid and disbanded at Detroit on September 12, 1865. Two cent revenue stamps on some cartes de visite with no printed identification were cancelled with the signature: "J. J. Wilder." In March of 1867 Jefferson was assessed as a lawyer and insurance agent in Centerville, which was renamed Caro in 1868. He was County Clerk of Tuscola County in 1870. For many years he had the appearance of poor health and suffered from piles. His first attempts to obtain an Invalid Pension were made in 1881. These attempts were renewed in 1887, apparently with success. All three of the Wilders' children were living in or near Los Angeles in the early 1900s. Jefferson's occupation was defined on his death certificate as insurance. He died at Pasadena on June 20, 1908, of valvular insufficiency complicated by chronic rheumatism. Burial was in Mountain View Cemetery. Janette received a widow's pension until her death on November 30, 1910.

Orlin (once Orlando) was born in January of 1855 to parents from New York in Calhoun County, Michigan, last of the four children of Jared P. and Louisa (Faurot) Wilder. His brothers Albert and Henry are profiled above. Their mother died in January of 1856, and their father died in June of 1869. Her parents emigrated from the Wurttemberg region of Germany and Caroline (later Carrie) was born at Jonesville, Michigan, on March 14, 1865, fifth of the six children of Jacob Frederick Mergenthaler and Caroline Magdalena (Conrad) Mergenthaler. She married Orlin about 1891, and they never had children. Orlin died on October 31, 1927, and was buried at Tekonsha.

His father came from Illinois and Norman was born at Kansas City, Missouri, on September 4, 1891, the only child of Charles and Carrie Wilding. He matured as a medium sized man with light blue eyes and light hair. He was living with his parents in 1900, and with his widowed mother in 1910. Though he was single in 1917, he hoped to be exempted from military service because his partner, Pendleton S. Morris, Junior, was already in the army and the business would be ruined if Norman was drafted. Morris & Wilding were identified as advertising agents in 1916, as manufacturers of advertising or commercial motion pictures in 1917, and as commercial photographers in 1918 and 1919. They employed as photographers George T. Ledward in 1918 and Ronald R. Cameron in 1919. Norman was sole proprietor of the company in 1919. Jessie was born in Michigan in 1887 or early in 1888, and by 1935 she was married to Norman. She and Norman lived in the same house from 1935 to 1940. Norman died in Chicago on June 24, 1947.

Charles was born in Massachusetts to natives of Massachusetts in April of 1868, last of the six children of Abraham S. and Susan E. (Brewer) Wiley. His father was a wealthy druggist in 1870, and vice president of the Detroit Safe Company in 1880. "C. A. Wiley, Photog., Detroit, Mich." was lettered on the negative of a 10 by 18 inch photograph of the deck railroad bridge over the Grand River at Grand Ledge in Eaton County. The photo is on a 12 by 21 inch plain buff mount. Ida E. Willis was born in New York State to natives of New York on November 23, 1873, the daughter of Frank A. and Emma A. (Gates) Willis. She married Charles about 1899, and their son Frank was born in Montana on March 15, 1900. Charles probably died before Ida married Harry E. Fearnall in November of 1909. His son Frank was living at Miles City in 1910 with Ida and her new husband.

He was enumerated as Willie in the 1870 census, then as Roy in the 1880 census. He was called Roy or Roy W. Wiley in directories of Battle Creek in 1889, Jackson in 1890, Marshall in 1897, and Detroit in 1911 and 1912, plus 33 issues of the Marshall Evening Chronicle between 1913 and 1919, as well as the 1940 census. He was listed as William E. Wiley in the censuses for 1900, 1910, 1920 and 1930, in the 1915 Michigan State Gazetteer, and in Battle Creek directories for 1914 and 1922. His father came from Vermont and Willie was born in Michigan in December of 1869, second of the three children of Sanford D. and Engrieica Wiley. His sister Eva was four years older, his brother Albert was four years younger, and his half-brother Hugh was fourteen years younger. Her father came from the state of New York, her mother emigrated from Switzerland, and Nettie Louise Marsh was born in August of 1876 at Marshall, Michigan, second of the three children of Emory Franklin Marsh and Mary Helen (Agerton) Marsh and their only daughter. She married William at Marshall on October 22, 1891, and their children were born in Michigan: Harry in 1893, Donald in December of 1896, Marion in 1899, Helen in 1901, and Thomas in 1910. Roy purchased the Battle Creek studio late in 1913 and was considering a branch studio in Marshall. He advertised in the Marshall newspaper: "Christmas photographs: Get them at the Lightning Studio while you wait. Three for 25 cents or $1 per dozen and up. Opposite the post office on East Main Street, Battle Creek. The patronage of the Marshall people solicited. Roy Wiley." Wiley and his partner, Howard M. Hall, specialized in commercial photography. Nettie still was keeping house for Roy in 1940.

Edwin was born in Kalamazoo County, Michigan, to parents from New York in April of 1868, the elder son of Job D. and Sylvia Ann (Truax) Wilkinson. His brother Elmer (later Daniel) was born in April of 1870. Minnie Dora Wilson was born in Michigan on January 20, 1869, second of the five children of William Henry Harrison Wilson and Viola Minerva (Burdick) Wilson. She married Edwin at Kalamazoo on December 31, 1887. Their son Ray was born in Indiana in December of 1889. Their other children were born in Michigan: Lewis in May of 1897, Clare in November of 1904, Effie in August of 1907, and Victor in August of 1908. Lewis died in February of 1906. Several of Edwin's 1892 cabinet photographs were of an infant suspended in a novel baby jumper harness. The backs of other Wilkinson cabinet mounts from Hudson were stamped: "W. H. Tingley, View Artist, Church, Mich." A post card photograph showed a puffed cheek young man blowing into a tuba with a cloud of baby heads emerging from the bell of the horn. It was titled: "A BOYNE CITY BLOWOUT." and on the horn was "Copyright 1908, E. H. Wilkinson." Printed on a neat 2½ by 4 inch card with rounded corners was: "EDWIN H. WILKINSON, PHOTOGRAPHER + Reunions, Picnics, Clubs, etc., taken on short notice. Children's Pictures taken in their own homes where they feel at ease and act natural. Houses, horses and buggies, or pets' pictures taken, also groups of workmen, at any time. + Phone 223, BOYNE CITY, MICH." Edwin was sole proprietor of the Metropolitan Art Studio, which at times was called the Metropolitan Studio. His home and studio shared the same address on Woodmere Avenue in the 1920s. He died in Detroit on March 30, 1925.

Roland was born at Au Sable, Michigan, to natives of Michigan on June 6, 1897, first of the three sons of John and Anna B. (Shepley) Wilkinson. His brother Harvard was four years younger, and his brother Charles was nine years younger. "Bred and Owned by Mau Bros., Bay City, Mich." was lettered on the negative of a photograph of three prize chickens, and "Amateur photo by R. J. Wilkinson. 1910." was stamped on its post card back. "Patterson Memorial Baptist Sunday School. Wilkinson Photo No. 3" and "Scene In Machine Shop, M. C. Roundhouse, Bay City, Mich., Wilkinson Photo, 1915." and "Scene in Men's Wash Room, New M. C. Round-House, Wenona Yards. Wilkinson Photo No. 50." were lettered on the negatives of post card photographs. Her father emigrated from Holland and Ellen was born in Michigan to a mother from New York on April 6, 1900, fifth of the nine children of Peter William De Young and Ellen M. (Fogelsonger) De Young. She married Roland at Bay City on August 8, 1918, and their children were born at Jackson: June Ellen in 1924 or early in 1925, Betty Ann in July of 1927, and Roland John in 1931 or early in 1932. Ellen still was keeping house for Roland in 1956.

Thomas was born in New York State to natives of New York in April of 1844. When he enlisted at Detroit in Battery H of the First Michigan Light Artillery on September 27, 1864, he was five feet five inches tall with a fair complexion, black eyes and brown hair. Thomas joined his battery at Atlanta, Georgia, on October 25, 1864. They moved in November to Chattanooga, Tennessee, where they remained until July of 1865. Thomas was mustered out of the army with his battery at Jackson, Michigan, on July 22, 1865. Her parents emigrated from Belgium, and Louisa was born in Michigan in December of 1849. She married Thomas about 1868 and their children were born in Michigan: Frederick in February of 1870, Emily (later Emelia) in November of 1874, and Thomas in March of 1879. Something happened to Louisa in the early 1900s, and about 1906 Thomas married a spinster named Johanna who was born in Ireland in 1859 or early in 1860. This marriage did not last. Her parents emigrated from Northern Ireland and Josephine was born in Michigan in 1869 or early in 1870. She married first about 1906, and by 1928 she was married to Thomas. Thomas died in Detroit on May 9, 1934, survived by Josephine.

Eleanor was born to parents from Vermont in the old Withey home on College Avenue in Grand Rapids on June 5, 1858, fourth of the five children of Solomon L. and Marion L. (Hinsdill) Withey. Her father was a prominent attorney and, when the Western Judicial District of Michigan was created in 1863, he was appointed its first United States District Judge by President Lincoln. Eleanor graduated from Vassar College in 1880. She married Willis B. Willard on November 17, 1887, and their two children both died before reaching maturity. Willis was a bookkeeper with the Michigan Trust Company. Eleanor was a charter member of the Grand Rapids Camera Club in 1899, became a life member and was most influential during the early years of the club. She achieved considerable recognition in artistic photography, her prints having been hung in various important exhibitions. In April of 1906 The Camera Club of Hartford, Connecticut, put on an "Exhibition of ... the work of The Women Photographers of America." Of the 156 photographs exhibited, six were by Eleanor. Nine of the 96 women who exhibited photographs at the national convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in July of 1910 were from Michigan, and Eleanor was one of them. Later in 1910 a photographic journal carried her article "On the Gullibility of the Amateur Photographer" and reproduced some of her photographs. In 1919 some of Eleanor's contact prints were kallitypes made by a printing-out process using paper sensitized with a ferric salt and silver nitrate and a developer containing borax and Rochelle salt. She was an organizer of the Grand Rapids Art Association, served as its second vice president and director of exhibits for fourteen years, and then as assistant to the director for three years until her health failed early in 1927. Eleanor died at her Grand Rapids home in December of 1927. One of her kallitypes is held by the William L. Clements Library at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

His parents emigrated from Germany and Daniel was born in Ontario in December of 1866, seventh of the eleven children of Charles and Elizabeth Willert. He remained on the family farm until he immigrated in 1888, and by 1896 he was a naturalized citizen of the United States. Willert & Paling cabinet photographs were from "...Carsonville and Lexington, Mich." Daniel was residing by himself in Richmond in 1900. Cora was born in Illinois to a mother from Pennsylvania in 1878. Her marriage to Daniel about 1902 to become Mrs. Cora Bell Willert was her first and his second. Their daughter Ermina (later Letha) was born in Indiana in 1903. Their son Ezra was born in Michigan in November of 1909, and he still was living with his parents in 1930. Cora was a widow by 1950, and she continued to live in Bay City for a decade or more.

| Her father emigrated from Canada and she was born Ada Belle Welch in Wisconsin on August 26, 1885, third of the nine children of John Ruben Welch and Elizabeth Ann (Ghagan) Welch. She grew up on her parents' farm in Chelsea Township of Taylor County, Wisconsin. In Chelsea Township on January 25, 1907, she married the Bert T. Williams who is profiled below. Ada sent a post card to her sister in September of 1909 on which she wrote: "... Have been in studio about a month and like it fine and dandy. Much better than teaching. Will send you some photos some fine day..." Ada gave birth on October 24, 1913, to Delbert Woodrow Williams, who usually went by his middle name. After the death of her husband in September of 1932, Ada continued to provide a home in Clintonville for her son. Woodrow died at Clintonville on October 23, 1972. | Bert was born in Pennsylvania to natives of Pennsylvania on January 26, 1882, the son of the physician F. F. Williams. His mother died, and about 1892 his father married a woman named Linnie who was born in Wisconsin in February of 1861. Bert's half-brother Elmer was born in Wisconsin in February of 1897. Ada, who is profiled above, was born in Wisconsin in August of 1885. She married Bert in January of 1907, and their son Woodrow was born in October of 1913. A postal "Birdseye View of Gladstone, Mich. - Photo by Williams" was dated in pencil June 19, 1910, and was "... From Mrs. Bert Williams." Another photo of Delta Avenue in Gladstone showed several buggies and three street cars, and its post card back was stamped: "Bert T. Williams, Photographer, Gladstone, Mich." in red ink. His most common mark was "By Williams" lettered on the negatives, and he used this on a great series of postal views of the crowded streets of Gladstone and the parade on Labor Day in 1911. He took these from different elevated positions, and one provided an excellent view of the sidelight and the large skylight of his studio. There was a photographer named Bert Williams in 1915 at Toronto, Ontario. Bert died at Clintonville on September 5, 1932. |           | 1 51 2155 ttttt 66 5 |

Charles was born in Michigan to a Canadian mother on December 15, 1885, second of the eight children of Joseph H. and Almeria Charleton (Huntley) Williams. He grew up on the family farm, and he became an average sized man with blue eyes and black hair. Harriet Elizabeth Adams was born at Lapeer, Michigan, on October 10, 1886, and she married Charles in 1905. Their sons were born in Michigan: Leroy in the spring of 1906, Ray in August of 1908, Garnet in 1911, Clare in June of 1916, and Charles in February of 1920. Charles A. Smith, the other principal of the Rembrandt Studio at West Branch, was a Standish, Michigan, photographer from 1913 until 1917. Both Charles and Harriet Williams died in Lee County, Florida.

His parents emigrated from Canada and Daniel was born on Mackinac Island on May 13, 1851, fourth of the five children of Stephen and Nancy Williams. He moved with his family when he was eight years old to Cheboygan County, where he attended the public schools and learned the cooper's trade from his father. He married Miss Cora Whitney, who died seven years later and before Daniel moved in 1875 to Beaver Island. There he met and married Mrs. Elizabeth (Whitney) Van Riper, the lighthouse keeper at Beaver Island harbor. Mrs. Van Riper was born on Mackinac Island on June 24, 1844, spent her early childhood on Beaver Island, and later attended the public schools at Traverse City. Her first husband, Clement Van Riper, was the lighthouse keeper at Beaver Island harbor from 1869 until he drowned in 1872, when Elizabeth was appointed his successor. In 1884 Elizabeth was transferred to the Little Traverse Light at Harbor Point. She attained a national reputation as author of A Child of the Sea and Life Among the Mormons. Prior to his partnership with Daniel, Bird Carpenter had a couple of years experience as a Harbor Springs photographer. Daniel was recognized as an artistic photographer, especially in the line of landscape photography, before he retired in 1911. Daniel and Elizabeth never had children, and they were living together at Charlevoix in 1920, 1928 and 1930. 1 3 1 3 3 1 3 3 3 3 3 3 m 3 3 1 1 3

Felton was born in Iowa on March 17, 1886, first of the five children of Stephen and Anna Williams. He was their only son, and he became a medium sized man with grey eyes and dark brown hair. Gertrude was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio in 1886, and she married Felton in 1907 or early in 1908. Their daughter Bessie was born in Michigan in February of 1917. "Williams Photo" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of Gagetown and Kingston, including bird's-eye and other views. Similarly "Photo By Williams" or "Williams Photo" was lettered on the negatives of post card photographs of Harbor Beach, including bird's-eye views of the lake front and the town, schools, commercial fishing, a railroad wreck in August of 1915, and construction of the pier for the harbor of refuge. Some of the cards were postmarked in 1916 and 1917. He was also selling musical instruments, art goods and photographic supplies at Harbor Beach in 1920. Bertha obtained a divorce and seems to have reverted to her maiden name of Neviens, and in 1930 she was providing in her Bay City home for her daughter Bessie Williams and two young male boarders.

Ross was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio in April of 1861, eldest of the five children of Calvin and Phoebe Williams. He grew up on a farm in Marion County, Kansas, and he visited there in 1898 and 1899. Among both his Rockford and Mount Pleasant cabinet photographs were groups of men and women with brass instruments. His Mount Pleasant cabinets also included a small boy standing by a large drum and a great studio pose of a tinsmith at his bench with his tools, some of his products, and even some trimmed off metal scraps on the floor. He was featuring photo buttons and custom picture framing in 1898. In April of 1899 he rented the front rooms formerly occupied as Dr. Goodsell's dental office and was having them made into a complete suite of photographic rooms. He advertised early in 1901: "Platino Prints make appropriate Presents. WILLIAMS has them - handsome copies of the world's masterpieces. Call at the studio and see these Pictures." In February of 1902 the work of transforming the building recently vacated by the Courier into the finest artistic studio in the region was in progress. Ross attended the Photographers' Association of America convention at Buffalo in August of 1902. The building housing his studio changed hands and Ross was obliged to move again. He expected to take a brief vacation, visit Kansas, and store his stock for only a few weeks, but it was late in January of 1903 before he could move into the suite in Ed Smithers' new brick block west of his former location. These new quarters were larger, lighter and better adapted for photography and business than any he had before. He advertised in April of 1903: "LATEST IDEAS IN PHOTOGRAPHS. I have removed to my new gallery and am better located than ever to make First-class Photos. R. H. WILLIAMS." Ross usually lived in a bachelor apartment adjoining his studio. When he failed to appear for breakfast, dinner and supper on May 18, 1908, friends found his door locked and used a ladder to enter his apartment through a window. They found him lying unconscious on the floor, and he died a few minutes later. He was survived by his father and a sister, both of whom lived thirty miles from Galena at Chetopa, Kansas.

His dentist father came from Pennsylvania and Sylvester was born in Ohio in November of 1843, fourth of the eight children of David and Mary Williams. Frederick C. Lutge, his partner in Detroit, still was a Detroit photographer in 1903. Sylvester was enumerated as married in 1880, when he was boarding with an Oakland family along with his three children. His son Charles was born in Nevada about 1868. His son Nathan and his daughter Flora were born in California between 1870 and 1873. Emma F. Walton was born in California to parents from Maine in December of 1868, second of the three children of David H. and Viola (Holda) Walton. Emma was a San Francisco enameller of photographs in 1880, and she married Sylvester in 1884 or early in 1885. Their sons were born in San Francisco: Walter in April of 1888, Lloyd in September of 1889, Percy in July of 1893, and Chester in August of 1895. Sylvester patented five photographic flash inventions during the 1890s, and he was enumerated as a manufacturer of molars in 1900. His sons Walter and Lloyd were enumerated as studio photographers in 1910. Sylvester died in San Francisco on September 22, 1912.

His father came from Connecticut and Edmund was born in New York State in February of 1825, fourth of the six known children of Isaac and Martha (Miller) Williamson. Some early records were for Edwin Williamson. He was lodging in 1850 at Tecumseh with the family of an older cooper. Edmund advertised during the summer of 1858: "WILLIAMSON'S PICTURE GALLERY, Osborne's Block. Miniatures taken on GLASS, IRON, LEATHER AND PAPER. Ambrotypes, Melainotypes, Leather and Paper Transfers, taken at 'Prices to suit the Times.' Satisfaction Warranted...." Her father came from Vermont and Lucy was born in New York State about 1832. She married Edmund about 1852 and their children were born in Tecumseh: George in 1853 or early in 1854, and Carrie in July of 1858. George probably died as a child. Edmund enlisted at Tecumseh in Company D of the Thirtieth Michigan Infantry on November 29, 1864, and he was mustered into the United States Army as a corporal on December 16, 1864. As the war ended, he was mustered out of the army at Detroit on June 30, 1865. Edmund applied in April of 1891 for an invalid pension based upon his Civil War service. He was a widower by 1900, and he died at Tecumseh in August of 1908.

Jacob was born in Ohio to natives of Ohio on May 30, 1867, the younger son of Abraham G. and Elmira Williamson. His brother Levi was six years older. Her father came from New York, and Maud was born in Michigan to a mother from Ohio April of 1876. She married Jacob about 1893, and their first five children were born in Ohio: Mamie in August of 1894, Lulu in February of 1896, Franklin in February of 1897, Violette in November of 1898, and William in November of 1899. The rest of their children were born in Michigan: Paul in 1902, Florence in March of 1905, Ernestine in July of 1909, Robert in 1910, and Marguerite in October of 1915. Jacob's "JFW" monogram was lettered on the negatives of many postal photographs, some of them postmarked in 1910, 1911 and 1912. They included scenes in Frankenmuth and Reese as well as many views of Vassar, where he recorded a parade on July 4, 1910, railroad wrecks on June 22, 1910, and October 5, 1911, the aftermath of the blizzard of February 22, 1912, and the flood in May of 1912. He advertised in 1913: "Photography in All its Branches, Amateur Work Finished, Picture Framing." Maud still was keeping house for Jacob and their son Robert in 1940. Jacob died on May 1, 1941, and burial was at Vassar.

His father came from England and William was born in India to an Irish mother on October 2, 1882, fifth of the twelve children of William Frederick Willin and Maria (Callahan) Willin. He became a tall slender man with grey eyes and brown hair. Her father came from Ireland and Edith was born in Scotland to a Canadian mother about 1887, fifth of the six children of George and Louise Linn. William and Edith both were living in the Woolwich borough of London when they married there on October 2, 1907. Their first children were born at Woolwich: Irene in 1909 and Bernard in 1911. The family immigrated in 1912, and their daughter Vera was born in Michigan within a year. They were living in 1920 at Gilbert, Minnesota, where William had had established a photographic business while maintaining the business in Greenland, 240 miles southeast of Gilbert. William was a naturalized citizen of the United States by 1930, when he was sharing his home with his 20-year-old son. He was enumerated as married at this time, though Edith was not to be found and Vera was living in Detroit with the family of one of his sisters. William was enumerated as divorced in 1940, when he was living with the family of his son Bernard.

Clarence was born in Michigan to parents from Ohio on January 1, 1869, first of the seven children of John Madison Willis and Elizabeth J. (Shearer) Willis. He grew up on the family farms. Florence was born in New York State to natives of New York in May of 1885, the younger daughter of Henry and Clara L. (Hall) Bockstanz. Her sister Edna Elizabeth Bockstanz was born in February of 1879. Florence married Clarence in 1900. It was the second marriage for Clarence. "TALLMAN LAKE, TALLMAN, MICH." was lettered on the negative of post card photographs. The message on one that was mailed in August of 1909 included: "... Clarence Willis was up & took a number of views on post cards..." Florence never had children, and something happened to her in the early 1920s. Her father came from Wisconsin, and Lydia was born in Nebraska to a mother from Illinois in 1883 or early in 1884. She married Clarence about 1923, and they still were together in 1940. Clarence died on July 29, 1947, and burial was at Long Beach.

His parents emigrated from England and Thomas was born in Michigan in June of 1856, first of the seven children of Thomas and Elizabeth A. Wills. Her parents emigrated from England, and Margaret was born in Michigan in July of 1856. She married an Englishman about 1879, and she gave birth to Bessie in March of 1882. Margaret brought along Bessie when she married Thomas in 1897 or early in 1898. Thomas and Margaret were sharing their home with his sister Elizabeth in 1920, when they were living next door to the photographer Victor F. Herman. Thomas was a widower by 1930, when he was living with his brother John.

| Thomas was born in Quebec or Vermont to a Canadian father and an English mother on January 22, 1844. Maria Elizabeth McCubbin was born in Ontario on June 4, 1845, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James McCubbin. She married Thomas about 1862 and their children were born in Ontario: Amanda about 1863, Charles about 1865, Samuel about 1868, Albert about 1872, Arta Victoria in December of 1875, and Thomas in July of 1878. Maria and the elder Thomas were divorced at Ionia early in 1884. Dora Madora Bell Gardner was born in Michigan to English parents in June of 1864, last of the nine children of Thomas and Maria (Churchill) Gardner. Dora married Thomas at Ionia on December 10, 1884. Their children were born in Michigan, Archibald (later Archie) in November of 1888, and Dora in December of 1891. Thomas filed a patent application on an Adjustable Photographic Shutter on May 9, 1903, and was granted Patent Number 741,205 on October 13, 1903. He and Rollin H. Stocoum filed as co-inventors of another Photographic Shutter on June 21, 1904, and were granted Patent Number 792,361 on June 13, 1905. Stocoum was a professional photographer from 1898 until 1903. Thomas died in Detroit on November 18, 1920, and Dora lived on in Michigan until her death about 1924. |           |   |

| Harlow's surname was spelled Wilson in most census reports and in the gazetteer, but it was Willson on photo mounts, in city directories, and on his death record. He was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan in November of 1865, eldest of the five children of William Henry Harrison (often Harry) Willson and Viola Minerva (Burdick) Willson. Victor G. Burdick may have been a cousin, since his surname is the same as that of Harlow's mother. He had no known professional photographic experience prior to or subsequent to his partnership with Harlow. Mabelle was born at Garfield, New York, on June 1, 1871, third of the six children of John Abram Newville and Ann Patience (Deming) Newville. She married Harlow at Boyne City on July 2, 1892, and their children were born in Michigan: Leo in March of 1893, Leetha in October of 1900, Lola in 1902, and Loton in 1907. Mabelle was keeping house for Harlow and their children in 1920, but the marriage did not last much longer. Sarah P. Newville was born in Michigan to a mother from Pennsylvania in 1865 or early in 1866. Since she and Mabelle had the same surname and were not siblings, they may have been cousins. Sarah married Harlow about 1926, and she was keeping house for him in 1940 with help from her sister Syla Newville. Harlow died at Petoskey on September 8, 1950, and burial was at Detroit on September 11, 1950. |           |     |

His father emigrated from England and Alfred was born at Hamilton, Ontario, on January 8, 1877, fourth of the six children of Joseph Hamilton Wilson and Barbara E. (Crossman) Wilson. He immigrated with his family in 1889, and he became a citizen of the United States when his father was naturalized. Her father emigrated from England and Irene was born in Detroit to a Scotch mother in January of 1880, first of the four children of John and Jennie S. Fry. She married Alfred at Detroit in 1900, and their daughters were born in Michigan: Irene in 1902, and Jean in December of 1918. Alfred was a charter member of the Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit, which was organized on February 11, 1921. At the incorporation of the A. R. Wilson Studios in 1921, Alfred was president, Wallace E. Janrow was vice president, and Judson M. Hawthorne was secretary-treasurer. In 1923, Mrs. Irene M. Wilson became vice president and Wallace E. Janrow was secretary-treasurer. Janrow held the same position with the Wilson-Boynton Company in 1930. Alfred died at Highland Park in 1961, and Irene lived on there until her death in 1968.

His father came from Pennsylvania, his mother came from Ohio, and Ari was born in Michigan on November 28, 1872, seventh of the eight children of Jonathan A. and Serena (Yoakum) Wilson. He grew up on the family farm, his mother died when he was eight years old, and Ari became a tall man with blue eyes and brown hair. He boarded in Lansing with artist and sometime photographer Samuel S. Riley. Her father came from New York and Hattie A. Walker was born in Michigan to an English mother in March of 1871. She married Ari about 1898, and they never had children. It was announced in the summer of 1898 that the new photographer in Cadillac, A. W. Wilson, would be in his photo rooms at Marion every Thursday. His purchase of the Lake City gallery from Arthur V. Harmer was reported in the spring of 1900. "WILSON" or "Photo by WILSON" was lettered on the negatives of post card photos of Lake City. Ari and Hattie both were enumerated as proprietors of the Lake City studio in 1910. They were sharing their home with Hattie's fifteen-year-old sister Anna in 1900, and with eleven-year-old Howard Robinson in 1920. Ari had a farm near Lake City in 1918 and 1920. He was a widower by 1930, when he was enumerated as a conservation officer for the state. Beatrice was born in Michigan about 1900, and by 1935 she was married to Ari.

Carlos was born in Quebec to parents from Vermont about 1833, the son of Nahum A. and Phallie R. (Slafter) Wilson. Her father came from Massachusetts and Esther was born in Vermont in 1834, fourth of the six children of Clark and Elizabeth White. She married Carlos on November 1, 1857, and they were sharing their home in 1860 with eight-year-old Malvina Wilson. Their daughters were born in Michigan: Ella Jeanette in February of 1861, Cecelia Almira in September of 1863, Phallie Lucy in November of 1866, and Ginerva L. in August of 1875. The assessor noted in May of 1864 that Carlos was a traveling photographer. Centerville became Caro in 1868. Carlos acquired title in March of 1885 to forty acres in Churchill Township of Ogemaw County and one hundred and twenty acres in Mentor Township of Oscoda County less than a mile south of the Au Sable River. His father emigrated from Canada and Charles was born at Merrill, Michigan, on March 3, 1880, fifth of the eight sons of Joseph Underwood Wilson and Sarah Jane (Holton) Wilson. Her father emigrated from Germany and Anna Marie Pernert was born to a mother from Ohio at Saint Louis, Michigan, on May 13, 1881, the daughter of John and Mary Elizabeth (Buckholz) Pernert. She married Charles on March 1, 1904, and their first two sons were born at Merrill, Michigan: Carl Edward in July of 1905, and Kenneth William in February of 1907. Their next four children were born at Saint Louis: Sarah Elizabeth in October of 1908, Ruth Marguerite in October of 1910, Norman Woodrow in May of 1913, and Robert Wilbur in October of 1915. Their youngest son was born in April of 1918 at Loxley, Alabama. "Chas. D. Wilson" was blind stamped in slanted script over a smaller "ST. LOUIS, MICH." into studio portraits with post card backs as well as into postal views of commercial streets and of people gathering at the sugar factory. "Charlie Wilson" was penciled on the backs of other post card photographs. Coincidentally, a photographer named Charles D. Wilson worked from 1860 to 1870 in St. Louis, Missouri. His father emigrated from Ireland and Daniel was born early in the summer of 1865 at Rome, New York, last of the seven children of Robert and Margaret Wilson. His father disappeared between 1860 and 1870, suggesting that he may have been a Civil War casualty, but no evidence of this has been found. His mother was raising her children on her own in 1870 and 1880, and in 1880 she was enumerated as a widow. Daniel never married, and in 1920 and 1930 he was lodging in rooming houses accommodating a dozen roomers.

Emmaline (sometimes Emma or Emeline) was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on April 29, 1883, the elder daughter of George L. and Julia Danforth. Her sister Marion was born in August of 1885. Emma attended a college for two years before she married the photographer Park T. Wilson at Ionia on October 19, 1908. Park is profiled below. They never had children. They were living with Emmaline's widowed mother in 1930, and Julia was living with them in 1935 and 1940. Park died in September of 1962 northwest of Ionia in Orleans Township, where Emmaline lived until her death at Belding on April 8, 1976.

His father emigrated from Ireland and Harold was born in Ontario on September 14, 1882, second of the five children of Andrew and Isabella Murdoch (Adam) Wilson. He came to Detroit with his family in 1895, and he became a citizen of the United States when his father was naturalized while Harold was a minor. Harold matured into a five feet eight inch slim man with blue eyes and black hair. Evelyn was born in Michigan to Canadian parents in 1885 or early in 1886, and she married Harold in 1909. Their children were born in Michigan: Ione Evelyn Wilson on April 16, 1910, Deane Wilson in February of 1915, and Clyde Wilson on August 25, 1923. George W. Hance & Company made scenic, architectural and commercial photographs, and Harold was one of the two principals of the company. Spooner & Wells specialized in automotive photography.

Her father came from New York, her mother emigrated from England, and Hattie A. Walker was born in Michigan in March of 1871. About 1898 she married Ari W. Wilson, who was a Cadillac photographer in 1898 and 1899, and a Lake City photographer from 1900 until 1927. Ari and Hattie both were enumerated as proprietors of the Lake City studio in 1910. They never had children, and Hattie undoubtedly played a more significant part in her husband's photographic business than is evidenced by this single observation. Hattie and Ari were sharing their home with Hattie's fifteen-year-old sister Anna in 1900, and with eleven-year-old Howard Robinson in 1920. Ari was a widower by 1930.

His father emigrated from Scotland and Clyde was born in Michigan on January 17, 1883, first of the four children of John Whitehead Wilson and Mary Elizabeth (Goodrich) Wilson. His siblings were born in Michigan: Bessie in October of 1885, Harold in October of 1887, Florence in July of 1890, and Russell in 1900 or early in 1901. Clyde became a tall man with brown eyes and dark hair. He was one of three Michigan students mentioned among the new arrivals at the Illinois College of Photography in the summer of 1903. He was consistently identified as J. Clyde Wilson except from 1908 to 1910, when the listings were for John C. Wilson. "COMPLIMENTS OF J. CLYDE WILSON, 48 UNIVERSITY BUILDING, PHONE MAIN 885-J. BETTER COMMERCIAL PHOTOGRAPHS" was press printed in gold ink at one end of the face of post cards, perpendicular to a photographically printed pastoral view of the tree lined banks of a meandering stream. One of these cards was sent to a Detroit man in November of 1911 with the message: "Mr. Martin: Your three enlargements are ready for you. Very Truly, J. C. W." Another was sent in September of 1912 with the message: "Dear Sir: Haven't forgot all about those Kodak Prints at our studio? They are all ready for you. J. C. Wilson, 48 University Bldg." Mary Florence Miner was born in Michigan to natives of Michigan on July 27, 1886, first of the six children of Simeon Louis Miner and Mary (Termote) Miner. Her four sisters and one brother were born between 1887 and 1900. Florence married Clyde on July 22, 1919, and they were living in 1920 with Clyde's parents. Their children were born in Detroit: Miner in 1920 or early in 1921, Marilyn in 1922 or early in 1923, Arthur in May of 1927, and Clyde in March of 1930. Florence died on January 27, 1970, and Clyde died on September 12, 1972.

Leon was born in Bushnell Township to natives of Michigan on April 2, 1891, third of the four children of Martin Edgar Wilson and Cora B. (Allchin) Wilson. His siblings were born in Michigan: Glenn in 1885, Clara Bell in 1888, and his brother Ora in 1894. Leon's mother died in February of 1900, and his father married Josephine J. Haysner in September of 1901. His half-sister Ella was born about 1905. Leon became a medium sized man with blue eyes and auburn hair. "LEON S. WILSON, Cedarlake, ACADEMY - Mich." was stamped on the post card backs of photographs, including a bird's-eye view of the town, a group of institutional looking buildings, and a group of young adults posed in front of one of the buildings. Leon probably attended the Cedar Lake Industrial Academy, which was a boarding school that opened in 1899 and was incorporated by the Seventh Day Adventists in 1902. The first tenth grade students graduated in 1907. The first twelfth grade graduates left the Cedar Lake Academy in 1920, and it is now called the Great Lakes Adventist Academy. Vivian Bernice Evans was born to natives of Michigan at Lowell, Michigan, on December 9, 1901, first of the four children of Joseph Jay Evans and Amy Diadema (Rogers) Evans. She was their only daughter. Vivian married Leon at Cedar Lake on May 19, 1921. She gave birth in Montcalm County to Clare Albert Wilson on January 3, 1924, and to Doris R. | Parker was born at Ionia to parents from Ohio on February 9, 1868, last of the five children of Benjamin F. and Mary J. (Manley) Wilson. He was identified as Parke F. Wilson by the gazetteers, and as Park T. Wilson by most other sources between 1900 and 1920. Emmeline A. Danforth was born in Michigan in April of 1883, and she married Park at Ionia on October 19, 1908. They never had children. Though she was only recorded as working with Park as a photographer in 1920, she undoubtedly played a significant part in his photographic business, and she is profiled above. Park characterized himself as the leading photographer in 1915, when he offered enlarging and copying. He used a block letter blind stamp: "PARK WILSON, IONIA, MICH." on four by ten inch post card weight panoramas as well as on post card photographs ranging from studio portraits to the 1918 Ionia High School football team. In 1920 he stressed photos with portrait values and work of quality. He and Emmeline were living with her mother in 1930, and Emmeline's mother was living with them in 1940. Parker died in Orleans Township northwest of Ionia on September 12, 1962. |           | 1 77 m1 77 11 74tt 66 11 77 |

His father came from New York and Ralph was born in Illinois to a mother from Maine on August 3, 1874, fifth of the six children of Watts D. and Nancy Jane (Gilbert) Wilson. He matured as a medium sized man with blue eyes and light hair. Her father came from Ohio and Gertrude R. Vance was born in LaSalle County, Illinois to a mother from Pennsylvania in August of 1876, the daughter of George W. and Anna D. (Poundstone) Vance. She married Ralph in LaSalle County on June 17, 1896, and their daughter Gladys was born in Illinois on December 20, 1897. Ralph's sale of the Ionia gallery to Rollin H. Stocum was reported in the fall of 1901. Something happened to Ralph's first marriage. Her father came from Illinois, and May was born in Michigan in 1882 or early in 1883. She married Ralph about 1906, and their children were born in Michigan: Robert in October of 1909, and Betty early in 1914. Robert was a music salesman for Ralph in 1930, and he was Ralph's business partner in 1940. Ralph, May and Robert lived together at Eugene in 1935.

His father came from Pennsylvania, his mother emigrated from England, and Robert was born in Illinois on June 23, 1854, third of the seven children of Benjamin Willard Wilson and Ann (Reynolds) Wilson. Her father came from New York State and Charity Kitchin Bacon was born in Ontario on October 31, 1855, last of the six children of Ira Howe Bacon and Mary (Ramsden) Bacon. She married Robert in Ontario in 1876, and she came to the United States in the same year. Their children were born in Michigan: Edith in July of 1878, Hope Ethel in June of 1880, Ora in August of 1882, Martha in August of 1885, DeWitt in March of 1893, and LaVerne in October of 1895. That Robert had taken over the Berryman gallery at Midland was reported early in 1901. Frederick Berryman had left Midland about 1895. Robert and Charity had an empty nest by 1920, but DeWitt and LaVerne remained single and had returned to their parents home by 1930. LaVerne was a veteran of World War I, and he still was with them in 1940. Robert died at Plymouth on September 17, 1942, and Charity died there on January 1, 1953.

Some of the early listings were for Russell A. Wilson. Russell was born in Canada to Canadian parents early in 1898. He immigrated in 1913, and he was naturalized a citizen of the United States in 1919. He was boarding in 1920 with John A. and Emma H. Henry. Emma's son, John W. Cates, also was doing photographic work in the studio of a photographer. Russell was boarding in 1930 with his widowed sister-in-law Genevieve Wilson and her sixteen-year-old daughter Mary, and Genevieve was doing his bookkeeping. By 1940 Russell and Genevieve were married, and Genevieve was his office assistant. Russell was enumerated as born in Michigan to Canadian parents in 1930 and 1940. He and Genevieve moved from Detroit to Nankin Township between 1935 and 1940.

His father emigrated from Denmark and Sherman was born in Michigan to a mother from New York on September 29, 1864, fourth of the five or more children of Thomas and Emeline Wilson. He was boarding with the Cheney family in 1880, and with his widowed mother from 1886 through 1890. Amanda Peterson was born in Illinois to Swedish parents in 1864 or early in 1865. When she married Sherman about 1895, she brought along her four-year-old daughter Florence and perhaps another child from her first marriage. Her brother Ralph and her daughter Florence were living with Amanda and Sherman in 1910. Something happened to this marriage, and about 1919 Sherman married again. His bride was Isabella, who was born in Illinois to a Canadian father and a Scotch mother in 1886. They were living in 1920 and 1930 with Isabella's widowed aunt, Christina Jamieson. Sherman was a widower by 1940, when he still was living with Christina Jamieson. Sherman retired prior to his death in Chicago on May 28, 1942.

One source states that George was born at Janesville, Wisconsin, on June 16, 1858, but all other records indicate that 2 1
he was born in New York State. He was the only son of New York natives Joel Elisha Winans and Sarah Eliza (Buel) 1 2
Winans. His sister Eva Louise Winans was born in New York State on April 7, 1851. George's father died at 2
Kalamazoo in April of 1870. Ida was born in Michigan to parents from New York in 1862 or early in 1863, the 2 1 daughter of David B. and Anna Merrill. She married George about 1879, and their daughter Mabel was born in 1
January of 1880. The three of them were living in June of 1880 with Ida's parents. Something happened to Ida, and 1
George married again about 1897. His bride was Mary (later Ione), who was born in Michigan to parents from New 1
York in March of 1874. Note that Mary was only six years older than George's daughter Mabel, who was living with 1 them in 1900. George was listed as the proprietor of the King Folding Canvas Boat Company from 1901 through 1 k

His parents emigrated from Sweden and Richard was born in Michigan on January 19, 1873, first of the five children of Lars and Mary (Swenson) Winberg. His two sisters and two brothers were born in Michigan between October of 1875 and October of 1883. Richard became a tall slender man with light blue eyes and light brown hair. He was working the family farm in 1910 with help from his brother Benjamin, his sister Minnie and their widowed mother. Her father emigrated from Norway, her mother emigrated from Sweden, and Carrie was born in Michigan in 1887. She married first when she was eighteen, and she married Richard about 1911. Their children were born in Michigan: Virginia in 1912, Leona in 1914, and Kenneth in December of 1926. The Manistee County Directory for 1913 included: "WINBERG, RICHARD V, Photographer, Portraits, Post Cards, Penny Pictures, Enlarging and View Work, Developing and Finishing for Amateurs, Bell Phone, Onekama, Mich." Richard was identified as the Onekama village clerk in 1926, 1928, 1930, 1936, 1940 and 1945, and he was enumerated in 1930 as a laborer at odd jobs. The Winberg Studio and Richard's home both were at 5068 Main Street in Onekama in 1949 and 1952. Carrie still was keeping house for Richard in 1954.

His father came from Massachusetts and Francis was born at Poultney, Vermont, on July 14, 1832, first of the five children of Silas and Elvira (Ward) Winchester. He crossed the plains with an ox team from St. Louis to Sacramento in 1852. Ida K. Bonebrake was born in Iowa in March of 1844, and she married Francis in Coos County, Oregon, on April 28, 1866. James H. Nason also was a principal of F. E. Winchester & Company. The company occupied the same rooms Nason had used as a gallery, at the corner of Woodward and Jefferson Avenues. Some cartes de visite were from Winchester's Photograph & Ambrotype Rooms, and on others Francis employed the same language used by Nason: "... Cheapest and best place in the city. Photographs only $1.50 per Doz. All work warranted to give satisfaction. N. B.- The only Gallery in Detroit where the celebrated Sarony Rest and Posing Machine is used. The above combines beauty, style, grace and ease to our pictures. Negatives preserved." Ida gave birth in Oregon to Earl R. Winchester in February of 1875, and to Ernest Winchester in February of 1876. Francis advertised in October of 1875: "PHOTOGRAPHS. F. E. Winchester HAVING THE LATEST AND MOST improved apparatus used in the Photographic art, is now prepared to finish all work in the very best style, such as – EXTRA ENAMEL FINISH, CAMEO ENAMEL FINISH, MEDALLION ENAMEL FINISH, REMBRANDT ENAMEL FINISH At $4 per dozen. The only Gallery in Coos County doing first class work....." Then he advertised a month later: "Reduction in prices to suit the hard times. I will make the Burnished Photograph for $3 per doz. Ambrotypes, two on a plate, for fifty cents, or four for one dollar....." Francis was the first photographer to establish a gallery at Walla Walla. He was a widower by 1910, when he was living with the family of his son Earl. Francis died at Earl's home in Seattle on November 20, 1914, and interment was at Spokane.

Simon was born at Saint Albans, Maine, to natives of Maine on August 29, 1826, first of the seven children of Joshua and Anna (Osborn) Wing. He entered the daguerreotype business about 1847. Mary Elliot Merrill was born at Saint Albans to natives of Maine on January 14, 1830, the younger child of Joseph and Mary (Bigelow) Merrill. Mary married Simon at Waterville on November 23, 1852, and two of their children were born there: Annie about 1857, and Harvey about 1859. Their daughter Mary was born in Massachusetts in 1870 or early in 1871. Simon was living at Waterville in December of 1860 when he was granted Patent Number 30,850 covering Improvements in Photographic Cameras. He had moved to Boston, his home for many years, by 1863 when he was granted Patent Number 40,302 covering Photographic Card Mounts for pictures taken on metallic plates. "Patent'd Oct. 13, 1863, S. Wing, 290 Washington St., Boston" was printed on mounts below oval openings behind which both tintypes and paper prints were secured with pasters. His Patent Number 78,408 issued on May 26, 1868, for Improvements in Multiplying Cameras. These cameras used four or nine lenses and a movable plate holder to obtain up to 36 images on a full plate. "Made with Wing's Patent Multiplying Camera ONLY At ..." was printed on carte de visite sized tintype mounts from many regions of the country. Simon's operations in Boston, Cambridge, Charlestown and Worcester, Massachusetts, were covered thoroughly by the opus cited. Thomas L. Parker was in charge of Wing's Cheap Gallery in Detroit about 1865. Cartes de visite were produced by Wing & Johnston's Gem Gallery in Grand Rapids. Wing's Photograph & Ferrotypes Rooms in Grand Rapids turned out tintypes in 5 by 3 inch and carte de visite sized paper sleeves as well as albumen prints on card and cabinet mounts, and advertised in 1874: "By the aid of our Patent Duplicating Camera, the best work is done at lowest prices. Everything in stock to supply the trade...." Some Grand Rapids employees were James L. Merrill, photographer in 1868; Herbert L. Bragg, photographer from 1873 to 1875 and proprietor in 1877; and George B. Osborn, photographer in 1876, proprietor in 1878 and successor from 1879 to 1887. "Happy New Year, Jan. 1, 1875." was printed around the oval opening for a tintype on some Detroit mounts from S. Wing. The Detroit gallery was managed by Bennett G. Allen in 1872 and by Joseph S. Simonds from 1873 to 1875. Tintypes from the Old Wing Gallery at 214 Woodward Avenue in Detroit were the work of the successor, Joseph S. Simonds. "S. WING'S Ferrotypes & Photograph Rooms, 23 Front Street, Monroe, Mich." was printed on stickers on the back of 7 by 5 inch tintypes. "Wing's Multiplying Camera. Secured by Southworth's reissued patent dated Sept. 25, 1860, extended April 10, 1869, and Wing's patents, dated Dec. 4, 1860, and May 26, 1868. Legally used only at our Rooms, 23 Front St., Monroe, Mich. - Just the thing for quick working for children and others who cannot sit still, and doing best work at low prices. Every customer can rely upon the most respectful and kind attention. C. Chadbourn, Operator." was printed on some card photograph mounts. "S. WING'S Ferrotypes & Photograph Rooms, 23 Front Street, Monroe, Mich. Pictures finely finished in Ink, Oil, and Water Colors. E. J. PHIPPEN, Operator." was printed on labels stuck on the back of other card mounts. "A Photograph of Gen. CUSTER Given to every one having pictures taken at Wing's Gallery, -Photographs or Gems. Choice of 8 x 10, Cab or Card size. 23 Front street, Monroe, Mich. B. D. JACKSON, Operator." was printed in a Monroe newspaper about 1875. Jacob L. Judd was the manager of Wing's Muskegon gallery. Simon lost $3000.00 in the Chicago fire of October 9, 1871, and was without insurance. He traveled from Boston to attend a meeting after the fire, and despite his heavy losses, contributed $100.00 worth of camera tubes, camera boxes, chairs, &c., to help hard hit Chicago photographers resume their work. Some of his patrons at 52 Canal Street in Grand Rapids were African-American. By 1880 Simon was no longer a factor in Michigan photography, though George Osborn was still referring to his predecessor in 1883 advertising. Simon's wife Mary died at Saint Albans in 1885, and Simon was living in the Boston suburb of Charlestown in 1887, when he was granted Patents 361,387 and 361,388 for Photographic Camera Lens Adjustments and Plate Holders. He was the candidate of the Socialistic Labor party for president of the United States in 1892. Simon died at Charlestown, Massachusetts, on February 1, 1911.

| Mary Elliot Merrill was born at Saint Albans, Maine, to natives of Maine on January 14, 1830, the younger child of Joseph and Mary (Bigelow) Merrill. Her mother died two weeks later, her father soon married Sarah Jane Bullen, and by 1849 Mary had six half-siblings. Mary married Simon Wing at Waterville on November 23, 1852, and two of their children were born there: Annie about 1857, and Harvey about 1859. Their daughter Mary was born in Massachusetts in 1870 or early in 1871. Both Harvey and his father were enumerated as photographers in 1880. Mary Elliot (Merrill) Wing died in 1885 at Saint Albans, Maine. |      |   |

| James was born at Tyrone, Pennsylvania, on November 19, 1866, probably the son of John and Mary Wingard. Her father came from New York State and Eva Evangeline Corwin was born at Ypsilanti, Michigan, on August 7, 1869, second of the nine children of Amos Bird Corwin and Sarah Jane (Felt) Corwin. She married James at Wayne, Michigan, on November 24, 1887. Eva gave birth to Mary Edna Wingard at Huntington, West Virginia, on October 23, 1892. Their other children were born at Tyrone, Pennsylvania: Francelia Wingard on September 21, 1894, and William Amos Wingard on December 10, 1902. "WINGARD STUDIO, Grayling, Mich." was blind stamped into the lower corner of post card photographs with subject matter ranging from street scenes, factories, hunting camps, fishermen, a burning school and a locomotive in the snow to Chief Shoppenagon, children with flags and wreaths, a family camping and a standing man whose white beard more than reached the floor. Anthony J. Trudeau succeeded his partnership with James at Ithaca about 1926, was a Midland photographer in 1930, and seems to have been a Grayling photographer by 1940. James died on February 23, 1926, and Eva died at Grayling on September 12, 1945. Their son William was a Michigan photographer at Portland in 1925, at Three Rivers from 1926 to 1928, at Saginaw in 1930, and at Ypsilanti in 1939 and 1940. |           |     |

His father emigrated from Switzerland, his mother emigrated from the Prussian region of Germany, and Edward was born in Detroit on January 30, 1869. He was fifth of the six children of Wendolin and Caroline (Schultheis) Winiker, and he was their elder son. Her father came from the state of New York and Katherine was born at Corunna, Michigan, to a mother from Wisconsin on November 24, 1868, second of the seven children of James Monroe Goodell and Helen Frances (Hosmer) Goodell. Katherine married Edward in Wayne County, Michigan, on August 30, 1898. They had no children until 1913, when their daughter Wanita was born in Texas. Edward died in Saint Louis, Missouri, on December 1, 1930. Katherine lived on at Richmond Heights until her death there on June 9, 1943.

Adelbert was born in Schenectady, New York, to natives of New York in April of 1857, fifth of the six children of Silas and Harriet Winn. His siblings were born in New York State: Elvira about 1845, Lewis about 1849, Harmon about 1852, Alvin about 1854, and Eddy about 1865. Adelbert grew up on the family farm, and he married Sarah M. Van Deusen on October 17, 1882. Since Sarah was his photographic partner about 1895, she is profiled below. Sarah and Adelbert had two sons and a daughter born in Michigan between 1883 and 1896. Adelbert died at Manistique, and Sarah died there in 1943.

- Sarah was born in North Greenbush Township of Rensselaer County, New York, to natives of New York on March 23, 1861, fourth of the five children of John R. and Abigail (Duntz) Van Deusen. Her siblings all were born in New York State: Esther in 1854, Martha in 1857, Seymour in 1858, and Mary in 1866. Sarah seems to have lived in North Greenbush township until she married Adelbert H. Winn on October 17, 1882. She gave birth in Michigan to Earl in September of 1883, to Vida May in March of 1891, and to Ian in July of 1896. All three of their children still were living with Adelbert and Sarah in 1910, when Earl and Vida May were employed and Ian was a student. Ian still was at home though employed in 1920, when Earl had married a young lady named Elma and had brought her to live with his parents. Sarah and Adelbert had an empty nest in 1930. Sarah evidently was a widow when she died at Manistique in 1943.

Winsor, Lemuel

- Gilpin County, Colorado, miner ..... 1880 1
Champion PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1888-1891 m
Tilt Cove, Newfoundland, PHOTOGRAPHER ..... 1906 2
- Lemuel was born at Tilt Cove, Newfoundland, on September 22, 1857, last of the six children of Solomon and Susan (Noble) Winsor. His two brothers and three sisters were born in Newfoundland between 1846 and 1855. Lemuel went to work in the mines at Tilt Cove when he was nine years old. He mined in Colorado for a while a decade later, and he returned to Newfoundland in the early 1880s. Elizabeth Jane Butler was born at Clarke's Beach, Newfoundland, on August 15, 1864, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Butler. She married Lemuel at Tilt Cove on June 8, 1882. Their first four sons were born in Champion, Michigan: Frederic on January 16, 1885, Lemuel on June 9, 1887, Arthur on July 15, 1889, and Herman on August 29, 1891. Lemuel was reported to have engaged in mining in Michigan, so this is probably what he was doing at Champion before he opened a photograph gallery there. "... Life Size Portraits in Ink, Water-Color, Pastel and Oil. Duplicates of this Picture can be had at any time." was printed on many of Lemuel's cabinet mounts, including one of a dog sitting beside two birds in separate cages. Lemuel returned from Champion to Newfoundland, where he was a photographer successively and successfully in the Green Bay district, at Saint John's, at Tilt Cove, and at Bay Roberts. Elizabeth gave birth at Tilt Cove in October of 1894 to George, and he died there in June of 1895. She gave birth at Saint John's in October of 1897 to Susannah, who died there in April of 1899. Elizabeth then gave birth at Tilt Cove to Walter on July 5, 1899, to Clifford on August 17, 1901, and to Bert on October 15, 1903. Lemuel went to the western coast of Newfoundland on a prospecting tour in September of 1918. The Newfoundland Railway train on which he was a passenger left the tracks just west of Mount Moriah and plunged over a trestle. One person was killed, and Lemuel received serious injuries from which he never recovered. He lived for another six years, and he died at Bay Roberts, Newfoundland, on October 25, 1924. He was survived by his widow, seven sons, and one adopted daughter. His widow Elizabeth died at Corner Brook, Newfoundland, on November 16, 1942.

He was born Francois Xavier Wintemberg at New Dundee, Ontario, to natives of Ontario on October 21, 1877, third of the four children of Francois Xavier Wintemberg and Elizabeth (Lederman) Wintemberg. He became a tall man with brown eyes and hair that later turned gray. Her father came from Ohio and Lola Anina Swan was born at Jerauld, South Dakota, to a mother from Iowa on January 6, 1887, first of the four children of Julius Aidin Swan and Clara Belle (Walters) Swan. She married Francis at Pipestone, Minnesota, on November 2, 1906. Lola was working as a clerk in a Spokane photographic studio in 1911, and as a nurse with a private practice in January of 1920. Their daughter Lillian was born in South Dakota in April of 1920. The change from 127 to 425 Columbia Street during 1920 was due to universal revisions in the Detroit numbering system, rather than to relocation. Francis was sometimes identified as Francois, and after 1926 usually was listed as Frank X. Wintemberg. Lola was working as a private nurse again in 1940, and she died on September 17, 1962. Francis died in December of 1973 at Alma, Michigan.

His parents emigrated from Germany and Henry was born in Grand Rapids on January 1, 1877, sixth of the seven children of Frank S. and Elizabeth (Snow) Winterhalter. His younger sister lived only from September of 1879 until September of 1881, and his eldest brother died in June of 1882. Henry became a tall slender man with blue eyes and light hair. Lettie C. Hastings was born at Lowell, Michigan, to natives of Michigan on September 30, 1882, last of the four children of John Q. and Caroline C. (Washburn) Hastings. She married Henry in Grand Rapids on December 30, 1899, and they divorced about 1903. Her parents emigrated from Ireland and Catherine "Kate" Furey was born in Peoria County, Illinois, on July 7, 1871, third of the five children of John Michael Fury and Bridget (Padden) Furey. She married Henry at Saint Paul, Minnesota, on June 27, 1905, and the marriage did not last. Her father came from New York and Sarah "Sadie" Ida Sila was born to a mother from Minnesota at La Crosse, Wisconsin, on January 6, 1881, second of the five children of John Robert Sila and Catherine (Nagle) Sila. She married Henry in 1909 in Hennepin County, Minnesota. Their sons were born in Saint Paul: John Andrew Winterhalter on June 30, 1912, and Henry John Winterhalter on June 22, 1915. Theodore was born at Bromberg in the Prussian region of Germany in November of 1865, the son of Karl and Rosa (Prill) Wirsing. His sister Julia was born three years later, and the family immigrated in 1872. Theodore was living with his parents in 1880, and he became a United States citizen when his father was naturalized in 1883. Anna Tuin was born in Norway about 1869, and she was brought to the United States in 1880. She married Theodore at Muskegon on July 7, 1890, and their son Donald was born at Whitehall in Muskegon County on April 27, 1891. This marriage did not last, and Donald went with his mother who never remarried and who described herself as a widow in 1920. Theo's gallery was in the Ripley Block at Montague in 1891, and he lived across the river at Whitehall in 1891 and 1893. Her parents came from New York State, and Lillian was born in Michigan in January of 1865. She married Theodore late in 1899 or early in 1900, and she was living alone at Whitehall in June of 1900, when Theodore was boarding in a hotel out at Annandale. Lillian soon joined him, and they were together in 1905, 1910, through the 1920s and in 1930. Theodore sailed from San Francisco on SS Lurline to Honolulu in May of 1933, spent nine days in Hawaii, then returned to San Francisco on SS Malolo early in June. He traveled by himself in both directions. Theodore died at Bellingham on September 12, 1938, and burial was back in Whitehall, Michigan.

Frank was born at Ilmajoki in Finland on May 21, 1893, eldest of the five sons of John and Sanna Wirtanen. He immigrated with his parents and his brothers John and Toivo in 1905. His younger brothers were born in Michigan: Elias in 1905, and Orme in 1906. Frank became a short man with brown eyes and brown hair. George Premo, Junior, and Frank formed a photographic partnership about 1915. Their business was conducted for several years from a small building behind the Finnish Temperance Hall at Amasa in Hematite Township. Frank was single in 1917 and 1920, when he was supporting his widowed mother and his two youngest brothers. He was married by the time he died in Hematite Township on February 26, 1926.

His father served from March of 1861 until March of 1862 in Company G of the Seventh New York Cavalry. Burton was born at Lockport, New York, to natives of New York on June 12, 1865, first of the five children of Alfred Hewitt Wisner and Jane (Porter) Wisner. Lydia was born in Michigan in January of 1863, and she married Burton about 1883. Their daughter Pearl was born in January of 1885. The photographer in Ortonville, eleven miles northeast of Holly, was identified only by the last name. Burton was enumerated twice as a photographer for the 1900 census: on June 1 with his parents in Crawford County, and on June 18 with his wife and daughter at Holly. His wife Lydia became his photographic successor in Holly. Burton was described as retired from Bell Telephone Company and as a widower when he died in Petoskey, Michigan, on May 28, 1948. His school teacher father emigrated from the Bavarian region of Germany, and his mother emigrated from the Prussian region of Germany. He was born Otto Ludwig Wiessbek in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on September 8, 1878, the son of Ludwig and Emiele (Bukman) Wiessbek. His sister Hulda was born in Louisiana two years earlier. Otto seems to have been the partner of John N. Putz in a rural Lutheran school in 1900. Her parents emigrated from Germany and Barbara was born in Michigan in 1874. She married Otto about 1901 and their children were born in Michigan: Clemens about 1902, Esther about 1904, Harold early in 1906, Roland in January of 1910, and Loretta in 1912. Otto advertised in June of 1906: "A Little Better and Nicer - Is the universal verdict in regard to our pictures. We Make Pictures: DAINTY, ARTISTIC, NATURAL PICTURES. Let us make some of that kind for you. Wissbeck's Art Studio." Miss Gertrude Draggoo worked four months in Otto's gallery early in 1907 before attempting suicide because of rumors detrimental to her reputation. "St. Philomena's Church, Beal City Wissbeck" was lettered on a negative from which post card photographs were printed. Some were mailed in August of 1907. "WISSBECK, MT. PLEASANT" was embossed into a post card photograph of a barn destroyed by a wind storm, and "JULY 2, 1909" was printed on the negative from which it was printed. On Saturday, July 10, 1909, Otto opened a modern studio in the building he had just completed on the corner of Washington and Broadway, and gave pretty framed post cards of local scenes to visiting ladies. The gallery was called a creditable addition to the city, and Otto was said to have built up a splendid business in the little over four years that he had been in Mount Pleasant. Barbara was a widow by 1920, when she and her children were living in Harbor Beach. She and three of her children still were at Harbor Beach in 1930.

John was born in Ingham County, Michigan, to parents from New York on September 24, 1872, the son of John H. and Julia (Aiken) Witbeck. He grew into a tall man with brown eyes and black hair. Mary was born in Michigan in 1874, and she married John in 1899 or early in 1900. They never had children. John's purchase of the Mason photographic business of Charles W. Van Slyke was reported in the fall of 1899. By 1918 he had lost the index and second finger of his right hand. He became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers' Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921. John was characterized as a retired photographer with a wife named Mary when he died at Petoskey, Michigan, on March 29, 1948. Burial was in nearby Boyne City.

Arthur was born in Michigan in June of 1871, second of the three sons of James Elias Withey and Minerva (Frost) Withey. His brothers were born in Michigan: Herbert in 1867, and Wilbur in December of 1873 at Brighton. Herbert died in 1885, and their mother Minerva died in 1887. Lillian was born in Genesee County on March 5, 1872, the daughter of William and Jennie Birdsall. She married Arthur at Flint on April 14, 1895, and they still were together in 1897. Lillian lived on at Flint until March of 1950, but Arthur was enumerated as single in 1900 when he was boarding by himself in a Millersburg hotel. Carrie Hazel Graves was born on May 12, 1904, at Bemidji, Minnesota, the daughter of Herbert and Mary Rosina (McMillen) Graves. She married Arthur at Centralia, Washington, on November 17, 1920. Carrie gave birth to Arlene Minerva Withey at Tenino, Washington, on August 18, 1922. Arthur died in 1930 at Spokane, Washington.

His parents came from New York and Chester was born in Michigan in July of 1857, fourth of the six known children of Elmer and Caroline Withington. Her father emigrated from Ireland and Clara was born in Michigan to a mother from West Virginia in November of 1861. She married first about 1881, and her daughter Mabel was born in Missouri in April of 1883. When Clara married Chester about 1896 she brought along Mabel, who adopted the Withington surname. "Taken at the Baby Fair, Sept. 2nd, 1893, - C. R. Withington, Burlington, Mich." was printed on the back of some cabinet mounts. Chester probably worked at Burlington into 1895. The listing in the Steuben County Gazetteer was for "C. R. Worthington." Chester's purchase of the Hillsdale gallery from Louis A. Jones was reported in the summer of 1899. Note that his daughter was identified as an assistant photographer in 1900, and that his wife was a photographer in 1901. He advertised locally in 1901: "WHEN calling on your friends in the city it will pay you to make a visit to the Finest Photo Rooms in town. The display of pictures will more than pay for your time. WITHINGTON, 76 N. Howell St." Chester produced stereo views, including one with the title: "Coming to the fair, Hillsdale, Oct. 2nd, 1902." The opening of Chester's branch gallery at Homer was announced late in 1902, and the opening of his Tekonsha branch was reported in the spring of 1903. "C. R. Withington, Hillsdale, Mich." was stamped on the post card back of a photo with "The Old Dam Withington" lettered on its negative. "Main Street in Hillsdale. Taken by Mr. Withington, Photographer, Oct-19-1906" was written below the photographic image on a post card. "Withington" was lettered on the negative of a postal photograph of the crowd on Burlington's main street celebrating July 4, 1910. On succeeding pages, the 1940 Directory listed Chester and Clara as a couple, and Clara as a widow.

His parents emigrated from Germany in 1869 and Herman was born at Stratford, Ontario, on January 26, 1870. He was fifth of the six children of Albert and Amelia Witte. Her parents emigrated from Germany and Mary was born in Pennsylvania in April of 1875. She married Herman about 1895. Their sons were born in Michigan: Harold in July of 1897, Ralph (later Lester and finally Leslie) in February of 1900, Louis in 1903, and Alton (later Allen) in 1906. Herman left Leslie in charge of the Petoskey studio and took his wife and their two youngest sons down to Grand Rapids for a while about 1920. H. R. Witte & Son advertised in 1922 as "Portrait & Commercial Photographers. Amateur Finishing, Enlarging and Colored Work...." The Northern Studio ad in 1930 was: "Portrait & Commercial Photographers. Enlarging and Colored Work, Amateur Kodak-Film Finishing 6 Hours Service, Souvenirs...." Herman died at Petoskey on October 15, 1966.

Leslie was born at Petoskey on February 12, 1900, second of the four sons of Herman R. and Mary Witte. In the 1900 census he was identified as Ralph E. Witte, and ten years later he was called Lester Witte. He became a short slender man with brown eyes and brown hair. Her father came from New York and Lillian A. Ballou was born in Michigan to a mother from Ontario in 1905, last of the seven children of Charles Mason Ballou and Hannah (Clark) Ballou. She married Leslie early in 1929, and their sons were born in Petoskey: Lennox in November of 1929, and Randall on November 13, 1934. Lillian died on November 27, 1934. Ruth Pearl Odell was born at Boyne City, Michigan, on May 26, 1917, the daughter of Charles Arthur Odell and Elsie F. (Bailey) Odell. She married Leslie not long after he became a widower. Their children were born at Petoskey: William in September of 1935, Mary in May of 1941, Donald in December of 1942, Ruth about 1945, and Charles about 1953. Please see the entry above for examples of advertising by Leslie and his father. Leslie apparently worked in the telephone business concurrently with his participation in the photography business, for he was enumerated in 1930 as a morse operator for the telephone company, and in 1940 as a toll tester for the telephone company. Leslie died on March 16, 1976, and burial was in Greenwood Cemetery at Petoskey.

Charles was born in January of 1841 in Hanover, Germany, eldest of the five children of Charles F. and Johanna Wittig. Emma was born in Austria in 1849 or early in 1850, and she married Charles about 1868. They had three children: Ella born in Pennsylvania about 1869, Adolph born in Ohio about 1872, and Otto born in Indiana in March of 1878. In 1878 Charles had the same address as photographer Gottfried C. Koehler. “Wittig, Over Manistee National Bank” was printed on some cabinet mounts. Charles was succeeded in Manistee by Richard E. Scharz. Emma left Charles with her children early in the 1880s. Susan R. Stirnmitz was born in Pennsylvania on May 3, 1863, and she married Charles about 1884. Their daughters were born in Indiana: Emma in June of 1886, Lottie in April of 1888, and Margaret (later Garnet) in March of 1891. Their sons were born in Michigan: Henry in January of 1893, and William in September of 1895. Their residence was in Green Bay in 1905. Wayside is about twenty miles south of Green Bay. Charles died at Green Bay on September 24, 1910. Susan lived on at Green Bay until her death on November 25, 1924.

His father came from New York, and Chester was born at Calmar, Iowa, to a mother from Michigan on February 27, 1872. He was eldest of the four children of Joseph T. and Julia (Van Camp) Wixson, and their only son. For a time he attended Lawrence University at Appleton, Wisconsin. He managed the gallery at Gladstone, while Joseph managed the one at Escanaba. Father and son were also somewhat engaged in the real estate business. Her father came from New York and Rose Adelle Bishop was born at Escanaba on June 28, 1874, fourth of the seven children of Charles Wesley Bishop and Florence Jane (Brotherton) Bishop. She married Chester on August 21, 1872, and their daughter Marian was born in Delta County, Michigan, on September 8, 1897. Their other daughters were born at Rhineland, Wisconsin: Rozelle on June 6, 1899, and Maude on March 26, 1904. Despite his age, Chester served in the armed forces of the United States during World War I. He and Rose were residents of Arroyo Grande Township from 1930 until their deaths: Chester on June 23, 1940, and Rose on June 11, 1947.

His father emigrated from Ontario and George was born on January 8, 1845, in Steuben County, New York, ninth of the twelve children of Jesse and Rebecca (Sorter) Wixson. Jesse moved his family a couple of years later to a farm in Lexington Township, where his brother Townsend had an adjacent farm. On October 6, 1864, George S. Wixson and his brother Joseph T. Wixson enlisted at Lexington for three years in Company I of the reorganized Third Michigan Infantry. Joseph was 24 while George claimed to be 20 years old. They were mustered into service on October 8, and they both deserted at Pontiac on October 14, 1864. "G. S. Wixson, Artist." was added, and "J. T. Wixson" was crossed out by over-printing on some Whitehall card photograph mounts. Olive Marie Goodwin was born in Michigan to parents from New York on October 16, 1854, third of the seven children of George Henry Goodwin and Catherine Ann (Rosegrant) Goodwin. She married George at Grand Rapids, Michigan, on December 24, 1878. Olive gave birth in April of 1880 to a son that did not survive. George advertised locally throughout 1884: "... Fine work a specialty. Picture Frames of all descriptions. Copying and Enlarging done to order. Stereoscopic views for sale. Work done indoors or outside." His ad in the gazetteer for 1885 was: "... Only first-class work done. Viewing in all parts of the Northern Country promptly attended to. Copying and Enlarging. Views for sale portraying life in the Michigan Woods. Game Pictures, Lumber Camps, &c., &c...." Wixson & Robb advertised in 1894: "Outside Work Solicited. Copying and Enlarging done to Any Size. Frames always on hand." Charles Robb was his partner in Croswell, and succeeded the partnership when George returned to the family homestead to care for his blind father and aging mother. George died at Croswell on July 17, 1896, survived by both of his parents. Olive married Joseph G. Bain about 1915, but by 1930 she was again a widow. She died at Danville, Illinois, on February 11, 1938, and her body was returned to Croswell for burial.

His father emigrated from Ontario and Joseph was born in Steuben County, New York, on May 29, 1840. He was seventh of the twelve children of Jesse and Rebecca (Sorter) Wixson, and he came with his family to Michigan in 1846. Sarah was born in England in 1840, fifth of the eight children of Robert and Sarah (Eveley) Maynard. She married Joseph on March 16, 1862, and their son Albion Fremont Wixson was born on September 23, 1862. On October 6, 1864, Joseph and his brother George S. Wixson enlisted at Lexington for three years in Company I of the reorganized Third Michigan Infantry. They were mustered into service on October 8, and they both deserted at Pontiac on October 14, 1864. "Negatives Preserved six months. J. T. Wixson, PHOTOGRAPHER, Lexington, Mich. Card Pictures made from old Daguerreotypes or Ambrotypes in plain or vignette styles. Pictures taken in all kinds of weather, and put up in the neatest style. Frames kept on hand for sale and made to order." was printed on cartes de visite. Julia Etta Van Camp was born in Sanilac County on July 5, 1852, first of the two children of Ezra John Van Camp and Adaliza Jane (Newcomb) Van Camp. Her brother Milton was born in May of 1857. Julia was a servant in the Wixson household while Sarah was pregnant with William, who was born at Lexington on July 9, 1870. Sarah soon obtained a divorce and remained in Lexington with her sons, while Joseph took Julia and headed west. Joseph did some farming and lumbering in northeastern Iowa, where Julia gave birth to Chester on February 27, 1872. "J. T. Wixson, Photographer, Whitehall. All kinds of old Pictures copied and enlarged to any size, and finished in all styles. I keep constantly on hand Frames of all sizes, and sell at cost. Negatives preserved for one year." was printed on card photograph mounts. On some of these, "J. T. Wixson," was crossed out and "G. S. Wixson, Artist." was added by a second printing. Julia gave birth in Michigan to Tina in 1874 or early in 1875, to Lillian in September of 1877, and to Maud in August of 1878. Joseph opened a photograph gallery over the Grand Haven post office in 1877. Wixson & Edwin P. Baker specialized in solar printing for the trade and photographed groups of students outside their school. Joseph was at Milwaukee for the fourth annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America in August of 1883. "McCourt" was crossed out on the back of some of the stereo views of deer hunting which were imprinted: "Vicinity of _____. We come from Wixson & McCourt's Double Galleries, Escanaba, Mich. Where all Kinds and Sizes of Picture Work are Finished in the Latest Styles of the Art. A Large Stock of Views on Hand." One Escanaba cabinet photograph was of a couple in a horse drawn sleigh in front of Joseph's gallery. "J. T. Wixson, The Artist, Ground Floor Gallery Corner Wells Avenue and Elmore Street, opposite Catholic School. Picture frames and mats made to order. Pictures copied and enlarged to any size and finished in all styles. Negatives preserved for future orders." was printed on the backs of such cabinet mounts. The same words were printed on J. T. Wixson & Son cabinet mounts. Joseph managed the Escanaba gallery of J. T. Wixson & Son, while his son Chester managed the Gladstone gallery. They also had real estate interests. "Wixson, Escanaba and Gladstone, Mich." was printed on later cabinet mounts. Albert E. Ford succeeded Joseph at Escanaba, and within a year was succeeded in turn by Frederick A. Kleist as proprietor of the Wixson Studio. Joseph died at Rhineland, Wisconsin, on December 8, 1907. Julia died at Valley Springs, California, on January 2, 1922. Sarah was described as the widow of Joseph T. Wixson in Detroit, Michigan, city directories of the 1880s and 1890s, and in a 1914 directory of Saint Paul, Minnesota, where she was living with her son Albion. She died in the Saint Louis, Missouri, home of her son William on July 24, 1935.

Thad was born at Zajaczki in the Polish region of Russia on October 23, 1886, and was a single alien with no dependents when he registered for the draft in June of 1917. He was slender and of medium height with blue eyes and blonde hair, and expected that heart trouble would exempt him from military service. Thad's associates in the Wojnicki Brothers photography business were Casimer and Stanley Wojnicki. Thad's partner in the Golden Set Studio was John A. Pyskaty, and in 1940 Thad was living alone in the flat above John's family. When he died in Detroit on March 27, 1958, Thaddeus was 71 years of age.

Charles was born at Athens in Bradford County, Pennsylvania, on August 2, 1856, eldest of the six children of George B. and Josephine (Somers) Wolcott. His father also was born at Athens and his mother was a native of Tompkins County, New York. He attended the local schools and at fourteen entered the Jordan Academy in New York. The following year he transferred to the Watkins Academy at Watkins, New York, from which he graduated. During his studies at Watkins he stayed with an uncle who was a photographer, and spent enough time with him to acquire the rudiments of the art. Charles then added to his knowledge by working for the photographer George F. Gates at Syracuse, New York. He then taught school in Tioga County for three years before he opened a photograph gallery at Seneca Falls, New York. Carrie L. Derby was born at Auburn, New York, on August 7, 1861, the daughter of Cyrus W. and Sarah (West) Derby. She married Charles on May 20, 1885, and their sons were born in Michigan: Carl in November of 1887, and Harold in August of 1889. Charles opened the branch gallery at Bronson in February of 1886 and the branch at Quincy in June of 1888. He specialized in copying and enlarging in 1884, and produced stereo views of Coldwater. His Coldwater cabinet photographs included outdoor scenes and one of a young man leaning on his standard bicycle and wearing tight pants, a vertically striped cap and a shirt with matching stripes covered with medals. Charles employed Ida Rupright in his Hillsdale gallery in 1894. "WOLCOTT & DEY" was printed above the "C. S. WOLCOTT, HILLSDALE, MICH." blind stamp on some photograph mounts. Mrs. Carrie Wolcott was a Hillsdale piano teacher in 1900, and she still was keeping house for Charles in 1920. Carrie was a widow by 1930, when she was living on the Tioga County, New York, farm of in-laws.

Fred was born to a mother from New York State in Berrien Township of Berrien County, Michigan, on January 11, 1879. He was last of the three sons of Samuel and Helen Alida (Clark) Wolcott, and he matured as a medium sized man with brown eyes who became somewhat bald. Lavina was born in Berrien Township to parents from Ohio on September 9, 1887, fourth of the seven children of William Henry Palmiter and Elizabeth Isabel (Burgoyne) Palmiter. She married Fred at Saint Joseph, Michigan, on March 14, 1906. Their sons were born in Berrien Township: Frederick on May 29, 1907, and Douane on April 8, 1911. Their daughter Myrna was born at Niles on May 20, 1916. "Photo by F. A. Wolcott, Tekonsha, Mich." was stamped on the post card backs of photographs, including one of cattle penned next to a Michigan Central railroad siding. This card was mailed in June of 1910 and signed "Fred." The photo studio in Tekonsha seems to have burned on December 19, 1912, along with a drug store and a millinery shop. Lavina was living in 1930 with her parents at Chico, California, along with her daughter Myrna, while Fred was working 200 miles south of her in rural Merced County accompanied by his son Douane. Lavina and Fred were back together again in 1935. Fred died at Watsonville, California, on January 4, 1959, and Lavina died there on July 26, 1976.

Fred was born in June of 1835 at Northampton, Massachusetts, second of the four sons of Sylvester and Permelia (Ewell) Wolcott. His family moved in 1838 to Portage County, Ohio, where his mother died about 1845. His father married a young woman named Sarah, and by 1850 Fred had a half-sister and a half-brother. He learned to be a carriage ironer and followed that trade in Ohio until about 1860. Elizabeth was born in Ohio in 1840 or early in 1841, and she married Fred about 1861. Their daughter Marion was born about 1865. Elizabeth still was keeping house for Fred in 1910.

His father came from Connecticut, his mother emigrated from England, and Henry was born at Steubenville, Ohio, on April 13, 1851, second of the five children of Henry Philip Wolcott and Susan (Allen) Wolcott. His sister Susan was born in July of 1848, and then two more sisters and a brother were born between May of 1854 and June of 1859. Mary F. Hoxworth was born to parents from Pennsylvania at Steubenville, Ohio, in September of 1849 along with her twin Lucy. They were last of the five children of Peter and Rachel (Jordan) Hoxworth, and their siblings were born between 1830 and 1840. Mary married Henry in 1872 at Steubenville, and their children were born in Ohio: Henry (later Harry) on August 4, 1873, and Lucy on November 10, 1875. The elder Henry and his mother had the same residential address at Saint Louis in 1876. Mary and her children were living in 1880 at Massillon, Ohio, where she was enumerated as widowed or divorced. Henry and George Hansen, another photographer enumerated as single, were residing at Petoskey in 1880 in the boarding house of William J. and Melinda H. Orser. 2

Udney was born in Vermont to a mother from New York in January of 1854, seventh of the eight children of Hiram Whitney Wolcott and Sarah Ann (Delaplain) Wolcott. Two of his brothers and his four sisters were born in Vermont between 1831 and 1851. His brother William was born in Wisconsin in 1858. Genevia Remington, who is profiled below, was born in Wisconsin in 1858. She married Udney in December of 1877, and their daughter Maud and their son William were born between 1883 and 1886. Wolcott & Hendricks took all photographs by the instantaneous process and made a specialty of baby pictures. On some mounts the name was misspelled: “Walcott & Hendricks.” A couple of years later in Negaunee, Udney guaranteed satisfaction and still specialized in baby pictures. The move from Sturgeon Bay to Jacksonville in the summer of 1889 was reportedly made by W. E. Wolcott. The reopening of Udney's Stephenson studio was reported in the spring of 1901. According to one source, Wolcott & Hendricks had a gallery about 1885 in Nashville, Michigan, but this seems very unlikely. 7 m

George was born in New York State in 1849 or 1850. “Broadwell” was crossed out of the “Broadwell & Wood, Lansing, Michigan.” printed on the mount of a stereo view of a residence. The partnership was dissolved by mutual consent on March 31, 1876, with financial responsibility taken by G. W. Wood at Hall’s Gallery. George advertised two months later: “G. W. By August of 1876 George had hired Henry G. Cassey from Detroit, reputedly the best retoucher in the state. J. S. Wood was a principal of G. W. Wood & Company, portrait and landscape photographers at the southeast corner of Washington and Michigan Avenues. They advertised in 1878: “... The best location, and one of the finest art gallery’s in the state, all kinds of photo work guaranteed. Copying and enlarging a specialty, oil, India ink, crayon and water color portraits,...” G. W. Wood & Company published stereoscopic bird’s-eye views of Lansing, including Gardner’s Flint City Band and others parading on Michigan Avenue. “G. W. WOOD & CO., Photographers and dealers in Chromos, Stereoscopes & Views, Albums, Frames, and all Picture Goods. Lansing, Mich.” was printed on the backs of some stereographs. They employed H. C. Rogers as a photo printer. George was single in 1880, when he and veteran photographer William McComb were rooming in the same large hotel. 1 L

Thomas was born in New York State in 1839 or 1840. He married Miss Emeline Daly who was born in Pennsylvania thirteen years later. Their first daughter was born in Pennsylvania about 1877, and their second was born in Ohio early in 1880. Patent Number 42,524 for a Photographic Camera was granted to Thomas on April 26, 1864. Thomas E. Wood worked at Ashtabula from 1881 until 1889 according to one source, so this entry may include two or more different people. Thomas had the year printed on most of his cabinet mounts from 134 South Burdick Street. Also printed on some from 1892 was: "T. E. WOOD, The Leading Photographer, Kalamazoo, Mich. - Fine Portraits Strictly Hand Painted in Pastel, Water Colors, Oil, Crayon and India Ink. The Finest Stock of Picture Frames of the Latest Patterns in Gold, Silver, Bronze and Wood, in the City. None but Strictly First-Class Work allowed to leave the Studio." Thomas applied for a patent on a Photographic Paper Holder and Cutter on July 9, 1891, which issued as Number 477,728 on June 28, 1892. He applied for a patent on a Rack for Displaying Photographs on March 17, 1893, which was granted as Number 506,893 on October 17, 1893. The rack mounted on the wall, and the seven double-sided frames of photographs turned like the pages of a book. On May 18, 1895, he applied for a patent on a very similar Combination Display-Cabinet, which was granted as Patent Number 569,367 on October 13, 1896, with one-half assigned to Charles D. Fuller of Kalamazoo. In 1897, Harry Beebe was proprietor of the Wood Studio at 134 South Burdick Street in Kalamazoo.

Harley was born in Michigan on November 20, 1874, and became a short man with blue eyes and light brown hair. 2 1
 Her parents came from New York, Blanche was born in Michigan in 1875, and she married Harley about 1898. In the 2 3 summer of 1902 a photographic journal devoted a full page to reproducing one of Harley's photographs. On another 3
 lighted, soft, round and harmonious; but what makes this print peculiar is, that it is traversed by fine dark lines 3 something like the fine lines on a half tone screen. I do not know how it is done, but it appears to me that the paper 3 must have been printed first under a lined screen and then under the portrait negative or vice-versa. But however it 3 may have been done, the result is very effective and pleasing." The Wonderly Building was at 21-27 Monroe Street 3 g through 1911, and the Wonderly Bank Building was at 146-156 Monroe Avenue after that. Harley offered "Portraits g by Photography" from 11 Ransom Avenue. He employed Mabel A. Woodard as a clerk in 1902 and 1903, and g William W. Lowe as a photographer in 1904. Harley and his wife maintained their Grand Rapids residence while he g 1 was working at Ionia in 1918. Blanche worked in his studio office in 1920 and as a photographic retoucher in 1930. 1 2

There seems to have been a vacant lot at 13 Perry Street in Detroit in 1891 and 1892. It was the address of lawyer d
John R. Considine in 1893 and 1894, of department store clerk Henry I. Johnson in 1895 and 1896, of photographer R. d
S. Copeland in 1897, and of barber John S. Hawley in 1898 and 1899. The residence of photo engraver Charles W. d Farmer was here from 1901 until he moved up the block to 88 Perry Street about 1908. Most of the work of this d t company seems to have consisted of cabinet photographs of children, individually or in pairs, some with their most t prized possessions, all well posed against interesting outdoor backgrounds. An exception was eleven women and t children of a Detroit family gathered in their side yard. Another was a Washington cabinet photo of a soldier with his t rifle posed against a plain canvas backdrop with two small American flags hanging behind his head. On the back of t this mount was printed: "S. W. View of Mount Vernon Mansion. Copyrighted by LUKE C. DILLON, Photographer to t

Alfred was born in Michigan to English parents in October of 1871. Elizabeth was born in Pennsylvania to English parents in September of 1868, and she married Alfred in 1888 or early in 1889. They had two children born in Michigan, a boy in August of 1889 and a girl in July of 1891. Alfred spent the first week in October of 1889 taking views of Isle Royale for use in advertising by the Isle Royale Land Company, and opened his cozy and attractive new gallery shortly after his return to Houghton. "A. L. Wortley, PHOTOGRAPHER, Houghton, Mich. - Mining and General Views." was printed on the back of 8 by 10 inch mounts of photographs such as a view across the turntable of six locomotives in the roundhouse doorways. Alfred advertised in 1895: "Portrait Work a Specialty. Mining and General Views." 5000 barrels of flour were shipped in 1900 from Indianapolis to a Hancock merchant in 20 railroad cars decorated with patriotic bunting and banners identifying the shippers, the brands of flour and the consignee. The cars were spotted on the side track on the Quincy sands near the county bridge to be photographed by Alfred. "Published by A. L. Wortley, Houghton, Mich., The Picture Shop." was printed on post cards along with an earlier picture of many people standing by the old school house at Eagle Harbor.

Percy was born in Canada on March 26, 1876, became a short man with blue eyes and dark hair, immigrated in 1895, and was naturalized a citizen of the United States in 1902. Minnie was born in Canada in 1885, crossed the border in 1901, and became an American citizen in 1906. Their children were born in Michigan, the girl in 1902 and the boy in 1906. Percy advertised early in 1906: "Solid Gold Baby Ring FREE with every dozen Photos from $1.00 upwards. BRING YOUR BABY , This offer is good at any time. We make High Grade Photo Pillow Tops from $1.00 up..." He made a specialty of photo enlarging, and was simultaneously operating both the Gratiot Avenue studio and the Washington Art Studio near the end of 1906. Again in 1913, the Washington Avenue and the Monroe Avenue studios were in operation simultaneously. In 1914 Wright & Company advertised: "Established 15 years. Largest and Best Equipped Studio West of New York. 76-82 Washington Blvd., Suite 312-314 Park Bldg." Percy was the sole proprietor of Wright & Company through 1916. When he moved to Woodward Avenue in 1917, Carey B. Robinson continued Wright & Company for a year in the same suite of the Park Building. "PERCY WRIGHT, 363 WOODWARD AVE." was blind embossed into studio portraits on post card stock. "BARBEAU PHOTO CO., OSWEGO, N. Y." was printed on the post card back of a portrait of a child actress which copied the blind embossed "PERCIVAL G. WRIGHT, DETROIT." Percy's studio remained in the same location during 1920, while its address changed along with most others in Detroit. At this time he was advertising Photographs of Distinction. 2 3

| Sheldon was born in New York State to Chester and Sarah Wright on October 13, 1830. He ran this advertisement locally for a year and a half: "NEW YORK PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY ... his rooms (which have been so long closed from the effects of the fire) are now completed, enlarged and put in the best order for the prosecution of business, and he will be ready to receive customers and visitors on Monday, September 3d.... the best side and sky-light the State affords ... only one flight of stairs need be climbed ... all work guaranteed to please. S. C. WRIGHT, Battle Creek, August 30, 1866." He also advertised "LIFE SIZED PICTURES.... all kinds of solar work with his new improved instrument, acknowledged to be one of the best cameras in the world. Pictures enlarged to cabinet or life size, finished plain, colored in oil, or worked up in India ink. Charges reasonable...." Some of his card photographs were of outdoor scenes. Sheldon died from nervous debility at Battle Creek on December 29, 1875. In March of 1876, Edward H. Perry opened for business "... In the gallery formerly occupied by the late S. C. Wright, over No. 5 East Main Street..." On February 12, 1877, it was announced that "John F. Miller has bought Wright's New York Photograph Gallery, taking possession today." Mrs. Mary J. Wright, Sheldon's widow, was living at Battle Creek in 1883. Another Sheldon C. Wright, an artist born in New York three years later than the photographer, died at Battle Creek on December 27, 1876. |           |     |

Leigh was born on January 9, 1886, at Lodi, New York, third of the five children of Vernon and Emma (Dripps) Wyckoff. He attended the Lodi public schools and the Rochester, New York, Business University before pursuing an eighteen months course at the Illinois College of Photography. When he had completed these studies Leigh came to Detroit in 1913. He was tall with grey eyes and light brown hair when he and Miss Elizabeth Jennings of Detroit were married on October 10, 1914. Spencer & Wyckoff occupied the same building from 1916 through 1948, for the Smith Building was renamed the American State Bank Building, which later became the Capital Park Building. It was on the southwest corner of Griswold and State Streets, and was at 1145 Griswold Street after most Detroit addresses were changed in 1920. Spencer & Wyckoff advertised in 1917 as "Commercial Photographers, Quick Service for Banquets, Interiors, Parties, also Panoramic Views. We use Panchroma Lights, the Old Style Flash Lights Eliminated...." Leigh became a charter member of the Commercial Photographers Association of Detroit on February 11, 1921. From 1925 through 1931 Spencer & Wyckoff offered: "We Photograph Everything Any Time, Any Place." At various times in the 1930s and early 1940s their room or suite number was listed as 720, 709, 709-20 and 708. Leigh was president and treasurer of the company from 1929 until 1934, and was president from 1935 until the company reverted to a partnership about 1940. Spencer & Wyckoff produced post card photographs of the National High School Orchestra Camp at Interlochen in 1930, and 3 ½ by 10 ¾ panoramas of the Michigan National Guard at Camp Grayling in 1934. They made postal photos of many Civilian Conservation Corps camps in 1933 while the boys were still sleeping in tents, continued with double width post card panoramas of camps from the northern lower peninsula to the western upper peninsula, and in 1939 were still making 12 by 20 inch and larger composite photographs of CCC camps and personnel. They also photographed CCC camps in Indiana. Many examples of their work have been preserved in the CCC Museum at North Higgins Lake State Park south of Grayling. Leigh was at one time president of the Commercial Photographers Bureau. His wife was identified as Elizabeth in 1918, as Bessie in 1922, as Olive H. in 1930, and as Lucinda H. in 1953 and 1954. He had spent 38 of his 68 years in Detroit by the time he died at Grace Hospital on April 5, 1954, survived by his wife, a daughter and two sons.

F. Ryder at Elyria, Ohio. He spent several years at Columbus and Cleveland and a season in New York and Pittsburgh before coming to Grand Rapids in 1859. Edward’s splendid photographic rooms on the north side of Monroe Street were described as the most extensive and convenient of any in the state, and in 1860 he advertised “... Ambrotypes and Photographs, colored and plain, executed in a style unsurpassed in the Union.” Edward died suddenly on the morning of April 9, 1863, from erysipelas (St. Anthony’s fire), brought on or incited by vaccination, leaving his wife with two children. Apparently he had moved the gallery across the street some time before his death, for his widow conducted the business on the south side of Monroe Street for a while before she was succeeded by Edward’s brother, Warren
Wykes. 2

George was the son of Warren and Martha Wykes, and was born in Grand Rapids in January of 1867. It was reported late in 1891 that “George H. Wykes, of Grand Rapids, Michigan, has sold out, and retires from photography as a profession.” This was probably a garbled reference to Warren Wykes. George advertised nationally early in 1895: “WANTED - Situation by an experienced operator in a first-class gallery. Address Geo. H. Wykes, Lock Box 31, Grand Rapids, Mich.” He employed Miss Ella Cram as a retoucher in 1896. “Wykes Gallery, GEO. H. WYKES Prop., 35 Monroe St., Grand Rapids, Mich.” was stamped on the back of some cabinet mounts. George boarded with Warren Wykes through 1891, and then Warren boarded with George from 1902 until 1905. Her parents emigrated from the Netherlands, Nellie or Nettie was born in Michigan in January of 1869, and she married George in 1896 or early in 1897. It seems that they never had children.

Warren was born in January of 1826, and probably immigrated to Ohio with his parents from North Hamptonshire, England. His sister-in-law became a widow with two young children when photographer Edward S. Wykes died in April of 1863, and she operated the gallery in her own name for a while before she was succeeded by Warren on the south side of Monroe Street. One source identified the photography business as Wykes & Company in 1864 and 1865. Every carte de visite from W. Wykes & Company which I have seen has carried a two or three cent revenue stamp. The address was sometimes 46 or 48 in directory listings or advertisements, but the gallery seems to have stayed on the south side at 45 Monroe Street until 1870. Some imprints placed this location over C. S. Shepard's Drug Store or in Shepherd's Block on Monroe Street. In 1865 Warren offered "... All the Latest Styles of the Art executed in a workmanlike manner, WITH DESPATCH. Special attention given to COPYING PICTURES...." In 1867 and 1868 his gallery was "... The best place in Town to get Photographs and all kinds of Sun Pictures.... Pictures Colored in Ink, Oil and Water Colors." He was on the first list of members of the National Photographic Association, published in July of 1869, and included the NPA monogram on some of his mounts from 45 Monroe Street and on many from 19 Monroe Street, which was opposite the Rathbun House. The cards and cabinets Warren sent to The Philadelphia Photographer in 1871 showed him "... to be an excellent photographer and a very tasteful poser. The printing is also admirably done." Number 19, which had occasionally been referred to as 21 or 23, became Number 35 Monroe Street about 1874 when many Grand Rapids addresses were changed, but old number 19 was used in Warren's advertising for several more years. He produced stereoscopic views of Grand Rapids. He made the Finest Finish a Specialty in 1880. By this time Warren and his 48-year-old wife, Martha, had two daughters and two sons born in Ohio between 1846 and 1863 plus a daughter and a son born in Michigan between 1864 and 1867, and they seem to have lost a son born in November of 1869. Warren exhibited portraits of various sizes at the annual convention of the Photographers' Association of America at Milwaukee in August of 1883, which were reported by a national publication to be of excellent quality. His exhibit at the Cincinnati PA of A convention in 1884 was mostly portraits, but included a few large pictures which were found deserving of special mention. In the spring of 1885 a national periodical devoted a full page to his portrait of a young lady in a cartwheel hat. From 1888 through 1891, Warren advertised: "... The Finest Retouching and Finishing a Specialty.... ALL PICTURES Made Instantaneously. Telephone Connection." Warren employed some of his children: Lizzie as an artist in 1867 and again in 1886, both Lizzie and Carrie as photographers in 1880, and George as his clerk in 1889 and as his photographer in 1890 and 1891. Some of his other employees were photographer Frederick G. Heath in 1873, photographer Charles J. Flandres in 1875, photo printer Miss Mattie Brewer in 1883, photographer Robert M. Wilson from 1883 through 1886 and in 1889 and 1890, Miss Rena A. Ema as photo printer in 1886 and as artist from 1889 until 1891, and artist Miss Nettie Scrouder from 1889 to 1891. Warren was succeeded by James M. LeClear about 1892. In the spring of 1895 he was traveling in the west with his camera, and mounted sepia prints of his pictures of the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone, Salt Lake City, Sacramento, San Francisco and Pasadena on Wykes cabinet mounts from 35 Monroe Street. By the summer of 1900 he was a widower, and he spent some time on the farm of his cousin in Tallmadge Township of Ottawa County. Warren was 86 years of age when he died on February 3, 1913, at the Grand Rapids home of his daughter, Mrs. Willam H. Stuart.

| Charles was born in New Jersey and moved to Detroit in 1880. William B. Bierce was his associate in C. G. Wynn & Company, offering "Photography in all its branches" or "Cabinet, Landscape and Commercial Photography" and "Portraits in Crayon, Water Color, or Pastelle." Some of their employees were: Frederick Figge, photo printer in 1888; Miss Kathleen S. Turner, clerk in 1888 and 1889; William P. Burridge, photographer in 1888 and photo printer in 1889; Henry S. Hayward, retoucher in 1889; and Judson S. Tunison, retoucher in 1889. The company had an exhibit in the main building of the Detroit International Fair and Exposition during September of 1889, with photographs of the exhibition buildings and grounds and views of Detroit for sale. Charles was awarded a medal by the Exposition for photographs he exhibited there. In 1890, He retained Kathleen Turner as his clerk and William Burridge as a photo printer and hired David Finklestein as a photo printer. Charles relinquished the gallery at 242 Woodward Avenue to the Hill Brothers in 1891, and succeeded Randall & Earle at 106 Miami Avenue. There he employed Dudley A. Kepperling as a photographer and Miss Grace H. Morris as a clerk. Wynn & Burridge succeeded the Hill Brothers at 242 Woodward Avenue during the summer of 1892, and Corydon C. Randall moved into the Miami Avenue gallery. Former employee William P. Burridge was Charles' partner, and they employed Minnie Higman as a clerk and Harry Mohlman as an assistant photo printer in 1893, and Wallace E. Janrow as a photo printer in 1893 and 1894. Their studio occupied two floors, and they did "... portraiture, marine, landscape and street views, the interiors and exterior of buildings, etc. Portraits are enlarged to life size or reduced to miniature, old portraits are renovated, and pictures are furnished in pastel, crayon, India ink or water colors, all at lowest prices...." They advertised: "First-Class Work in all Branches.... Club Groups a Specialty." Charles' purchase of the Hamilton Street studio on Saginaw's west side from Alexander E. meanwhile learning the photographic business. He and Miss Nora R. Hatch of Algonac were married on October 5, 2
1864, and later had thirteen children, all of whom lived to maturity. Newport was renamed Marine City in 1865. Alex 2 3 spent a year in China Township between his venture at Cliff Mine and locating at Au Sable. The sign over the doorway 2 t of his log gallery at Au Sable read: "A. T. Young, PHOTOGRAPH and AMBROTYPE." He erected the first mill at t 2
Au Sable and Oscoda, was school inspector and justice of the peace there for ten years, and was treasurer of Iosco 2
County for two years. Upon his return to East China Township of St. Clair County he became a justice of the peace, a 2 position he held 35 years later, and served in a number of local offices. He became a successful agriculturalist, 2 prominent in his community. 2

Andrew was born on August 31, 1874, at Erin near Toronto, Ontario, and worked as a telegraph operator for the Canadian Pacific Railroad, as a cashier for a Winnepeg express company and in the gold mines of the Black Hills prior to studying photography with some of the best studio operators in eastern Canada. He purchased the Sault Ste. Marie gallery of Allan Fanjoy, and photographed logging camps in 1898. Miss Sophrona Kirvan was born in Canada in 1876 or early in 1877, and she married Andrew at Rochester, New York, on March 6, 1901. They had a son born in Michigan about a year later, but apparently he did not live to maturity. Andrew advertised from his 1901 Riverside Marine Studio: "MARINE PHOTOGRAPHER. Views of all Boats - Passenger and Freight on the Upper Lakes. Highest Awards Photographers' Ass'n of America: '95, '97, '98, and '99. Mail Orders our Specialty...." Twelve by fourteen inch mounts were blind stamped "A. E. Young, SOO, MICH." and some carried hand tinted 8 by 10 photographs of freighters. By 1903 Andrew was advertising "Up-To-Date Art Pictures, Picture Framing and Photographs. Young Leads the Bunch in Photos, Art Goods and Souvenir Views. Look Him Up. 2 Doors from Park Hotel." and had published a 50 cent album of 60 views called "Soos of To-Day." By 1905 this title had changed to "Two Soos" and he had put out another album: "Hiawatha and the Land of the Ojibway." In the meantime Andrew had built a business block on Ashmun Street into which he moved his portrait studio and art department. He affixed a multi colored palette shaped label to the back of some board mounted photographs with this white lettering: "A. E. YOUNG, Marine and Portrait PHOTOGRAPHER, Art Store and Studio, 544 Ashmun St. Marine Studio, 229 Portage Ave., W. SOO, MICH." A 3 ¼ by 4 ¼ inch folder of 24 half tones from "Photos by Young, Lord & Rhoades, Ltd., Exclusive Sales Agents, Soo, Mich." was copyrighted in 1905 and "Devised and Made by Tom Jones, Publisher of Scenic Souvenirs, Cincinnati, Ohio." Young, Lord & Rhoades conducted a Marine, Portrait & Art Studio and in 1908 issued a catalogue of their large stock of marine and other photographs which mentioned their large curio and art department. They published several series of colored post card views of the Soo that were printed in Germany. Andrew was an official U.S. Government Photographer. His wife was an accomplished painter and artist, and in 1920 she was identified as a helper in his photograph studio. He recorded the erection of facilities for the Michigan-Northern Power Company as well as the construction of the Poe, Davis and Fourth Locks. He produced many post card photographs of the town, the river and the locks in summer and in winter, including the broken lock gate in 1909, huge hail stones in August of 1910, the third and fourth locks under construction and in use, and soldiers on guard during World War I. Of course many of his post cards and larger photographs were of the freight and passenger boats which passed through the locks. Some were of Mackinac Island, and his later cards included photographs of the city and the locks taken from an airplane. A long article about Michigan in a 1928 National Geographic Magazine used three full-page views of Sault Ste. Marie by A. E. Young, including an aerial view of the locks. Andrew was a stout man with hazel eyes and dark brown hair, an ardent hunter and angler, and a talented painter and wood worker. He recovered satisfactorily from a heart attack in 1936, but died on May 16, 1942, following a stroke of apoplexy, survived by his wife, his sister and his brother. Interment was in Pine Grove Cemetery at Sault Ste. Marie.

Earl was born on March 31, 1889, at Mancelona, Michigan, and became a short stout man with brown eyes and hair. "A E YOUNG, Charlevoix" was scribed into the negative of a postal photograph of a snow covered business street. "STRAWBERRIES, Five to a Foot. Raised by Geo. Durance, Charlevoix, Mich. Photo. by E. A. Young" was scribed into a negative from which post card photographs were printed, some mailed in August of 1910. The insurance business was founded by Adolph F. Young about 1900, and was continued by Mrs. Myrtie C. Young as a real estate, loan and insurance firm from 1904 until 1921. Her business became Myrtie Young & Son about 1910, with Earl as a principal. Irene was born in Michigan in 1889, and she married Earl about 1915. Their son and two daughters were born between 1916 and 1923. Earl was alone in the real estate business from 1922 through 1931.

| Her parents came from Pennsylvania, and Adell was born in Wisconsin in 1860. Young & McKay occupied the same second floor studio on the northeast corner of State and Jefferson Streets throughout their Marshall career. Address changes were due to revisions in the system of assigning numbers and street names. Their gallery was closed for two weeks late in August of 1902, and it was slightly damaged by smoke from a clothing store fire in February of 1908. The Gamma Delta Tau sorority was photographed at the studio for a large picture in June of 1909. They advertised in 1912: "It is a pleasure--- to have your Photograph taken in our Studio. IT DOESN'T HURT AT ALL! YOUNG &amp; MCKAY. " They closed the gallery on Saturday, June 26, 1915, and went to Gull Lake for a ten day outing. | Harry was born in Michigan to George H. and Carrie F. Young on October 29, 1883. During an illness which kept him in bed for most of nine years Harry somehow learned the easier photographic processes and began developing and printing for his friends. He was 25 years old when he finally recovered his health in 1908 and went into photography seriously. He worked for other photographers for seven years, and then opened his own studio in Kalamazoo. He was medium sized with blue eyes and dark brown hair in 1918, and was living with his parents in Kalamazoo. A course of private studies in art helped some, but Harry attributed his success to hard work and to his ambition to be a really good photographer. The photographs which he exhibited at photographers' conventions held in Buffalo, Kansas City, Cleveland and other cities received honorable mention. Harry retired in April of 1925, when the experienced photographer C. W. Lininger came from Dayton, Ohio, to purchase the studio at 113 South Burdick Street. In 1927 Harry was vice president of the Michigan Photographers' Society. Charles W. Howard was the proprietor of the H. A. Young Studio at 127 South Burdick Street for a while in 1926, and C. W. Lininger was proprietor of this studio in 1929 and 1930. Harry was still single and living with his parents in 1930. | 2 13331 444 33 44 33 KK mK 2 |     |

| His parents emigrated from England and John was born in Ontario in July of 1864, last of the nine known children of Richard and Martha Young. He grew up on the family farm in Colborne Township of Huron County, Ontario, and he immigrated to Michigan in 1886. Isaac Ver Lee had been a professional photographer for a couple of years prior to taking on John as a partner, and Azariah M. Burgess had been in the business for more than a decade. Mellie J. Rose was born in Wisconsin to parents from New York in June of 1871, the daughter of Martin W. and Julia A. (Pierce) Rose. She married John about 1889, and eleven years later they had no children. John employed Mellie's brother Frederick M. Rose as a photographer in 1892 and 1893. On some of his cabinet mounts, "114 Canal Street" was crossed out and "84 Monroe & 39 N. Ionia Sts." was added. In the early 1890s John advertised: "YOUNG'S ART GALLERY, 84 Monroe and 39 North Ionia Streets (Only One Flight of Stairs) Grand Rapids, Mich., Is the place for Artistic Photographs, Fine Crayon, Pastel and Oil Portraits. Robert was born in 1831 or 1832 in Canada, Rosa was born about the same time in Michigan, and their daughter was born in 1858 or 1859 in Michigan. Robert interspersed the lines of this advertisement between stanzas of a poem about an Indian matriarch called "Old Mother Rodd": "... If you want your Picture taken, ... Go to R. P. YOUNG'S ... PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY, ... No. 3 Quay Street, ... Over Comstock's Store, ... On the North Side of the Bridge, ... Pictures Taken in all kinds of Weather. ... Pictures Copied and Enlarged." He produced an exquisite carte de visite of a fully rigged model of a schooner. "... Copies of this Picture can be had at any time. Card Pictures made from old Daguerreotypes or Ambrotypes, in plain or vignette style, or enlarged to 8x10 inches. Pictures taken in all kinds of weather and put up in the neatest style. Frames kept on hand for sale, and made to order." was printed on some of his other cartes, and "Negatives Preserved six months...." was printed on still others.

William was 40 years old when he enlisted at Ann Arbor in Company D of the Fourth Michigan Volunteer Infantry on September 12, 1862. The regiment had severe losses at Fredericksburg, Virginia, on December 13 and 14, 1862, and lost heavily in killed and wounded on May 4, 1863, at Chancellorsville, Virginia. The Fourth fought at Gettysburg on July 2 and 3, then followed the enemy actively marching or fighting until going into camp in October of 1863 at Warrenton Junction. Their first battle in 1864 was at the Wilderness in Virginia on May 5, 6 and 7. After numerous engagements along the North Anna and Pamunky Rivers, the regiment was before Petersburg on June 16. The three-year enlistment of the veterans of the Fourth expired, and they returned to Michigan on veteran leave or to be mustered out. William was ordered to detached service with Company E of the First Michigan Infantry on July 2, 1864. The First was continuously employed either in erecting fortifications or fighting in the vicinity of Petersburg until February 5, 1865, when the campaign began around Richmond. The regiment marched and fought until the surrender at Appomatox Court House on April 9, 1865. William was discharged on July 8, 1865. Both William and William J. Young were listed as Plymouth photographers in the gazetteer for 1877. No Veterans Pension Record was found for William.

Felix was born in the United States on July 23, 1880, and became a medium sized man with brown eyes and hair. From 1652 Michigan Avenue he produced photographs on 11 ¾ by 13 ¾ inch mounts of weddings and of large groups of parochial students with the priests and nuns who taught them, as well as views of residences on 9 by 10 inch mounts. "Klischee przechowuja sia kilka lat do dalszych zamowien i powiekzen. F. Zjawinski, fotograf polski, 1652 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Mich." was stamped on the post card backs of studio portraits. The brothers advertised in 1917: "PHOTOGRAPHERS, Wedding Photos a Specialty, Private Dressing Rooms in Connection, Sittings made at Night. Appointments by Phone Appreciated. 1652 Michigan Ave. near Wesson Ave." On the post card backs of other portraits was printed: "ZIAWINSKI BROTHERS, PHOTOGRAPHERS, 1652 MICHIGAN AVE. Near Wesson Ave., DETROIT, MICHIGAN." Felix did not relocate his Martin Avenue studio during 1920, but its address changed along with most others in Detroit. Mrs. Rose H. Ziawinski was married to him some time before 1918, and was widowed when Felix died in Detroit on May 19, 1923, at the age of 42.

Joseph was born on December 12, 1887, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and grew into an average sized man with brown eyes and dark hair. He was single in 1918. His studio remained in the same location during 1920 while its address changed due to revisions in the numbering system. "Pamiatka Mieyi sw., Parafii sw. Jadwigi, dnia 3 do 18 Grudnia, 1921." was printed beneath a photograph of eight priests on a 12 by 14 inch mount imprinted: "Ziawinski Bros., 1652 Michigan Ave., Detroit, Mich." Joseph produced studio portraits in the post card format from 5848 Michigan Avenue. He advertised in 1922: "PHOTOGRAPHER, We make sittings at night by appointment. In and out door photography in all its branches. Photo Enlarging. Copying Portraits in crayon, pastel, sepia and water colors. Wedding, family, society and club groups a specialty. 5848 Michigan Avenue near Wesson." A small sign reading "1923" was included in a parochial graduation group photograph, but Joseph was still using 12 by 14 inch mounts with the Ziawinski Brothers imprint.

William graduated from the Medical Department of the University of Michigan in 1878. He was one of the nine amateur photographers from several different states who in April of 1892 became charter members of the Photo-American Exchange Club. Early in 1923 he was identified as an Album Director for the International Photographic Association.

His father was born in Canada to German parents, and his mother was born in Michigan to parents from New York. 1
Frederick was born at Galesburg in February of 1892, and was eldest of the four sons of August K. and Elida S. 5 1
(Towsley) Zinn. He attended the public schools of Battle Creek, and was awarded a Civil Engineering degree by the 5 2
University of Michigan in 1914. Later in that year he enlisted in the French Foreign Legion. Early in 1916 he 2 3 transferred to the Lafayette Flying Corps, where he became the first aerial combat photographer. He was the first 3
American requested for transfer to the United States Air Service, and served there as a Captain on the staff of General 3
Billy Mitchell until 1920. Mrs. Ruth F. Zinn, born in 1894, was identified as his wife in 1920 and in later years. On his 1 4 return to Battle Creek, Fred entered the family milling business as general manager of the grain elevator and 5 1 bookkeeper. By 1931 he was vice president of August K. Zinn & Company, and by 1939 was vice president and 5 4 treasurer. He was still a principal of the firm in 1954. Fred was elected as a Republican to the Michigan State House of 5 6
Representatives, serving from the Second District of Calhoun County in 1955 and 1956. 6

I. Frequently used sources

A vast majority of the information collected in the directory has been compiled from primary sources contemporary with the photographers, including directories, newspapers, and photo mounts. The discovery and reconciliation of errors reflects several aspects of working from primary sources. Spelling errors in nineteenth century directories are not uncommon. The name spelling used here is from the most authoritative primary source, or that which appeared most often or last. The information on photo mounts or in advertisements ordered by the photographers themselves was probably more accurate than contemporary directory listings. The photographer in question may have worked in a location for several years before being discovered by a directory compiler, or may have been listed for a year or so after he moved or died. Daguerreotypists and photographers often relocated frequently enough that a city directory compiler would fail to notice them. Those with multiple occupations may have emphasized one to the exclusion of others. Occasional errors have been ignored here, but the variants which persisted over several years have been noted.

Other variants within sources are reflected in this directory. One who was making ambrotypes or paper photographs may have called themselves a daguerreotypist or artist. The members of a partnership have been assumed to be photographers who worked in the same town before or after, if no better information was available. However, you can be sure that the photographer was working in the indicated place at about the date indicated.

II. Glossary of photographic terms

ALBERTYPE (also known as ARTOTYPE)

A collographic photomechanical printing process based on the photosensitivity of bichromated gelatin. Patented in the United States by J. Albert in 1869. See COLOGRAPH.

ALBUMEN (also spelled ALBUMIN)

An egg white based emulsion or binder. Albumen and a salt such as ammonium chloride were used as a coating that was then treated with silver nitrate to prepare photosensitive surfaces. Used on early glass plate negatives until replaced by collodion. First appearance about 1850. In widespread use to prepare printing-out papers from about 1859 to 1895. A vast majority of the paper prints of the nineteenth century are on albumen paper.

AMBROTYPE

A white collodion emulsion on glass, producing a positive image, backed with black fabric, paper or paint. Patented in 1854 in the United States by James Ambrose Cutting. Known as a "daguerreotype on glass", as ambrotypes are cased and matted in the same way as daguerreotypes.

APERTURE

The opening in a camera that admits the image producing light.

BACK STAMP

An identifying name or design printed on the back of carte de visite, cabinet, and other card mounted photographs. Printed by a hand stamp, or more often, press printed in mass quantities.

BLIND STAMP

An identifying name or design pressed into the surface of a photographic print or mount without using ink or color.

BOUDOIR PHOTOGRAPH

A card mounted paper print measuring 5 1/2 x 8 1/2 inches.

CABINET PHOTOGRAPH

A card mounted paper print measuring 6 1/4 by 4 1/4 inches.

CALOTYPE (also called TALBOTYPE)

The process invented in England by William Henry Fox Talbot incorporating both a paper negative and a paper print. The first successful negative/positive process, emerging simultaneously with the daguerreotype. Patented by Talbot in 1841, with restrictive licensing worldwide. In the United States, rarely used outside the major urban areas of eastern seaboard.

CAMERA

A light-proof box or room with a lens or aperture for emitting a controlled light to produce an image. Contains a plate or film holder for photography. The basic instrument for taking photographs.

CAMERA LENS

Ground glass lens for the gathering and focusing of light to be received as an image by the plate, film or paper negative in a camera. Often made up of several round lenses in alignment within a tube.

CARD PHOTOGRAPH

Paper photographic print mounted on card stock, about 4 x 2 1/2 inches. The term was applied by nineteenth century photographers and photographic suppliers to cartes de visite of the 1860s and to photographs of the same size in the 1870s and 1880s when the card stock became thicker and the printed backstamps more elaborate, and many of the corners were rounded. Used by modern writers and collectors as a broader term to describe most nineteenth century mounted photographic prints including stereographs, cabinet, boudoir, and promenade photographs.

CARTE DE VISITE

A card mounted paper print, about 4 x 2 1/2 inches. Originating from the photographically illustrated calling card patented in France by Andre Adolphe Eugene Disderi in 1854, and introduced to America late in 1859. Often featuring a printed label for identifying the photographer. Cartes de visite became a popular phenomenon as a portrait format and a collectable in the 1860s. The term is often used by modern collectors and dealers to describe any mounted photograph of this size.

CASED IMAGE

A photograph contained in a leather and wood or thermoplastic case, usually with a brass mat and a glass front with a hinged cover. Cased images are often daguerreotypes, ambrotypes, or tintypes.

CIRKUT CAMERA / PHOTOGRAPH

COLLOGRAPH

A photomechanical printing process producing a relief print from a glass plate treated with bichromated gelatin. Variations known as Albertype, artotype, heliotype, Woodburytype, and many others were in use for printed book illustration from about 1866 to 1900.

COLLODION

A photographic emulsion for glass plate preparation made up of guncotton dissolved in ether and alcohol. Plates are coated with collodion, then sensitized with silver nitrate to make a photosensitive plate. First described by Frederick Scott Archer in 1851. Used for both wet and dry-plate processes, also ambrotypes, and tintypes.

CONTACT PRINT

A positive photographic print made by exposure while in direct contact with a negative. A majority of the paper prints done prior to 1900 are contact prints.

CYANOTYPE

A paper contact print prepared with iron salts and potassium ferricyanide that produces a white on blue image. Economical and easy to make, cyanotypes were popular with amateurs and some professionals, used for proofing and final prints.

DAGUERRETYPE

The process invented by Louis Jacques Mandé Daguerre, based in part on the work of Joseph Nicéphore Niepce. Considered to be the first practical photographic process and the first publicly announced and described in detail. A daguerreotype is a single unique image that is formed on a silver coated copper plate with iodine and mercury vapor.

DEVELOPMENT

The process by which film, a plate, or photographic paper is chemically treated to produce a visible and relatively permanent image from the latent image created by exposure to light. Both a camera negative and a positive print may be developed.

DEVELOPING-OUT PAPER

A photosensitive paper used for making prints from negatives. After exposure, the image remains invisible until chemically developed.

DIGITAL IMAGE

An image formed by an electronic photosensitive receptor in a camera or scanner. Recorded as digital information in a microprocessor computer, to be displayed on a video monitor or printed on paper.

DRY PLATE

A glass plate negative prepared for use dry, differing from the wet-plate process. Dry plates can be either collodion or gelatin-silver emulsion.

EMULSION

A photosensitive coating applied to photographic film, paper, glass, wood or other material. Frequently a liquid containing silver halide crystals suspended in collodion or gelatin. Almost every photographic process except daguerreotype and digital use an emulsion of some sort.

ENLARGEMENT

A photographic print that is larger in size than the original negative or positive image from which it was made. Produced with an enlarger -- light projected through the negative and focused with a lens -- or with a large format camera creating a new larger negative.

EXPOSURE

The control of light onto a photosensitive material. Also, the amount of light allowed to reach the material, measured by time and area.

FERROTYPE

See TINTYPE.

FILM

A flexible celluloid, acetate or plastic support for photosensitive emulsion in a camera. Can be both a long roll or a single sheet of material.

GELATIN

A basis for emulsion derived from animal tissue.

GELATIN SILVER PRINT

A printing paper coated with gelatin emulsion.

GLASS PLATE

A flat sheet of glass, frequently coated with collodion or albumen emulsion. Inserted in a camera for creating negatives used for printing positive images.

HALFTONE

A process used by the printing industry for the reproduction of a continuous tone image as tiny printable dots of ink of varying size. The halftone image is created by photographing the original image through a transparent screen of dots in contact with the film.

HELIOTYPE

See COLLOGRAPH.

IMPERIAL PHOTOGRAPH

A photographic enlargement sized 14 x 17 inches or larger. Frequently a retouched paper print stretched on a wooden frame similar to an oil painting. Most often used as a formal portrait format. Introduced at Matthew Brady's New York gallery in 1856. Imperial later referred to a 7 x 10 inch card mounted photograph.

INSTANTANEOUS PHOTOGRAPHY

Used to describe a variety of processes with very short exposure times capable of freezing action. Often promoted in photographic advertising and used in scientific experimentation.

ITINERANT PHOTOGRAPHER

A traveling commercial photographer, operating out of a wagon, tent, railroad car, portable studio, or hotel room. Not an uncommon practice in the middle to late 19th century.

LITHOGRAPHY

A printing process invented by Alois Senefelder in Germany in 1798. The image is produced on a prepared stone or metal plate using water to repel oil based inks from the non-image areas. Photolithography uses a photographic negative as the image source.

MAGNESIUM FLASH

An early device for providing artificial illumination for indoor and night photography. A small tray of magnesium powder or wire would be ignited creating a temporary bright light.

MAMMOUTH PHOTOGRAPH

First used in the 1850s to describe life sized portrait enlargements, similar to Mathew Brady's Imperial photographs. Examples of up to 5 x 7 feet were created using enlarging cameras and projectors. Term later used for contact prints from large glass plates such as the 18 x 22 inch plates exposed by Carlton Watkins and the 20 x 24 plates by William H. Jackson.

MELAINOTYPE

See TINTYPE.

MONOCHROME

An image made up of varying tones of a single color. A black and white photograph is considered a monochrome image, even when sepia or gold toned.

NEGATIVE

A directly exposed photographic image on a transparent carrier of film, glass or paper with a tonal range in reverse of the visual appearance of nature whereby light areas appear dark and dark shadows appear white or transparent. Visually, the opposite of a positive. A negative is the source of printed positive photographic images.

PANORAMIC CAMERA / PHOTOGRAPH

A special camera designed to take in an unusually wide lateral field of view or photo taken with one. Often a field greater than 90 degrees. Frequently featuring a clockwork mechanism to swing the lens during exposure. Used for large group portraits and dramatic landscape views. See CIRKUT CAMERA / PHOTOGRAPH.

PASTER

A slip of paper with a gummed back used to secure tintype plates into paper mats, especially carte de visite size.

PHOTOCHROM or PHOTOCHROME

A unique photomechanical printing process that results in a colored lithographic print from a monochrome negative. Patented in Switzerland in 1890 by Orell Fussli and licensed to the Detroit Photographic Company in 1897.

PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING

The mass production of photographs, using photographic means as opposed to photomechanical methods or some other means of reproduction. Not practical prior to the invention of efficient negative-print processes such as the wet-plate.

PHOTOGRAPHY

The term "photography" is most often used to refer to any and all processes that use light to create permanent images. It has been used historically to refer specifically to the process of creating prints from negatives as invented by William Henry Fox Talbot. The term was first used by Sir John Herschel in 1839 in his report titled Note on the Art of Photography, or the application of the Chemical Rays of Light to the purposes of Pictorial Representation describing his invention for producing images.

PHOTOGRAVURE

A process used by the printing industry and art photographers for the reproduction of a continuous tone photographic image as tiny printable marks of ink of varying size and shape. A copper printing plate is prepared with fine resin dust and dichromate gelatin, then exposed in contact with a negative and etched in acid to burn the image into the plate. Results in a detailed permanent image of rich tones. The resin dust acts in a similar way to a very fine halftone screen of irregular pattern.

PHOTOMECHANICAL PRINTING

A general term for the various processes that incorporate both photographic and mechanical printing for reproducing photographs in ink on a printing press. Includes processes known as halftone, photogravure, Albortype, Woodburytype, photolithography and others.

PHOTOLITHOGRAPHY

A process using a photosensitive lithographic printing plate or stone to create a mechanically printed image. The plate is exposed in contact with a negative of the image to be printed. The image may be typographical, artistic, photographic, or a combination. In widespread commercial use for magazines, illustrated newspapers, and general printing from the late nineteenth century on.

PHOTOSENSITIVE

A substance that is physically or chemically altered by exposure to light is photosensitive.

PLATE

A photosensitive glass or metal sheet. The plate may be coated with a photosensitive emulsion like collodion or be sensitized using the daguerreotype process. An image is produced on the plate using a camera.

POSITIVE

A photographic image with a tonal range from black shadow to white sunlight that is consistent with the visual appearance of nature. Visually, the opposite of a negative. A photographic positive image may be an opaque print or a transparency.

POSTCARD PHOTOGRAPH (or REAL PHOTO POSTCARD)

A cardstock printing paper about 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 for the creation of postcards with a photographic image. First offered by Kodak in 1902. Many of the postcard printing papers could be printed using an artificial light source making them popular with both amateurs, local photographers, and commercial production plants. Not to be confused with printed postcards using halftone, Photochrom or other photomechanical processes. Postcards were often casually referred to as "postals."

PRINT

An image on printing paper, produced from exposure to a negative. A print is often the final product of the photographic process.

PRINTING-OUT PAPER

A photosensitive paper used for creating prints from negatives. The positive print image is formed by exposure to sunlight, without chemical development but is chemically fixed for permanence.

PROMENADE PHOTOGRAPH

A card mounted paper print measuring 7 1/2 x 4 inches. See CARD PHOTOGRAPH.

RESOLUTION

The fineness of detail determined by the grain or size and distribution of particles of photo sensitive material that makes up the image.

SALT PRINT

An early printing-out paper prepared with a salt solution and silver nitrate. Used to produce positive prints from calotype and glass plate negatives.

SENSITIZED

Negatives and printing papers that have been processed to become photosensitive are sensitized. The photosensitive substance is often a silver halide that turns dark when exposed to light.

SHUTTER

A mechanical device that precisely opens and closes the aperture of the camera, thus controlling the exposure time. On early shutterless cameras, the removal and replacement of the lens cap performed the same function.

STEREOGRAPH

A pair of photographs that can be optically combined to create the illusion of a three-dimensional view, usually taken with a two-lens camera. A special two-lens viewer is required to produce the effect. Stereo photographs have been created from virtually every photographic process but the term stereograph generally refers to the card mounted prints that were popular from 1857 into the twentieth century.

STEREOSCOPE

A two-lens viewer that magnifies and focuses the two images of a stereograph into a single image that appears to be three-dimensional.

TALBOTYPE

See CALOTYPE.

TINTYPE (also known as FERROTYPE and MELAINOTYPE)

A generic term to describe the positive image collodion process on black lacquered iron, similar to the ambrotype. Patented in the United States in 1856 by Hamilton L. Smith as the Ferrotype. Tintypes appear cased and matted in the same way as daguerreotypes or ambrotypes, also in inexpensive paper mats and carte de visite sized card mounts. Many are found unmounted.

TONING

A process for enhancing the tones of monochrome daguerreotypes or paper prints. Usually a chemical treatment applied after development and printing.

WET-PLATE PROCESS

A process using collodion emulsion on a glass plate that is sensitized and exposed while the plate is still wet from creation. In widespread use from 1860 to 1880.

WOODBURYTYPE

See COLLOGRAPH.
